William Gaylord, born in England about 1585, to Dorchester, Mass.
"His wife, whose name is unknown, died 20 June 1657."

Back side of page 62:

Hartford Times, 16 Feb 1952, Query B3668 -- Was she M'ry Walter?

1934 #8145 -- William's wife MARY died 20 June 1657

1939 #3747 -- No marriage for William and Mary Walter, but surnamme Walter is given on a pedigree by Ed. Gaillard Matthews.

"Another item in Hartford Times, 27 Dec 1947 stated:

"Col. John Richards quotes the Rev. Arthur Gaylord, who after 20 years of research is positive the William Gaylord who came to Dorchester in 1630 with wife and five children descends from Chevalier Olivier de Gaillard in Normandy. He was Chancellor of France in the reign of Charles the Simple. His second son Hughes founded a branch, and William is of this branch."

From back side of p. 1112.

David Munroe was born in Cambridge Farms, now Lexington, Mass. The Lexington records mention only his birth, but Connecticutt was then being settled by emigrants from the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay, and in 1705, he and his wife are found in Canterbury, when their first child was born. Canterbury had 10 families in 1703, when it was made a town. In 1714 Samuel Adams and Obadiah Johnson conveyed a farm of 136 acres to David Munroe.

His identity as David Munroe of Canterbury with the David Monroe , son of William of Lexington was questioned by one writer, but after much careful research by Rev. Mr. Northrup and Dr. Will S. Munroe author of Genealogy of Josiah Munroe"" it was proved (details given on page 5) "Howe Genealogies" state Samuel Howe joined the tide of emigration to Conn., where his daughter married David Munroe.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER, Vol. 100, p. 2-3

William Munore, Scotbhman, brought to America as a prisoner of War, reached Cambridge Farms, now Lexington, in 1652, and remained there until his death in 1717. Alexander Mackenzie's comprehensive "Hisotry of the Munro's" published in Inverness in 1898, says he is lineal descendant from Donald, founder of the clan Munro, who is said to have come, with his adherents from Ireland to Scotland, in the year 1025 to assist King Malcolm in his war with the Danes. Lineage traced in "The Munroe Genealogy" by John G. Locke; "The Munro Clan " by James Phinney Munroe. "The Genealogy of Hosiah Munro" by Rev. G.S. Northrup, and Hudson's"History of Lexington" (first)edition, from the above Donald Munro through eleven chiefs of the clan, ten of whom were Barons of Foulis, and five succeeding generations of Scottish ancestry down to his birth in Aldie Scotland, in 1625. His father, Robert Munro, was 3rd great grandson of Sir George Munro, tenth Baron of Foulis.

The Battle of Worcester was fought by the adherents of King Charles II, against the forces of Cromwell, in which the latter were victorious, in Sept, 1651. William, and three other Munroes, Robert, Hugh, and John, were shipped to America in the JOHN AND SARAH 1 Nov 1651. Upon arrival, bound out to a farmer to pay cost of passage.

(Hist. of Lexington, 1st ed., p. 147)" William Munroe, the ancestor of the Munroes of Lexington, born Scotland, 1625, came to America 1652 ... He settled at the Cambridge Farms about 1660 in the NE part of the town bordering on Woburn. Several of his sons lived with, or not far from him at first, and it was said by h s great-granddaughter, who died in 1853, aged 104 years, that the old house looked like a rope walk, so many additions had been made to it to accommodate his sons as they settled in life. By By adopting the custom of the Scottish clans, he, in a manner confined the Munroes together, and made them for some time as it were a distinct people. ... Though he came to this country under unfavorable circumstances, and set up for himself rather late in life, he appears to have been quite successful in his worldly affairs, and to have been blessed with a large, prosperous family ... He was made a freeman in 1690, and the subsequent tax bills from 1693-1698 show that in taxable property he was among the first half dozen men of the parish of the parish, thus showing conclusively he was a man of enterprise and force of character"

Caleb, son of Amariah Plumb and Sarah Aspinwall. born in Norfolk, and married probably in Norfolk, though the family say he was married in Balston Springs, N.Y. Removed to Ohio, and built a mill, and sometime before 1812, traded it for land on 30 mile Creek in Michigan, and built a mill there. The War coming on with England, his three oldest sons who had become of age enlisted with General Hull as scouts. They were absent when he surrendered, and so they did not go to the Fort but went home. Indians followed them, and they fled and reached Lake Erie, bought a boat and got to Cleveland. Their house and mill were burnt. Caleb never recovered his land in Michigan, though he tried after the war, but on his way back from Michogan he took sick and died at Upper Sandusky The names of this family depend on the memory of Caleb Jefferson Plumb who told them to his grandson, John H. Plumb about 1890, who wrote them down at that time. Caleb Jefferson was the youngest son of 13 children so that his father Caleb must have been married about 1784. Caleb Plumb served in the Revolutionary War as a servant. He was then 14 years old

There is a Caleb Plumb in Nat. Gen. Soc. Quarterly Magazine, vol. 32 p. 7:
Resident proprieters of the Western Reserve, 1804; Ohio Tax List, Caleb Plumb, 15 Acres, Range 2, Town 2. Contract

Savages Genealogical Dictionary: Edward Stebbins of Cambridge in 1623. Freeman 14 May 1634, moved to Hartford. Came from Braintree, E Eng. to Hartford Conn.

Edward Stebbing(Stebbins) may have been acquianted with Rev. Thomas Hooker(foundr of Hartford, Conn., in Essex, and may have been introduced to Puritanism Frances Tough, was a widow, and Thomas Hooker's sister-in-law. He may have intorduced them.

No. 3, Elizabeth md (2) abt 1658, Thomas Cadwell.(not favored by parents) They had 10 children, Mary 18 Jan 1857)?) ; Edward md Elizabeth; William d. young; Matthew md Abigail Beckley; Abigail md Hohn Church; Elizabeth md Jeremiah Davis; Samuel md Mary Clark; Hannah md Thomas Bliss; Mehitable md. Thomas Boardman.

A daughter, name unknown , Miss Stebbins #4(or she may have been one of those listed as a"child" who married John Chester in England, lived in or near London in 1670 (Ref: Winchell Genealogy; Hartford Times, 27 July 1940) Hartford Times. 28 July 1951 #B2969) "Savage does say Lydia was a daughter of Edward Stebbings, and wife of Feacon John Wilson, but in sketch of said John under WILSON(4585) He says John's wife was Lydia, daughter of John Cole(11428) This John was son of Robert Wilson, 1st husband of Elizabeth, dau of Edward Stebbins. This fictitious Lydia was therefore made to marry her own nephew. John Wilson and wife, Lydia Cole had among others a son named Stebbing, doubtless the source of Savage's error. Therefore Edward Stebbings had 3 daughters only, May who married William Gaylord, Elizabeth wife of Robert Wilson, and 2nd of Thomas Cadwell, and a daughter who married Mr John Chester in England??????????

From back side of P. 197:

Folder

Editor's Note

Folder 1.56s (after the first dozen pages) contains a pedigree for Merlin Plumb (b. 1826), created by DEW using information from Marion Plumb Thatcher and his wife, Edith C. Thatcher, as supplemented by Theda Plumb Adams (q.v.); the pedigree is continued on the first 42 pages of folder 1.56t. Information for the most recent generations substantially corresponds to the content of the LDS family group sheets in folders 1.56p-r and the first few pages of this folder. Merlin Plumb's pedigree (which, from Caleb Plumb in chart 1 onward, is also EPW's pedigree) is DEW's document number P101; see document calendar 104.

As you may already know, the entire Norton (and related lines) ancestry going back farther than the marriage of John Plumb (b. 1646) and Elizabeth Norton (b. ca. 1647) on November 24, 1668 (see chart 2 in this folder), was eventually rejected by DEW, because of his inability — despite careful and scholarly investigative work — to confirm the assumptions of the Thatchers and other genealogical researchers about the identity of Elizabeth's father. See the index entries for John and Elizabeth; see also DEW's September 14, 1989, letter to Theda (located after document P120[d] in folder 1.56i), which summarizes and brings to a close his diligent, but ultimately failed, effort to tie this John Norton of Branford and Farmington, Connecticut, to the Sharpenhoe, Bedfordshire, Nortons.

Given that single devastating fact, I was sorely tempted to stop indexing and digitizing the Norton-associated portions of DEW's handwritten Merlin Plumb pedigree beyond chart 2, where the Plumb-Norton marriage appears. The loss of my precious remaining time on this earth that would be required for such an effort (not to mention the sacrifice of innocent electrons!) — given its obvious irrelevancy for EPW's family history — was impossible for me to justify, especially since most the data came from readily available secondary sources anyway.

On the other hand, as I contemplated the many hours and weeks and months of effort that my beloved father spent charting the Plumb ancestry of my beloved mother to Pepin the Short and his "issue," Charlemagne, I simply couldn't justify tossing out the product of his work. After all. I am doing this not simply because I'm on "house arrest" in my Denver condo for the duration of the Covid-19 pandemic; I'm doing it because it's a labor of love.

So I decided on a compromise solution. I will continue to scan the entire Merlin Plumb pedigree, but without the associated indexing (which is by far the most time consuming part of the project). This collection of family history documents will end up with all of the charts, and all of DEW's additional work on the Nortons and related families, but everything for those particular lines beyond John Plumb (b. 1646) and Elizabeth Norton (b. ca. 1647) in chart 2 will be invalid for the Merlin Plumb and Elizabeth Helen Kendall Plumb Witheridge ancestries. The rest of the pedigree will be as valid as the Thatchers and the Rev. Mr. Witheridge were able to make it, using the best information they could lay their hands on at the time. And, of course, the Norton extension will be valid, or more likely to be valid, for researchers working on families with provable connections to the Sharpenhoe Nortons.

I think it's a pretty good compromise, don't you? If future researchers are able somehow to repair the broken Plumb-Norton connection (and, just maybe, an obviously disappointed DEW was hinting at that remote possibility in document Nt80, folder 1.53g), they will undoubtedly welcome DEW's conscientions work on the full pedigree. It's fine for what it is: my dad's best effort for somebody's Norton line — just not my mom's. Not bad for an Eagle Scout and lifelong near saint.

To the family historians of the future, I say go for it, and good luck! And to give you a head start, here's a list of the major secondary sources used by the Thatchers and Dad to (erroneously) extend the Plumb ancestry to the nobility and crowned heads of Europe:

- Joseph Thomas (b. 1811) Universal pronouncing dictionary of biography and mythology, aka Lippincott's pronouncing biographical dictionary, pub. 1915, available at Internet Archive.

I confess that a large number of innocent electrons have, in fact, been sacrificed to produce the many Norton and related family folders already completed (together with the corresponding index and table of contents entries). My only excuse, however lame, is that I'm a genealogical rookie, who started this project knowing virtually nothing about my dad's research methods. Even when I'm done, I won't be anywhere near as smart as he was, or as curious about the subject mattter. His files had been sitting in storage for a dozen years, in three different cities, and I naively assumed that starting with "A" (Allen) and proceding straight through to the end of the alphabet would be as good a plan of attack as any. Unfortunately, "N" (Norton) was more than halfway through the banker's boxes, and the damage was done before I learned the disastrous news about Elizabeth Norton's mysterious papa. My bad. I will go back and insert cautionary notes where possible and practical, and I'll also add warning labels to the Norton-related Merlin Plumb pedigree charts.

Now one final point before I end this long note: Despite DEW's precise penmanship, befitting a trained engineer who knew mechanical drawing and its legibility standards, his habitually faint pencil lines are hard enough to read in the originals, and even harder to read after scanning. You should be able to solve that problem by enlarging the view or, if necesssary, by going to the LDS family group sheets for more readable versions of most of the data. You can find the relevant sheet(s) for the person(s) you seek by using the inclusive page and surname ranges in the table of contents entries for folders 1.56p to 1.56s; the LDS group sheets are in approximate alphabetical order by surname.

And now, back to the scanner. Here in Denver things are looking brighter at last, what with two Covid-19 vaccines already in use and a real President about to be installed.

Happy Solstice!

Tom Witheridge

1.56t

Editor's Note

This folder begins with the final 45 pages of Merlin Plumb's (b. 1826) pedigree, continued from folder 1.56s. The last chart is number 98, which culminates with Charlemagne and other crowned heads. As I noted in the editor's note at the beginning of folder 1.56s, the information on the Norton and related lines prior to the marriage of John Plumb (b. 1646) and Elizabeth Norton (b. ca. 1647) were thoroughly discredited by Rev. Witheridge; see especially his letter of September 14, 1989, to Theda Plumb Adams (q.v.), which is located after document P120(d) in folder 1.56i.

The remainder of this folder contains 30 extra family record sheets related to the Merlin Plumb (b. 1826) pedigree, neatly handwritten in light pencil by DEW (his document P 102, document calendar 104). Unfortunately, his exact source for the information is not known to me, even after my careful reading of his correspondence with Theda. It is quite obvious, however, that the information on these handwritten sheets doesn't coincide with the data for the very same people in folders 1.56p-s, although there is a great deal of overlap. In general, these extra sheets are missing much of the detail contained in the previous folders, and there are certain factual discrepancies between the two versions. It's unclear why only 30 of the family record sheets were remade in this fashion by DEW (or posssibly made before he saw the previous family record sheets) — i.e., what his criteria were for selecting them and not others.

As I write this, there is a violent coup d'etat attempt in progress, instigated by soon-to-be-former President Trump and the other leaders of his treasonous white supremacist cult (aided and abetted by Republican elected officials) at the United States Capitol, just when President-elect Biden and Vice President-elect Harris are about to be declared the official winners of November's democratic (small "d") election in a pro forma, mostly ceremonial session of both houses of Congress. I'm glued to my television and will put this job aside for another day.

ROBERT, EARL OF GLOUCESTER (d. 1147), was a natural son of Henry I, king of England. A statement in one version of the 'Brut y Tywysogion' (a. 1110) that his mother was Nest [q. v.] is absent from the earlier text; and as Nest's own grandson, Giraldus Cambrensis, has left a minute account of her family (De Rebus, &c., l. i. c. 9; Itin. Kambr. l. ii. c. 7), which contains no mention of the Earl of Gloucester, it seems to be erroneous (cf. FREEMAN, Norman Conquest, v. 852, 853). The mention made by William of Malmesbury of Robert's ancestors, Norman, Flemish, and French (WILL. MALM. Gesta Reg. l. v. c. 446), may possibly allude to his mother, but more probably refers to Henry's grandmother, Adela of France. Robert was a native of Caen (ORD. VIT. 920 B). He was born before his father's accession to the throne (WILL. MALM. Hist. Nov. l. i. c. 452), and was the eldest of all Henry's sons (Cont. WILL. OF JUMIÈGES, l. viii. c. 39).

Henry laid the foundation of Robert's fortunes by bestowing on him the hand of Mabel (called Matilda by Orderic, and Sybil by the Cont. of Will. of Jumièges), daughter of Robert FitzHamon (d. 1107) [q. v.], and with it the whole heritage of her father and her uncle, comprising the honour of Torigny and other property in Normandy, the lordship of Glamorgan in Wales, and considerable estates in England. Chief among these was the honour of Gloucester, which Henry formed into an earldom for his son. The rhyming chronicler called Robert of Gloucester (fl. 1260–1300) [q. v.] dates both these transactions in 1109 (vv. 8910–13); but recent criticism has shown that Robert did not become an earl till some time between April 1121 and June 1123 (J. H. ROUND, 'The Creation of the Earldom of Gloucester,' Genealogist, new ser. iv. 129–40; and Geoffrey de Mandeville, pp. 420 et seq.) In 1119 he was present with his father at the battle of Brémule against Louis VI of France, and in 1123, when a revolt broke out among the Norman barons, he brought up a force to assist in the reduction of the rebel castle of Brionne. In 1126 he was charged with the custody of the captive duke, Robert of Normandy, whom he kept in ward for a while in his castle at Bristol, and afterwards transferred to another stronghold at Cardiff, the capital of his Welsh lordship. On 1 Jan. 1127 he was called upon by his father to join the other barons assembled at Westminster in doing homage to Henry's only surviving lawful child, the widowed Empress Matilda, as heiress of England and Normandy. On this occasion a dispute arose between Robert and the king's nephew, Stephen, count of Boulogne, as to which was entitled to precedence in taking the oath; it was decided in favour of Stephen. Some six months later Robert shared with Brian Fitz-Count the duty of escorting Matilda over sea for her marriage with Geoffrey of Anjou. He was by his father's deathbed at Lions-la-Forêt at the opening of December 1135.

Whether or not Henry really did, as was afterwards asserted, revoke at the last moment his nomination of Matilda as his heiress, the bulk of the nobles, both in England and Normandy, now treated the succession as an open question, and while Stephen hurried off to seize the English crown Robert himself is said to have been urged by his friends to put in a counter-claim. This, however, he prudently refused to do (Gesta Steph. p. 10). For the moment, however, the chances of the legitimate heir seemed no better than his own, and when the Norman barons invited Stephen's brother, Count Theobald of Blois, to take possession of Normandy, Robert so far concurred in their scheme as to join them in a conference with Theobald at Lisieux on 21 Dec. The tidings of Stephen's election as king in England caused them to abandon their project and accept the new king as their duke, and to this also Robert assented, giving up Falaise to Stephen's representatives as soon as he had safely removed the late king's treasures. It was, however, not till after Easter 1136 that, in answer to Stephen's repeated invitations, he at length crossed over to England, and did homage for his estates there; and even then he did it on the express condition that it should be binding only so long as Stephen's own promises to him were kept, and he himself was left in undisturbed possession of all his honours and dignities.

Next year (1137) Robert accompanied the king on a visit to Normandy; there they quarrelled, and in spite of a nominal reconciliation Stephen, early in 1138, declared Robert's English and Welsh estates forfeited, and razed some of his castles. Soon after Whitsuntide the earl sent to the king a formal renunciation of his allegiance, and to his under-tenants in England orders to prepare for war. This message proved the signal for a general rising of the barons, in which, however, Robert took no personal share, although the garrison of his chief fortress, Bristol, played a considerable part in it under the command of his eldest son. He was himself occupied in furthering the interests of his half-sister Matilda in Normandy, where he procured the surrender of Caen and Bayeux to her husband in June 1138. On 30 Sept. 1139 he landed at Arundel with 140 knights and the Empress Matilda herself. Leaving her in Arundel Castle he set off with only twelve followers, and rode hurriedly across southern England to Bristol, where the empress soon rejoined him. There he set up his headquarters as commander-in-chief of her forces in the civil war which followed, and as her chief assistant in the government of the western shires, which his influence and his valour quickly brought to acknowledge Matilda as their lady.

At the opening of 1141 he headed, in conjunction with his son-in-law, Earl Ranulf of Chester, the whole forces of her party in an expedition for the relief of Lincoln Castle, which Stephen was besieging, and he received the surrender of Stephen himself at the close of the battle which took place under the walls of Lincoln on Candlemas day. He afterwards accompanied the empress in her triumphal progress to Winchester and London, as also in her flight to Oxford when driven out of London. Later in the same year he was with her during the double siege at Winchester, when she besieged the bishop in his fortified house of Wolvesey, and was in her turn blockaded in the city by 'the king's queen with all her strength.' On 14 Sept. Robert succeeded in covering his half-sister's retreat from Winchester, and in cutting his own way out afterwards; but he was overtaken and made prisoner at Stockbridge. The queen sent him into honourable confinement in Rochester Castle till arrangements could be made for his release in exchange for Stephen, who was in prison at Bristol under the charge of Countess Mabel. A project for Stephen's restoration as titular king, with Robert as acting ruler of England under him, was foiled by the earl's refusal to join in any such compromise without his sister's consent; and a simple exchange of the captives, though long opposed by Robert on the ground that an earl was no equivalent for a king, was carried into effect at the beginning of November.

Shortly before midsummer in the next year, 1142, Robert was sent by the empress to Anjou to persuade her (second) husband (Geoffrey of Anjou) to come to her assistance in England. Finding, however, that Geoffrey would not stir till he had completed his conquest of Normandy, Robert was forced to join him in a campaign which lasted till the close of the autumn. Robert was apparently recalled by tidings that Stephen was blockading Matilda in Oxford Castle. He hurried back to England, taking with him his little nephew, the future King Henry II, and three or four hundred Norman men-at-arms. His force being too small to effect Matilda's relief directly, he sought to draw Stephen away from Oxford by laying siege to Wareham, a castle of his own which Stephen had seized during his absence. The king, however, did not move; Robert, after receiving the surrender of Wareham, took Portland and Lulworth, and then summoned all his sister's partisans to meet him at Cirencester. She had meanwhile made her escape, and before Christmas Robert was able to bring her child to meet her at Wallingford. All three seem to have shortly afterwards returned to Bristol, and to have remained chiefly there throughout the next four years. In July 1143 Robert won another great victory over Stephen near Wilton. In 1144 he again led all his forces in person against the king, who was endeavouring to raise the blockade which Robert had formed round Malmesbury; Stephen, however, retreated without giving battle.

Next year Robert planned an attack upon Oxford (which had surrendered to Stephen after Matilda's escape), and for that purpose raised a great fortification at Farringdon. This new fortress, however, soon fell into the hands of the king; and from that moment Robert struggled in vain against the rapid disintegration of the Angevin party. What remained of it seems to have been held together for two more years solely by his tact and his energy, for as soon as he was gone it fell utterly to pieces. In the spring of 1147 he escorted young Henry from Bristol to Wareham on his way back to Anjou; in the autumn he fell sick of a fever, and on 31 Oct. he died at Bristol. There, in the choir of the church of a Benedictine priory which he had founded in honour of St. James, outside the city wall, he was buried beneath a tomb of green jasper stone (Chron. Tewkesb., Monast. ii. 61), which in Leland's day had been replaced by 'a sepulchre of gray marble set up upon six pillers of a smaull hethe' (Itin. vii. 85, ed. 1744).

Robert appears to have been a happy compound of warrior, statesman, and scholar. His love of letters made him the chosen patron, and, as it seems, the familiar friend, of William of Malmesbury, who dedicated his 'Gesta Regum Anglorum' and 'Historia Novella' to him in terms of affectionate admiration; the 'Historia Novella,' indeed, was written at Robert's own special desire. For his capacity as a statesman it may be said that his sister's cause almost invariably prospered when she allowed him to direct her counsels, and declined as soon as she neglected his advice;

while to the character of his rule in the west of England during the civil war we have the testimony of a member of the opposite party that he 'restored peace and tranquillity throughout his dominions, and greatly improved their condition, save only that he burdened all his people with taxes for the building of his castles, and required all to assist him either with men or with money whenever he marched against the foe' (Gesta Steph. p. 97). The most important of these castles was that of Bristol, which he so greatly enlarged and strengthened that he is usually said to have been its founder, though it is plain that a fortress existed there before his day. His priory of St. James at Bristol was a cell to the abbey of Tewkesbury, which looked upon his father-in-law as its second founder, and to which he was himself a distinguished benefactor. The Cistercian abbey of Neath was founded in 1130 by Richard de Granville, chief baron of the honour of Glamorgan, under the special patronage and protection of Earl Robert, Countess Mabel, and their eldest son. Another Cistercian house, Margam, was founded by Robert only a few months before his death, in 1147. His widow survived him ten years; she was the mother of six children. The eldest son, William, second earl of Gloucester, died in 1183, leaving only three daughters, and by the marriage of one of these, Amicia, to Richard, sixth earl of Clare, the earldom of Gloucester ultimately passed to the family of Clare [see CLARE, FAMILY of].

ROBERT OF JUMIÈGES (fl. 1051), archbishop of Canterbury, called 'Champart' (Gallia Christiana, xi. 958), a Norman by birth, was prior of St. Ouen at Rouen, and in 1037 was chosen abbot of Jumièges, having been designated for that office by his predecessor and kinsman, Abbot William. He began to build the abbey church of St. Mary in 1040 (ib.; FREEMAN, Norman Conquest, iv. 93, v. 621). While Edward, son of Ethelred the Unready [see EDWARD THE CONFESSOR], was an exile in Normandy, Robert did him some service; they became intimate friends, and when Edward returned to England in 1043 to ascend the throne, Robert accompanied him (Vita Ædwardi, p. 399; Gesta Pontificum, p. 35). The see of London having fallen vacant by the death of Bishop Ælfweard [q. v.], Edward bestowed it on Robert in August 1044. He became the head of the foreigners at the court and in the kingdom, opposed Earl Godwine [q. v.] and his party, keeping alive the king's belief that the earl was guilty of the death of Edward's brother Ælfred (d. 1036) [q. v.], and acquired such an extraordinary degree of influence over him that it is said that, if he asserted that a black crow was white, the king would sooner believe his words than his own eyes (Annales Wintonienses, ii. 21). When the see of Canterbury became vacant by the death of Eadsige [q. v.] on 29 Oct. 1050, Edward set aside the canonical election of Ælfric (fl. 1050) [q. v.], and in the witenagemot held in the spring of 1051 appointed Robert. Robert went to Rome for his pall, returned with it on 27 July, and was enthroned at Canterbury (Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, ann. 1048, Peterborough). His promotion caused deep indignation among English churchmen (Vita Eadwardi, p. 400), and this feeling must have been increased by his refusal to consecrate Spearhafoc, the bishop-elect of London, on the plea that the pope had forbidden him to do so, though Spearhafoc showed him the king's writ ordering the consecration.

Robert's new dignity gave him larger opportunities of thwarting Godwine, and he had a personal quarrel with the earl about some land that he claimed as belonging to his see, and that Godwine was occupying (ib.) During the quarrel between the king and the earl in September, Robert used his influence with the king to inflame his anger against Godwine, insisting that he was the murderer of Edward's brother, and he instigated the mocking message that the earl should have no peace from the king until he restored to him his brother and his companions. When Godwine was exiled, he persuaded Edward to separate from the queen, and apparently suggested a divorce (ib. p. 403). It seems probable that it was at this time that Edward sent him on an embassy to Duke William of Normandy to promise him the succession to the throne, and it may be to invite him to visit him

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS
THE ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN OF THE ENGLISH KINGS FROM WILLIAM I TO EDWARD III

By WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR., M.S., F.A.S.G.
Communicated by the COMMITTEE ON ENGLISH AND FOREIGN RESEARCH

In the middle ages, to a large extent, marriages of the nobility and almost invariably of royalty, were arranged for political or financial reasons, and had almost nothing to do with personal preference. Though in some cases marriages coincided with personal choice, usually affection or love came after marriage, if it came at all. Of the Norman Kings of England and the early Plantagenets, only King John and Edward III and perhaps William I, are believed to have been really in love with their Queens prior to marriage. Henry III and apparently Stephen and Edward I certainly became very fond of their Queens. Henry I and Richard I showed theirs utmost respect, but apparently cared little about them as persons. Edward II preferred the company of men, as did William II who never married.

Small wonder then that "affairs of the heart" existed outside of marriage, especially in the royal family which had the least choice in its selection of partners. Children of such "alliances" were often recognized by their parents and frequently taken into the home to be brought up with legitimate children, given good education, property, and position. Many became the most important people of their day and were most admirable persons. Casual relationships also existed, of course, but usually with servants, barmaids and peasants. The children of such unions were usually unknown or unrecognized by their fathers and only rarely acknowledged.

Roy 6 Log 6

It is no surprise for a student of this period to discover that a large proportion of the Court and the wealthier nobility were related to the King and that the great majority of these relationships were through illegitimacies. Though less easy to trace than pedigrees from lawful unions, especially on the mother's side since she rarely is identified, still these lines are no less a part of one's ancestry than the others and deserve recording. Since these royal bastards have not been tabulated elsewhere, a summary of those claimed or proven from William I to Edward III may be of interest.

WILLIAM I "the Conqueror" has not been shown to have sired any bastards. However, in the past two have been claimed:

1. William Peverel of Nottingham, who was given custody of Nottingham Castle when it was built in 1068. King William gave him properties subsequently identified as the Honour of Peverel, consisting of 100 lordships in the counties of Nottingham and Northampton, 14 in Derby, some 20 in Berkshire, Leicestershire, Oxford, Bedford, Buckingham and Essex. He died 28 Jan. 1113/14. Apparently the first identification of this man as King William's son dates from about 1500; this identification is no longer accepted.[1]
2. Gundred, wife of William de Warrenne, Earl of Surrey and Warrenne, who was called "daughter of the Conqueror," although no evidence was advanced. Elsewhere she is called a sister of Gerbod the Fleming, a child of Mathilda (William's Queen) by an earlier marriage, or her bastard, and lastly a legitimate child of William and Mathilda. These identifications are now disproved; and it is thought that her father may have been Gerbod, hereditary advocate of the Abbey of St. Bertin at St. Omer.[2]

ROBERT, Duke of Normandy, eldest son of William I. His legitimate line died out and any descendants he may have must stem from the last of the three known bastards:[3]

1. Richard, who d. s.p. in 1100 in a hunting accident in the New Forest.
2. William, who d. s.p. in the Holy Land after the battle of Tinchbray while on Crusade.
3. A daughter, whose name is lost, wife by 1089 of Elie de St. Saen, who was guardian of Robert's son William Clito. If this couple left issue, they have not been identified.

WILLIAM II, never married. He is credited by Cobbe with a bastard son whose name is not noted elsewhere.[4] William is thought to have had no interest in women.

1. Berstand, of whom nothing is known.

HENRY I. A list of 21 (perhaps 20, since there may be one duplication) bastard children of this monarch appears in the Complete Peerage, new ed., vol. 11, Appendix D, with biographical material which will not be reprinted in detail here. We confine ourselves to listing these, with references in which additional data may be found. Number 22, below, is an addition to those noted in the Complete Peerage. There may have been others. It has been asserted that Henry married Sibyl Corbet, and later set her aside to marry Margaret of Scotland, thus uniting the Saxon and Norman claims to the throne. Evidence to prove this statement is lacking, but if it is true, the five children of Sibyl Corbet would not be true bastards.

Roy 1 Log 63

1. Robert, "the Consul," of Caen, Earl of Gloucester, by an unknown mother. One of the most important men of his day, who has many living descendants.[5]
2. Reginald "de Dunstanville," Earl of Cornwall, by Sibyl Corbet. Many descendants.[6]
3. William, by Sibyl Corbet. Appears on the Pipe Roll of 1184. Issue, if any, unknown.
4. Gundred, by Sibyl Corbet. Named in the Pipe Roll of 1130. Sometimes confused with Rohese (below).[7]
5. Rohese, by Sibyl Corbet,[8] married Henry de la Pomerai, had 2 sons; living descendants.
6. Sibyl, by Sibyl Corbet, married Alexander I, King of Scots, d. s.p. Sandford calls her Elizabeth.[9]
7. Henry fitz Henry, by Nest verch Rhys ap Tewdr, lord of Pebidiog and Narberth, killed in the invasion of Anglesey in 1157. By an unknown wife he left at least two sons, Meiler fitz Henry, Justiciar of Ireland, and Robert fitz Henry, living in Leinster about 1180, and also a daughter. Living descendants.[10]
8. Isabel, by Isabel, daughter of Robert de Beaumont, Count of Meulan; probably Henry's youngest bastard, since her mother was born between 1102 and 1107. She was unmarried in 1141, and probably in 1149; in fact no marriage or issue is known. Her mother married Gilbert fitz Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Pembroke. After her step-father's death she lived with her mother. She is called "Hedwig" by both Cobbe and Brandenberg.
9. Richard, by Ansfrid who was widow of Anskill; probably Henry's favorite child. Born before 1101 he became an able soldier; he was betrothed to Amice, daughter of Ralph de Gael of Bréteuil, and was to receive his father-in-law's Norman lands, but was drowned in the wreck of the White Ship at Barflete, 25 Nov. 1120, together with King Henry's only legitimate son, William the Aethling, and Maud, Countess of Perche (see 13 below). Richard left no known issue. Brandenberg falsely calls him "Earl of Suffolk."
10. Fulke, also by Ansfrid, either died early or became a monk.
11. Juliane, probably another child of Ansfrid, married in 1103 Eustace de Pacy I. Lord of Bréteuil and Pacy, who rebelled against Henry I in 1119, but was pardoned and died in 1136. She became a nun at Fontevrault shortly after. They had two sons and two daughters. The eldest son William d. s.p. in 1153. Issue of the younger son Roger, if any, is unknown. With the consent of Henry I the two daughters were blinded and mutilated by Ralph Harenc, to whom their father Eustace had given them as hostages in exchange for Harenc's son, whom Eustace had blinded.[11]
12. Maud, by an Edith of unknown parentage, married in 1103 Rotrou II, Count of Perche. She died aboard the White Ship on 25 Nov. 1120, leaving two daughters: Philippa who married Helie of Anjou (son of Fulke V, and brother of Geoffrey Plantagenet) leaving issue,[12] and Felice.
13. Robert, the King's son, by Edith, daughter of Forn, a great tennant-in-chief with 100 knights' service, who supported his sister Maud against Stephen, married Maud, Lady du Sap in Normandy, daughter of Robert d'Avranches. He died 31 May 1172 leaving one daughter and heiress Maud, who married Rainald de Courtney, but d. s.p. in 1224.[13]
14. Gilbert, by an unknown mother, unmarried in 1142 and not mentioned again.
15. William de Tracy, by an unknown mother. He left a daughter Grace who married John de Sudeley of Sudley Castle, co. Gloucester, 3rd son of Harold of Ewyas. They had two known sons: Ralph de Sudeley, ancestor of the Barons Sudeley; and William of Toddington, who adopted his mother's name, Tracy, and founded the baronial family of that name—although the senior male line died out in 1797 with the death of the 8th Viscount Tracy, it is probable that descendants of cadet branches survive.[14]

16. Maud married Conan III, Duke of Brittany, through whom the line of Brittany continued.[15]
17. [? Eustacie], a daughter who married William Goet III, lord of Montminrael and that part of Perche later known as Perche-Gouet. He was born about 1080 and succeeded by his son William IV who died on Crusade in 1169, leaving two daughters. There are probably descendants.[16]
18. Constance (also called Maud), by an unknown mother, married Rosceline de Beaumont, vicomte du Maine. She had South Tawton, co. Devon, as her dowry. Had: Richard (eldest), and William. From the former descent the later vicomtes du Maine and the English Barons Beaumont.[17]
19. Aliz, or Aline, married Mathieu de Montmorenci, Constable of France, and had five sons and many descendants.[18]
20. Maud, by unknown mother, became Abbess of Montivilliers. She is sometimes confused with Isabel (8 above).
21. A daughter, perhaps identical with one of those named above. Henry I agreed to give William de Warrenne one of his daughters in marriage, but asked approval of Archbishop Anselme since the parties were "related in the 4th degree on one side and the 6th degree on the other," which Anselme refused, so the marriage never took place. Note that this proves that William's mother Gundred (above), the reputed daughter of William I, could not have been a half-sister of Henry I, since a child of Henry would be related to William II de Warenne in the 3rd degree.
22. [?] Emme, living in 1157, married about 1121 Guy IV, Sieur de Laval.[19]

Cobbe[20] adds with a question mark two more bastards of Henry I: a second Henry and a Herbert. It has been suggested, without evidence, that Sibyl Corbet's son Herbert by her husband was actually the child of Henry I. Cobbe's list includes numbers 1, 2, 7, 8 (whom he calls Hedwig), 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19 above; Sandford's list is the same.[21]

STEPHEN is credited by Sandford and Cobbe with two bastards. Anselme mentions only the second.[22]

1. William, by an unknown mother. Stated by Sandford to have witnessed, as his brother, a charter of Stephen's legitimate son William.
2. Gervaise, by Dametta of Normandy, who became Abbot of Westminster where he died in 1160 and was buried.

GEOFFREY PLANTAGENET, Count of Anjou, husband of the Empress Mathilda, daughter of Henry I. Since he was the father of Henry II and progenitor of the Plantagenet Kings of England his base born children are included here. He had three known bastards:

1. Emma, who was given in marriage in 1174 by her half-brother, Henry II, to David ap Owen Gwynedd. They had a son Owen, whose issue, if any, is unknown; they had also a daughter named Wennour, who married Meurig ap Roger, a Baron of the Welsh March, by whom she had sons Wrennoc and Gwenwynwyn.[23]
2. Hameline, became Earl of Warrenne and Surrey in right of his wife.[24]
3. Emma, married Guy V. de Laval.[25]

HENRY II. An article detailing the bastards of Henry II, with all known evidences, appeared in The Genealogist's Magazine (vol. 14, p. 361-368, Sept. 1964). We list here only the names as they appear in this article:

1. Geoffrey, Archibishop of York.[26]
2. Peter, Archdeacon of Lincoln.[27]
3. Morgan, Provost of Beverley, Bishop-elect of Durham.[28]

4. William Longespée, Earl of Salisbury.[39]
5. Probably a child born dead, or died at birth, to Princess Alix of France.[40]
6. A child, born in 1169 to Alix, daughter of Eudon de Porhoët, Vicomte de Porhoët, and jure uxoris Duke of Brittany. This child may be identical with William Longspée[41] (see discussion, The Gen. Mag., op. cit.).
7. Perhaps a son called Richard.[42]

RICHARD I, by an unknown concubine, had a son:

1. Philippe, born about 1184, to whom he gave in marriage Amelie, youngest or minor daughter of Helie de Cognac, which castle Philippe then held of the Count of Poitou.[43]

JOHN, by a number of mistresses, for the most part unknown, had the following:

1. Joan, whose mother is not definitely known, although she has been called the child of "Queen Clementia" (which may have been a pseudonym for Isabel of Gloucester) or that of Agatha Ferrers. John gave her in marriage to Llewellyn ap Jorwerth, Prince of Wales. She has many descendants.[44]
2. Geoffrey, who, in 1205, held the Honour of Perche, lead an expedition into Poitou, and died in that same year. Issue, if any, unknown.[45]
3. John, a clerk, supported by the custodians of the see of Lincoln in 1201.[46]
4. Henry fitz Roy, sent as a student to the Prior of Kenilworth in 1207, given the Cornish lands of Robert fitz Walter, married a minor heiress, lived into the reign of Henry III, when he was acknowledged as the King's brother. In 1233 he was sent with others to secure the manor of Gilbert Basset in Wiltshire.[47]
5. Oliver, son of one Hawise, perhaps a Tracy, took part in the defense of Dover in 1217, died on Crusade at Damietta in October 1218. Issue, if any unknown.[48]
6. Osbert Gifford, a son by one of the Gifford ladies, about whom little is known.[49]
7. Richard de Chilham, by a sister of William, Earl of Warrenne; he was a Captain during the revolt of the Barons; married in 1214 to Rohese de Dover.[50] Many descendants.
8. [?] Isabel la Blanche, who married one Sir Robert fitz Yva (or Fitz You), may have been another of his bastards since she is shown as a daughter of King John.[51]
   It has been disproven that John de Curci, Earl of Ulster, listed by Sandford as a bastard of John,[52] was his son.

RICHARD, EARL OF CORNWALL, King of the Romans, 2nd son of King John, had four, if not six, bastards, all said to have been by Joan, daughter of Sir Reginald de Valletort, who later (or perhaps earlier) married Sir Alexander (or Andrew) Okeston and by him had a legitimate son and heir.[53]

1. Richard.
2. Walter.
3. ? Lawrence.
4. Probably Isabella.
5. Probably Joan.
6. ? Philip le Cornwalys, alias Philip de Sancto Austolo (a Papal Roll calls him a son of the Earl of Cornwall).

It is interesting to note that through the family of Cornwall, uninterrupted male descent from the Plantagenets, with but this one illegitimacy, still exists. Through the Somerset family (descendants of Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, and his descendants, the Dukes of Beaufort, there is also uninterrupted male descent from the Plantagenets, but through two or more illegitimacies.

HENRY III had no known bastards.

EDWARD I had only one known bastard:

1. John de Botetourte, Lord Botetourte.[54]

EDWARD II had no known bastards.

EDWARD III had one known bastard:

1. Nicholas Lytlington, Abbot of Westminster.[55]

After the death of his Queen, Philippa, Edward, in his old age, had several mistresses, of whom the most notorious was Agnes Perrers. This lady had two daughters who were not children of her husband, and may well have been Edward's.[56] These were: an elder daughter Joan, who married Robert Sherne; and a younger, also Joan, who married Richard Northland and was later (1406) known as Joan Despaigne, otherwise Southery.

that this appears to be a confusion with William's wife, whose name would then be something else. This was Guy IV's son, Guy V. Perhaps there is some confusion between these two Emmas. It may be noted that since both were bastards there would be no relationship between the two and no bar to marriage on the basis of consanquinity.

Lincoln from his father in 1188. However, in the article under Rosamond Clifford (D.N.B., vol. 11, p. 76) it is stated that this was the earlier William Longespée (called I). The C.P. account does not include nor does it discuss this grant. William did receive from his brother, King Richard, the 3rd penny of Wiltshire in 1196/7. His wife's birth date is given in C.P. as 1191, but D.N.B. states she was born in Amesbury in 1187 and was said to be aged 12 when given to William in 1198.

The Pipe Rolls (Rotuli de Dominabus), vol. xxxv, p. 60, under the first roll of Suffolk, Hundred of Babeng, footnote 1, states "Acton was an escheat of the Honour of Peverel [Peverel of London], and Henry II gave it to William Longespée senior [probably his own younger brother William]." This identification of William Longespée I with William, Count of Poitou, died 30 Jan. 1164, is further confirmed by Henry de Bracton in whose Note-Book (ed. F. W. Maitland, London, 1887), case no. 1064, vol. 3, p. 92-93, we find, in 1225 a suit between the Abbot of Misenden, Bucks, vs.—Hubert de Burg, for the advowson of the church of Owelton. Hubert states that this is part of the manor of Kauston (now Cawston and Oulton), that it was escheated to the King's grandfather (Henry II) who granted it to his brother William le Longespée to hold at his will as bailiff. William gave it to William de Penna. After the death of William le Longespée it came back to the King. Since William de Penna held it only as bailiff for William le Longespée King John gave it to Hubert de Burgh. There is much discussion, but it becomes clear that William le Longespée had (1) died probably without issue since the property reverted and was re-granted; and (2) William le Longespée died probably in the reign of Henry II, but certainly by the reign of King John, since John is alleged to have re-granted it. Mr. Maitland's footnote 6 on page 92 states incorrectly that William le Longespée is "natural son, not brother" of Henry II. However, William Longespée II (son of Henry II) died 7 March 1225/6, well after King John, leaving a large number of children. Thus we know that William II is not a principal in this property exchange. De Bracton probably knew exactly who these people were and is unlikely to have made an error. Thus it appears probable that William Longespée I (or senior) was William, Count of Poitou and thus could not have been alive in 1188 to receive a grant of Appleby. Obviously this transaction should be re-examined.

George Andrews Moriarty, F.S.A., has made an exhaustive study of the Giffords and come to the conclusion that the mother of Osbert, the King's son, was probably Mathilde, daughter of Richard Gifford, Justiciar under Henry II. He was living in 1176; his son, Osbert Gifford of Norfolk, married Isabel de Friville, and died s.p. about 1229. His heirs were his two sisters: Mabel, who in 1232 was wife of Adam de Kailly; and Mathilde de Gifford, not noted as married in 1232 (see case no. 1671, 1232, in Notebooks of Henry de Bracton, ed. by F. W. Maitland, London, 1887, vol. 2, p. 517-18 and compare Mr. Moriarty's record of the children of Richard Gifford in THE REGISTER, vol. 75, p. 62, January 1921). Osbert Gifford, the King's son, received 21 November, John 17 (1215), the Oxford lands of Thomas de Ardern, which had apparently been confiscated after Runnemede (Rotuli Litterarum Clausarum, ed. by Thomas Duff Hardy, London, 1833, vol. 1, p. 238); and on 1 Feb. following (1216) Osbert received also Ardern's lands in Norfolk, Suffolk and Sussex. Osbert's half-brother, also named Osbert Gifford, was with the Barons since his wife received safe conduct to confer with King John in November, John 18 (1216) (ibid.). Nothing is known concerning any wife or progeny of Osbert, the King's son. The late Oswald Barron, in an unsigned review of Maj. Gen. George Wrotteseley's "The Giffords" in The Ancestor, no. 3, p. 227, October 1902, gives as his arms: ermine, 2 bars gules, a chief gules with a leopard or in chief. G. W. Watson in C.P., vol. 5, p. 649, note e, assigns these same arms to Osbert Gifford of Brimsfield (born about 1188; died about 1237; married Isabel de Bocland), son of Elias, son of Elias, which Osbert would be first cousin once removed of Richard the Justiciar. However, Mr. Moriarty believes Barron's identification is probably more correct; see his article in The Genealogist, new series, vol. 28, p. 128-129. 1922.

DESCENDANTS OF ANDREW FORD OF WEYMOUTH, MASS.

Compiled by MRS. ELIZABETH (COBB) STEWART, of Cleveland, Ohio

2. JAMES[2] FORD (Andrew[1]), born in Weymouth, say about 1649-50, no evidence of his death has been found in the records of Massachusetts, Connecticut or New Jersey. He was living 25 Feb. 1692/3, the date of his father's will; but he was probably deceased before 1702, when his brother Andrew[2] was called the "heir at law" of Ebenezer[2] Ford, indicating that Andrew was the oldest living brother.

James Ford married, probably about 1674-75, but no record of his marriage has been found, or the name of his wife or the births of any children. However, it appears to be certain that he had a son John, born about 1675-76. On 5 March 1674/5 James Ford bought a lot of land:

> "George Danson of Middleboro yeoman for £5. 10s paid by James foord of Weymouth husbandman, 1/35 of all that tract or parcell of land commonly called the Major's Purchase situate lying and being at or neare Indian Head River pond and Jones River and within the Colony of New Plymouth etc all my share excepting and always reserving out of this above sd tract of land all that parcell of land which was sold by the first owners unto John Thomson now of Middleboro." Witnesses: John Gorum, Nathaniel Thomas. Dated 5 March 1674/5. Acknowledged 18 May 1675 before Constant Southworth (Plymouth Colony Deed, vol. 4, p. 17).

The Marshfield Proprietor's Records (vol. 3, p. 56) show that James paid £2. 1 s. for a share of the charges against the settlement of the boundary line at a meeting of the proprietors of Major's Purchase, 21 April 1685 (Mrs. Bamford's "Notes" in New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 53, p. 171). This property was in Duxbury (now Pembroke) and contained a cedar swamp, but was not a home lot. Note that John[3] Ford of Hanover, N. J., bequeaths to his son Jacob "my seeder swamp in Duxbury and also half of my lands that lie at Quennebog up New London River that falls to me by my father" (Mrs. Bamford, op. cit., p. 164). Since James bought a cedar swamp in Duxbury and inherited from his father land in Quinnebog, Conn., this instrument seems to establish John's paternity.

James probably had service in King Philip's war under Capt. Samuel Wadsworth. Bodge's Soldiers in King Philip's War mentioned "James Ford" several times. Most of the services specified seem to belong to James of Ipswich, another Ford family. However, James of Weymouth could have served in Captain Wadsworth's troop, which, having undoubtedly fought in the Narragansett campaign, was stationed in Marlboro, January 1676, and in Lancaster, February 1676, guarding the frontier and the towns of Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, etc. Weymouth itself was attacked by Indians that spring. Wadsworth's troop was disbanded in early March; the account book of 24 April 1676 shows £2. 15s. 8d. due James Ford (p. 221).

The same year in Weymouth Samuel King's daughter Abigail was killed by being run over with a cart (History of Weymouth, vol. 3, p. 351). The Court of Assistants, Massachusetts Bay Colony, 7 March 1675/6, fined James ffoord, who was the driver of the cart, £10. 5s. to be paid to the "Country," 5s. to the child's father (Records of the Court of Assistants, Boston, 1901, vol. 1, p. 60). James took the oath of allegiance to King Charles II, in Weymouth 29 Oct. 1678, according to the records of the Suffolk Court (Colonial Society of Massachusetts Publications, vol. 30, p. 974). Some time after this, possibly by October 1681, he moved to Ford's Farms in Plymouth Colony. By 1686, when he was sued by his brother Ebenezer, he was called "now or late of Ford's Farms." Perhaps by then he had removed to Duxbury. There are no records to prove this, but it is significant that his son John called himself "of Duxbury" when he went to Windham, Conn., in 1698. James was bequeathed by his father's will, 25 Feb. 1692/3, 200 acres at Quinnepoge.

Child:

6. i. John,[3] b. probably in Weymouth about 1676.

3. ANDREW[2] FORD (Andrew[1]), born in Weymouth say about 1650/51, died in Abington 24 Aug. 1725. There is no record of Andrew's birth or of his age at death; it is certain, however, that Andrew[1] had at least two sons by 3 April 1651, the date of Robert Lovell's will, in which Robert mentioned his son-in-law's "eldest son" and "youngest son."

He married about 1679/80 ABIAH [? PIERCE], born about 1654, died between 22 March 1721, the date of Andrew's letter quoted below, and 8 April 1725, the date of his will which does not mention her. Abiah's identity has long puzzled re-

This deed proves that Anna, second wife of Daniel Church of Lee, was the widow of Barnabus Bates of Kent. It is witnessed by Levi Church, Anna's step-son, and by Hannah Young, wife of James Young (D. M. Wilcox, ed., Records of the Town of Lee . . . to 1800 (1900), p. 249). Hannah Young may have been related to Anna Church, perhaps her sister.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS: ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS:—THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 97, April 1965, "No. 22." This daughter was certainly named Emma and she married Guy IV de Val Guyon, who died in 1152. Her epitaph ran "Emma anglorum regis filia dominaque lavallensis." Their son, Guy V de Val Guyon, married Emma, an illegitimate daughter, not of Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, as given under his name on p. 97 as his third child, but of Reginald, Earl of Cornwall, No. 2, on page 96. However, Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, had an illegitimate daughter Marie, Abbess of Shaftesbury, by the wife of the Sire de Osteilli, who was probably also the mother of her sister Emma, wife of David (p. 97 as No. 1). Abbé A. Angot, Généalogies féodales mayennaises du XIe au XIIIe siècle, Laval, 1942; C. Bullock-Davies, "Marie, Abbess of Shaftesbury, and her brothers" in The English Historical Review (1965), vol. 80, p. 314-22. Also Fergus, Lord of Galloway, is said to have married Elizabeth, youngest natural daughter of King Henry I: The Scots Peerage (1907), vol. 4, p. 136; though W. H. Thurton (Plantagenet Ancestry (1928), p. 269, note 49) considers her to have been a daughter of William II. On p. 98, children of King John: Sidney Painter (in his article "Who was the mother of Oliver fitz Roy" in Feudalism and Liberty (1961), shows that the mother of Oliver was Hawise, daughter of Fulk fitz Warin and Hawise de Dinan. A William de Say is described as a natural son of King John by N. Denholm-Young (History and Heraldry (1965), p. 65-6); but this is probably a mistake as he later (op. cit., p. 85) gives another account of his parentage. On p. 99, Edward II had a bastard son Adam, as F. D. Blackley has discovered (Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research (1964), vol. 37, p. 76-7).

TIRRELL-KINGMAN-SHAW:—In preparing the Tirrell genealogy for publication it has been necessary to settle the controversy about the wife of Gideon[2] Tirrell (William[1]). In the "Corrections and Additions" to Savage's Genealogical Dictionary published in THE REGISTER, vol. 46, p. 188, April 1892, it was stated that Gideon's wife Hannah was the daughter of Thomas Kingman. In vol. 3, p. 355, of the History of Weymouth, Massachusetts (1923), George W. Chamberlain in his account of the Kingman family repeated this statement. But, in vol. 4, p. 612, of the same work, Mr. Chamberlain named her as the daughter of John and Alice (Phillips) Shaw, and cited the distribution of the estate of John Shaw, whereby Gideon and Hannah Tirrell, with the other children and their spouses, shared his property, as evidence that Hannah, the wife of Gideon Tirrell, was a daughter of John Shaw (he gave Suffolk County Probate, new series, vol. 6, p. 181, as his authority). An examination of the original probate file confirms Mr. Chamberlain's statement. The confusion in identifying Hannah, wife of Gideon Tirrell, may have been due to the fact that Gideon[2] Tirrell had a daughter Hannah, not shown in the History of Weymouth (vol. 4, p. 656), who married John Kingman, with whom, by an agreement with her brother, John Tirrell, she was a beneficiary of the estate of Gideon Tirrell.

THE WATSON ANCESTRY OF CONSTANCE (BRIGHAM) CROSBY: ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS:—In THE REGISTER, vol. 120, January 1966.

Page 22. The year of baptism of Katharine, fifth child of Henry Watson, should read 1589/90 (not 1588/90).

Page 23. Perhaps the unknown wife of James Watson (No. 3) was the Jenet Watson who was buried 12 May 1580, a year and a half after the baptism of his youngest known child.

Page 25, last line: the will of William[2] Southeron (born about 1470) was abstracted by J. Gardiner Bartlett as follows: To be buried in the churchyard of Holme in Spaldingmore; to elder son John 20s, to daughter Joane 6s 8d, to Agnes Gibson a sheep or 20d. All residue to my wife [unnamed] and younger son William, they to be executors. Supervisors: Robert Hormett, John Southeron. Witnesses: Thomas Brewster clerk, Stephen Home, Thomas Fenceman, John Southeron, Robert Hormet. Proved 26 June 1517 (P. and E. Wills, vol. 9, fol. 47). The daughter Joane would be the right age to be the wife of John Watson, No. 2, p. 22.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

Prepared by SUSAN PARSONS, Recording Secretary

STATED MEETING, 9 MARCH 1966

A stated meeting of the Society was held at 101 Newbury Street, Boston, on Wednesday, 9 March 1966, at 2:30 P.M., Edgar Packard Dean, Director, presiding.

The minutes of the meeting of 2 February were read and approved.

The Council reported that since the annual meeting one Life and thirty-eight Annual Members had been elected.

The Recording Secretary reported that during February notice of the following death had been received:

Annual Member

Robert E. Cardoze of Garden Grove, Calif., 17 November 1965.

The report of the Librarian for the month of February showed that forty-five volumes, thirty-nine pamphlets and twenty-four miscellaneous articles had been added to the Library and Cabinet of the Society by gift.

After these three reports were accepted the Chair presented as the speaker of the afternoon, Benjamin W. Labaree, Dean of Williams College, who spoke on "New England Town Meetings."

At 3:30 P.M. the meeting was declared dissolved and the members and their guests were invited to remain for the social hour.

STATED MEETING, 6 APRIL 1966

A stated meeting of the Society was held at 101 Newbury Street, Boston, on Wednesday, 6 April 1966, at 2:30 P.M., President Whitehill presiding.

The minutes of the stated meeting of 9 March were read and approved.

that Mathilda was called Regina, implying, since her husband was not royal, that she was a royal princess; that her son, Guigues IX, was baptized Dauphin, which is apparently the Northumbrian name Dolphin; and that she might have been a daughter of Edgar, the Atheling, of England, who lived in Scotland and had a known daughter. The proof of the latter statement was said to be that Henry of Huntingdon said that Edgar had a daughter Margaret, mother of Henry Lovel. Moriarty expressed puzzlement over this statement, which he could not find in Henry of Huntingdon's annals. In fact, the true source of the statement is not Henry of Huntingdon, but the Chronicle (of the Canons) of Huntingdon, which was prepared in 1291 as a contribution to the investigations of Edward I in that year. The text reads "This Edward begot Margaret, the queen of the Scots; and Edgar. Edgar [begot] Margaret, who was the mother of Henry, called Lupellus" (Alan O. Anderson, Early Sources of Scottish History (1922), vol. 2, p. 28). Since Henry Lovel is known to be the son of Ralph Lovel and his wife Margaret, and since Margaret had property in Scotland, the statement seems plausible (cf. Complete Peerage, new ed., vol. 8, p. 200-201). It should be pointed out that Edgar was the last known male line descendant of the house of King Alfred; under later inheritance rules this would have made Henry Lovel the rightful heir of the Saxon claim to rule England. The source is far from having the value of a contemporary witness, but might well be right. However, it is much to weak to offer support to the hypothesis that the Regina Mathilda was another daughter of Edgar. In any case, the marriage of Mathilda to Guigues VIII about 1080 seems a little early for a niece of St. Margaret, who was, herself, married about 1070. On the other hand, the omission of a daughter in a foreign land would not be unlikely—note that this same source omits Edgar's sister, Christiana, the nun.

Lincoln, Nebr. DAVID H. KELLEY.

THE COUNTESS OF GLOUCESTER, 1316:—A correspondent has questioned the statement made in THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 258, October 1966, that Dr. Michael Altschul in his account of the Clare family (A Baronial Family in Medieval England, p. 171, footnote 56) has corrected a statement made in The Complete Peerage (1926), vol. 5, p. 715, note d, that Margaret de Clare was called Countess of Gloucester in 1316. The fact is that Dr. Altschul makes it clear that the documents quoted by the author of the article on the Earls of Gloucester were misread, and that the person named in them was Maud (Mathilde) Countess of Gloucester (died in 1320), the widow of Gilbert de Clare, the 4th Earl (died in 1314), not Margaret, his sister and coheir. Margaret was then known as Countess of Cornwall because she was the widow of Piers de Gaveston, Earl of Cornwall (beheaded in 1312). She married secondly, in 1317, Hugh de Audley, who was not created Earl of Gloucester until 1337.

CHURCH:—In the article, "Samuel and Jonathan Church of Granville, Mass." (THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 176, July 1966), the statement is made that no further record has been found relating to Rebecca[2] Church (Samuel[1]) after that of her birth in 1718. The author of this note is a direct descendant of Rebecca Church and had been unable to identify her until Samuel Church of Stonington, Conn., appeared in THE REGISTER (vol. 118, p. 272, October 1964). A handwritten copy of the inscriptions on the gravestones in the cemetery in Pomfret, Conn., is in the vaults of the Society. It shows she was born in Plainfield, Conn., 15 Jan. 1717/18; died in Pomfret, Conn., 20 Nov. 1798, aet. 83; and that she married 5 Jan. 1743/4 Isaac Sharpe, born 23 May 1716. The dates of birth on her gravestone and on the Plainfield vital records are the same, which would appear to be sufficient evidence to identify Rebecca (Church) Sharpe as the youngest child of Samuel and Mary (Edwards) Church. It is possible she went to Pomfret to live with her aunt, Rebecca—"Zerviah"—(Church) Cleveland when the family was broken up after the death of Samuel.[1]

Newport, R. I. PETER C. CARD.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS: ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS:—The following emendations to my article on "The Illegitimate Children of the English Kings from William I to Edward III" have been called to my attention or noted by me since it was published in THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 94-102, April 1965. They are arranged in the order of the several kings (or their immediate issue) as in the original article.

WILLIAM II ("William Rufus") and his older brother ROBERT, DUKE OF NORMANDY:—Prof. David H. Kelley of the University of Nebraska notes that Lt. Col. W. H. Turton in his Plantagenet Ancestry gives the wife of Fergus, Lord of Galloway, as Elizabeth, daughter of William II (p. 101), and the mother of Roger de Mortimer (died in 1215) as Maud of Normandy, daughter of William Cliton or Clito, son of Robert, Duke of Normandy, and nephew of William III and Henry I (p. 76). Let us consider them in order given.

The Scots Peerage (ed. by Sir James Balfour Paul), vol. 4, p. 135-6, shows that Fergus witnessed a charter of David I in 1136, was seen in 1147, and retired to a monastery where he died in 1161. He is said to have had a wife Elizabeth, youngest natural daughter of Henry I, but that the authorities "quoted by Chalmers" do not bear out this identification; yet they do not deny it, and it is quite possible and fits chronologically. Hovenden and Benedict Abbas both refer to Uchtred, eldest son of Fergus, as a cousin of Henry II, but Paul (op. cit.) points out that the same label is not applied to the other son Gilbert, who might have been of another mother. However, G. W. S. Barrow in his Robert Bruce (1965), p. 36, note 2, points out a fallacy in this statement, and thinks Gilbert also is referred to as cousin. Most of the authorities find it most likely that Elizabeth was a natural daughter of Henry I [cf. Charles Evans "addition" in THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 230, July 1966]. It is most unlikely that she was William's daughter both because of his character and because of chronological considerations.

As to the Mortimer descent from William Clito: this is chimerical, Roger was a younger son of Hugh de Mortimer (died in 1180-1). Hugh's wife was Maud, but she was the widow of Philip de Belmeis and daughter of William Meschin of Skipton-in-Craven, by Cecily, daughter and heiress of Robert de Romelly. Maud became coheir to her father's estate on the death of her brother, and Roger de Mortimer inherited some of his grandmother's lands. See the Complete Peerage, vol. 9, p. 271. William Clito is not known to have had any children.

Mr. George Walker of Palmerston North, New Zealand, has drawn the author's attention to one Avelina (died ca. 1178-9), married Hubert de Rye (or Ria) III, died by 1158/9 (V. J. Whatney, The Wallop Family (1928), p. 673, where evidences are not cited), who is stated to be a daughter of William II. Aside from the chronology and my statement regarding William's character and the unlikelihood of his having had children, nothing has been seen either to support or reject this identification.

HENRY I:—The maternity of the eldest son of Henry I, Robert of Caen, Earl of Gloucester, has been the subject of so many misstatements that it should be stated here that his mother was neither Sibyl Corbet nor Nest, daughter of Rhys ap Twedr. Probably the best discussion of her is still that in Edward A. Freeman's The Norman Conquest (1876), vol. 5, p. 852, where he states his reasons for believing her to be French or possibly a Norman.

STEPHEN, his eldest son EUSTACE (d.v.p.):—the March 1966 issue of The Genealogists' Magazine (vol. 15, p. 186) contains a note by Charles F. H. Evans, F.S.A., an able medievalist and genealogist, referring to his earlier article in the same publication for the preceding June (vol. 15, p. 53-63) and demonstrating that it is highly probable that Eustachie de Champaigne, wife of Anselme Candavaine, Count of Saint-Pol (died in 1164), who had first been married to and divorced by Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex (died 21 Oct. 1166), was a bastard daughter of Eustace IV, Count of Boulogne, the eldest son and heir of King Stephen, who predeceased his father, 1153, without legitimate issue (hence the accession of the House of Anjou). Her children are given in Mr. Evans' note.

RICHARD I:—Mrs. Margaret Buxton of Albuquerque, N. Mex., has invited the author's attention to John O'Donavan's Annals of the Four Masters (1858), vol. 3, p. 263, where he states that "William fitz Adelm de Burgo, by Isabel, natural daughter of Richard I, and widow of Llewellyn, Prince of Wales" was father of Richard de Burgo, great lord of Connaught, and father of the William de Burgh who became Earl of Ulster. Prof. David H. Kelley has checked this against its source, Cucogry O'Clery (one of the Four Masters) in his The O'Clery Book of Genealogies, as edited by Seamus Pender (Analecta Hibernica, no 18, Dublin, 1951), and finds that the original pedigree (p. 193, paragraph 2315) merely shows that William the Conqueror [of Ireland, that is, William de Burgh] married ———, daughter of the King of England. The King is not identified, but the chronology above is certainly enough to make one suspect O'Donavan's interpretation. Richard I almost certainly was not the father of Richard de Burgh's mother. Moreover, since Llewellyn died in the first part of the 13th century, his widow, if he left one, could hardly have been the mother of a man born in the 12th century. Elsewhere it has been stated that William de Burgh (not fitz Adelm, as shown by J. H. Round in his Feudal England, p. 516-18), married the daughter of an Irish King, which appears more likely. Mrs. Buxton also noted mention of a son of Richard I called Fulke of Anjou, born in the Holy Land to one Johane de St. Pol. This is taken from C. W. Scott-Giles, The Romance of Heraldry, p. 50, where there is a quotation from a speech of Richard I, the wording of which might lead the uninitiated to believe that he was dealing with fact. However, the reference cited is to Maurice Hewlett's Life and Death of Richard Yea-and-Nay, a novel dealing with the last seven years of Richard's life, most of it with this alleged romance between Richard and Johane, for which there seems to be no real evidence. It should be noted that Norah Lofts' The Lute Player, covering the same period, also mentions a bastard of Henry "the Young King," older brother of Richard. This too appears to be fiction only.

JOHN:—Mrs. Margaret Buxton also called attention to N. Denholm-Young's Richard of Cornwall (1947), in which, on p. 41, in reference to the debarkation of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, from Dover, 10 June 1240, it is stated that his company included Eudo fitzRoy, an illegitimate son of King John, who had in 1237 an exchequer fee of £20 per year, and whose lands in Essex were granted in 1242 to Giles de Cancellis, a knight of Earl Richard. From this we would conclude that Eudo was then dead without issue. Footnote 7 (op. cit.) identifies his lands as "Kanewoden, in the Honour of Raleigh, Essex," and states that Matthew calls him "G. the Earl's own brother," while Flores, vol. 2, p. 249, shows him as a half brother, son of King John. On page 112 in note 2 it is stated that "Earl Richard had for example besides his brother Eudo . . . a brother Ivo who attests his charter to Launceton (Oliver, Mon. Dioc., Exon., p. 23)." Sir Anthony R. Wagner, K.C.V.O., Garter King of Arms, has kindly verified the existence of these two bastards not heretofore noted in the account of King John's progeny (who may be one and the same person).

Dr. Sidney Painter in Medievala et Humanistica, vol. 8, p. 17-19, identifies the mother of John's bastard son Oliver as probably Hawise, sister of Eva de Tracy (widow of Oliver de Tracy) and Fulk fitz Warin III, all three being children of Fulk fitz Warin II and his wife Hawise de Dinan.

Dr. George E. McCracken, reviewing N. Denholm-Young's History and Heraldry, 1254 to 1310: a study of the Historical Value of the Roll of Arms (1965) in The American Genealogist, vol. 42, p. 57, notes that the author added to King John's illegitimate sons William de Say. This reference states that the Dering Roll (in the possession of Sir Anthony Wagner) shows five sons of King John, including this William. However, Sir Anthony writes: "The roll does not describe anyone as the son of anybody . . . . I do not know . . . what his evidence is that William de Say was a natural son of King John. I suppose the William in question is the one we all know who died in 1272, who is generally given as the son of Geoffrey de Say." Mr. Denholm-Young, in a letter to me, has withdrawn this identification.

EDWARD II:—Mr. Charles Evans in THE REGISTER, vol. 120, p. 230, July 1966, called attention to F. D. Blackley's identification of Adam, a bastard son of Edward II, in the Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research, vol. 37, p. 76-77. This the undersigned had already noted. The identification is clear and acknowledged in the "Wardrobe account of Roger de Waltham, 1 May 1322 to 19 Oct. 1323." This son, whose mother's name is unknown, was born about 1304-1310 (perhaps earlier) and probably before his father's marriage to Isabel of France in January 1308. He accompanied his father on the ill-fated Scottish expedition of 1322, although he was not yet a knight. It is not known whether he left descendants.

GENEALOGIES IN PREPARATION

Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the United States Government, the holding of other offices, graduation from colleges or professional schools, and occupation with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence and death. All names should be given in full if possible. No initials should be used when the full name is known.

Clark.—Hon. and Capt. Daniel, born in England in 1622, died in Windsor, Conn., in 1710, by Arthur H. Radasch, 14 Captain Small Road, South Yarmouth, Mass. 02664.

Fowler.—Samuel, born probably in Portsmouth, N. H., about 1660, died in Salisbury, Mass., 24 Dec. 1737, by Laura K. Pettingell, 3 Linnaean Street, Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

Fowler.—Thomas, born in England or Wales about 1636, died in Amesbury, Mass., 3 Oct. 1727, by Laura K. Pettingell, 3 Linnaean Street, Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

Giffin.—Simon, born probably either in Scotland or North Ireland in 1711, died in Halifax, N.S., in 1774, by Mrs. Florence Giffin Martin, 205 East 72d Street, New York, N.Y. 10021, and Mrs. John G. Strange, 1703 Reid Drive, Appleton, Wis. 54911.

Kibbe.—Edward, born in Exeter, England, in 1611, died in Reading, Mass., 1 Nov. 1694, by Mrs. Edgar Foulk, 148 Elmdale Avenue, Clyde, Ohio. 43410.

This is the last public record which has been found pertaining to Ira⁶ Sherman or his wife Phebe. It is presumed, therefore, that they both died sometime in the ensuing decade, possibly soon after 1860. No will or administration of his estate has been located.

Mrs. Holman stated, presumably on the authority of his great-nephew, Joseph Pembroke Sherman, that Ira and Phebe Sherman had eight daughters. Since the 1830 census indicated that there were then seven female children in the family, and, as shown below, an eighth was born three years later, this seems to be correct. These eight children were as follows (the first seven born before moving from Ontario to Chautauqua County, N. Y.):

1. ORILLA,⁷ born about 1817; married MARCUS DALRYMPLE of Sheridan, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., where they were living in 1850. Her grandson, Marriott Eugene Reynolds (son of John Hodge & Margaret (Dalrymple), born in Walworth County, Wis., 17 May 1870, furnished much of the information about this family.

2. SYLVIA ANN, born 18 Jan. 1818; married in Hanover, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., about 1838, SCHUYLER MATTOON, son of Abel & Mary (Livingston), by whom she had issue (surname Mattoon): 1. Amanda Louise, born in Silver Creek, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., 23 Sept. 1840 (the compiler's grandmother).* 2. Phebe, born in Silver Creek in 1842. Schuyler Mattoon died before 1845; and she married (2), WILLIAM CYRIL CALKINS, son of Israel & Mary (Grigg) (see Helen Turney Sharp's "The Calkins Family," a MS., Connecticut State Library, Hartford, fo. 652). Leaving her two Mattoon children with her parents, they went to Nauvoo, Ill., where they each received the Patriarchal Blessing in the Mormon Temple on 2 Jan. 1845 (Temple Records, Book 6, p. 91). They had issue: Jenette Ruby, born in Nauvoo 7 Jan. 1845; married Wesley Delap. On 3 Feb. 1846, before the "Saints" started to leave Nauvoo, Sylvia Ann Calkins is recorded as attending service in the Temple (Temple Records), but a record is on file of her visit and, since she was unaccompanied by her husband, he may have died or had been sent on ahead with other Mormons. Sometime after 1850, she married (3), ELIAS BLISS SUTHERLAND and moved to a homestead claim in Pinon, Pueblo Co., Colo., where he died 13 July 1877. In his will he mentioned his wife Sylvia Ann and her daughter Phebe (Probate Records, Pueblo County, Colo.). She died in Pinon sometime after 30 April 1883, when she sold her property to her son-in-law, Wesley Delap, and was buried in the Steele Cemetery there.

3. EMILY, born 2 Feb. 1820; died in Villenova, Cattaragus Co., N. Y., 28 Nov. 1898 (cemetery records); married in Chautauqua County GEORGE YOUNG. Four children.

4. NANCY, born about 1822; married in Spring Prairie, Walworth Co., Wis., 30 March 1854 as his second wife, JOSEPH BABCOCK. No children.

5. A DAUGHTER, unnamed in all family records. She is said to have been frail and probably died young.

6. A DAUGHTER, unnamed in all family records, who is said to have followed Brigham Young to the Great Salt Lake in 1847 and was never heard of again.

7. HARRIET, born 19 June 1827; died in Geneva, Walworth Co., Wis., 8 April 1909; married in Geneva, as his second wife, ANTHONY DELAP whose son by his first wife, Wesley Delap, married her niece, Jenette Ruby Calkins (see above). Children (surname Delap): 1. Ira. 2. Henry. 3. Albert.

8. LAURA, born in Silver Creek 10 July 1833; died in Williams Bay, Wis., 26 Jan. 1904; married (1), with her father's consent, 11 Aug. 1849, DEXTER CROCKER; married (2), HENRY SOUTHWICK.

* Amanda Louise Mattoon, daughter of Schuyler and Sylvia Ann⁷ (Sherman) Mattoon, was born in Silver Creek, Chautauqua, Co., N.Y., 23 Sept. 1840; she died in Chicago, Ill., 4 June 1927; she married in Walworth, Wis., 4 July 1859, Noble Lovely Johns, descendant of Jehiel Johns, one of the pioneer settlers of Huntington, Vt., a Revolutionary War soldier. Alvin Lincoln Johns, the second child of this marriage, married Mary A. E. Cole of London, Eng., and had two daughters, the younger being the compiler of this article.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS II
THE ILLEGITIMATE ROYAL OFFSPRING FROM EDWARD III TO QUEEN ANNE

By WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR., M.S., F.A.S.G.
Communicated by the COMMITTEE ON ENGLISH AND FOREIGN RESEARCH

The first article on this subject (THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 94-102, April 1965) has brought a number of requests to continue the listings to the end of the Stuart dynasty. Perhaps some of the readers will be able to add to the data here presented and comments are invited.

Before proceeding with the illegitimate lines of the kings who succeeded Edward III, we consider the lines stemming from Edmund of Woodstock, Earl of Kent, son of Edward I, and those from the legitimate sons of Edward III, which were not included in the compiler's earlier contribution.

EDMUND of Woodstock, Earl of Kent,[1] had a daughter and eventual heiress, Joan, "the Fair Maid of Kent," who married secondly (or thirdly), Edward "the Black Prince" (see below). By her first (or second) husband, Thomas Holand, Earl of Kent jure uxoris, she had, with others:

1. Thomas Holand, 2nd Earl of Kent, whose yr. son Edmond, the 4th Earl, had by Constance of York, Countess of Gloucester, an illegitimate daughter[2] Eleanor (see below).
2. John Holand, Duke of Exeter, married Elizabeth, daughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, had a son John, Duke of Exeter, who married Anne, daughter of Edmund, Earl of Stafford, and had a son Henry, Duke of Exeter, died without legitimate issue, but left two bastard sons,[3] Robert from whom there are descendants, and another whose name and issue if any are unknown.

Roy Log 63

The following are the records of the legitimate sons of Edward III.

EDWARD, Prince of Wales, "the Black Prince," eldest son, by wife Joan, "Fair Maid of Kent," had Richard II; he sired also the following bastards:

1. Edward, d. ca. 1369 aged 5 years.[4]
2. Sir John Saunder, said to be the son of Edith de Willesford.[5]
3. Sir Roger Clarendon.[6]

JOHN OF GAUNT, Duke of Lancaster,[7] 3rd son surviving, father by first wife of Henry IV. By his mistress, Katharine (Roet) Swynford, he had four children who were brought up with his other children. After the death of his second wife, he married Katharine and the children were legitimated, both by Act of Parliament (excepting succession) and by the Pope. Of these

1. John Beaufort,[8] Earl of Somerset, Marquis of Dorset, had with others: John, Duke of Somerset, who had a bastard daughter Thomasine,[9] married Reynold, Lord Grey of Wilton. Edmund, Duke of Somerset, Marquis of Dorset, whose son Henry succeeded but died s.p. legit., leaving a bastard son Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, male line ancestor of the Dukes of Beaufort.
2. Henry Beaufort, Cardinal of St. Eusebius, had a bastard daughter Joan, married to Sir Edward Stradling.[10]

By Marie de Ste. Hilaire, a Maid of Honour to Queen Philippa, John of Gaunt had a bastard daughter

3. Blanche, married in 1381 Sir Thomas Morieux.[11]

EDMUND of Langley, Duke of York,[7] 4th surviving son, had a daughter Constance, widow of Thomas le Despencer, Earl of Gloucester, who by Edmund Holand, Earl of Kent, had an illegitimate daughter Eleanor who married James Tuchet, Lord Audley of Norfolk. (See also under Thomas Holand, above.)

RICHARD II, son of Edward, the "Black Prince," had no known issue.

HENRY IV "Bolingbroke," son of John of Gaunt, left no known bastards. However, of his sons

1. Thomas of Lancaster, 2nd son, Duke of Clarence, is credited with a bastard son, Sir John of Clarence.[12]
2. John, 3rd son, Duke of Bedford, is credited with a bastard son, Richard.[13]
3. Humphrey, 4th son, Duke of Gloucester,[14] had two known illegitimate children: Arthur,[15] and Antigone, Countess of Tancarville.[15]

It is sometimes claimed that at least Antigone was legitimate, perhaps the child of his second marriage, born before marriage. However, all contemporary records call her illegitimate, and no evidence of maternity is shown.

HENRY V, eldest son of Henry IV, had no known bastards.

HENRY VI, son of Henry V, had no known bastards, and the paternity of his son Edward, Prince of Wales, d. s.p., has occasionally been questioned.

EDWARD IV, son of Richard, Duke of York, is said to have had many bastards,[16] but only two have been identified by the writer:

1. Arthur Plantagenet, Viscount Lisle.[17]
2. Elizabeth, married Sir Thomas Lumley knt., or Thomas, Lord Lumley, his grandfather, the former being far more likely.[18]

EDWARD V, son of Edward IV, died a child.

RICHARD III, brother of Edward IV, is said to have had seven bastards, but only the following are noted:[19]

1. Dame Katharine.[20]
2. John of Gloucester, called "de Pomfret."[21]
3. Richard Plantagenet.[22]
4. [?] Stephen Hawes, a Groom of the Chamber of Henry VII.[23]

HENRY VII, son of Margaret Beaufort and Edmund Tudor, had at least one known bastard: Sir Rowland Velville, constable of Beaumaris Castle; and probably Sir David Owen of Ditcheling, co. Surrey.[24]

HENRY VIII, son of Henry VII, had the following known (or claimed) illegitimate children:

1. Henry, Duke of Richmond.[25]
2. Sir John Perot.[26]
3. [?] (probably) Ethelreda, married John Harrington.[27]
4. [?] Sir Henry Cary, Lord Hunsdon.[28]
5. [?] Sir Thomas Stucley.[29]

EDWARD VI, son of Henry VIII, no issue.

ELIZABETH I, daughter of Henry VIII, no issue. The story, widely told by Baconians and occultists, that Sir Francis Bacon was an illegitimate son of Elizabeth I has no foundation whatever.

JAMES I of England (and VI of Scotland). Among his issue: Elizabeth married Frederick V, Count Palatine of the Rhine. Their 3rd son Prince Rupert, Duke of Cumberland, left no legitimate issue but two bastards: Ruperta, and Dudley Bard.[30]

CHARLES I, eldest surviving son of James I, had no known bastards.

CHARLES II, son of Charles I, had 14 acknowledged bastards (the first 14 in the following list), and probably a number more, though the additional three listed here with the exception of the last, no. 17, are more than doubtful. An excellent study of his acknowledged children, including further data on each, appears in the Complete Peerage, and so will not be repeated here.[31]

1. James Scot, Duke of Monmouth (by Lucy Walters).

2. Charlotte Jemima Henrietta Maria, Countess of Yarmouth (by Elizabeth Killigrew).
3. Charles fitzCharles, Earl of Plymouth (by Catharine Pegge).
4. Catharine, a Benedictine nun (by Catharine Pegge).
5. Anne Palmer, married Henry, Earl of Sussex (by Barbara Villiers, possibly a child of Roger Palmer her husband).
6. Charles fitzRoy, Duke of Southampton (by Barbara Villiers).
7. Henry fitzRoy, Duke of Grafton (by Barbara Villiers).
8. Charlotte fitzRoy, m. Henry Lee, Earl of Litchfield (by Barbara Villiers).[32]
9. George fitzRoy, Duke of Northumberland (by Barbara Villiers).
10. Barbara or Benedicta (by Barbara Villiers). By James, 4th Duke of Hamilton, she had a bastard Charles Hamilton "comte de Arran." She became a nun.
11. Charles Beauclerc, Duke of St. Albans (by Nell Gwinn).
12. James Beauclerc (by Nell Gwinn), died young.
13. Charles Lennox, Duke of Richmond (by Louise de Keroualle, Duchess of Portsmouth).
14. Mary Tudor, married Edward Radclyffe, Earl of Derwentwater (by Mary Davies).[33]
15. [?] a daughter by Lucy Walters named Mary Walters, whom he refused to acknowledge.
16. [?] a son, known as a Mr. Swan, by "an unidentified court lady," who was the father of a Mrs. Robinson.[34]
17. A claimed illegitimate son by a "Maria Stuart" was Don Jacobo Errico de Bove Stuardo, born in 1646. His son "Prince Don Giacomo Stuardo" had "his right recognized" in Naples in 1715.[35]

JAMES II, son of James I, had eight known bastards:[36]

1. Henrietta (by Arabella Curchill),[37] married in 1684 Sir Henry Waldegrave.
2. James fitzJames, Duke of Berwick (by Arabella Churchill).[38]
3. Henry fitzJames, Duke of Albemarle (by Arabella Churchill).[39]
4. Ignatia, a nun (by Arabella Churchill).
5. Another unidentified child (by Arabella Churchill).
6. Lady Katherine Darnley (by Catharine Sedley),[40] married first, James, Earl of Angelesy; secondly, John Duke of Buckingham and Normandy.
7. & 8. Two sons (by Catherine Sedley) educated in Paris but died young.

MARY II, daughter of James II, co-monarch with William III, no surviving issue.

WILLIAM III, son of Mary, daughter of Charles I, by William II, Prince of Orange, had no known surviving issue, no claimed bastards.

CHARLES, called III (son of "The Old Pretender"), also "The Young Pretender," and "Bonny Prince Charlie,"[42] had by Clementina Walkinshaw, a daughter Charlotte Stuart[43] to whom he gave the title Duchess of Albany. She is stated to have had by Ferdinand de L. Rohan, Archbishop of Cambrai, who died in 1813, three bastards: Charles Edward Stuart, born in 1781, died in Dunkeld in 1854 aged 73, twice married but apparently died s.p. Aglea and Mary, the two daughters not further seen. The Young Pretender is frequently credited with other bastards, but none have been proven. Gen. Charles Edward Stuart, Baron Rohenstadt, sometimes stated to be a son of Charles, was actually his grandson, son of Charlotte, as above. Two brothers claiming to be legitimate grandsons of Charles III, "John Sobieski Stuart" and "Charles Edward Stuart," both of whom styled themselves "Comte d'Albany," were actually John Hay Allen and Charles Stuart Hay Allen, sons of Capt. Thomas Allen, R.N. For details of their masquerade see Albany in the Complete Peerage.

HENRY, called IX, Cardinal York, brother of Charles, called III, had no known issue. With him ended the Stuart dynasty.

Emanuel Scrope Howe (brother of Scrope Howe, 1st Viscount Howe), who died in 1709. They had four sons and two daughters. Dudley Bard, born about 1666, was the son of Frances or Francesca, daughter of Sir Henry Bard. He was killed 13 June 1686 in the siege of Buda, apparently without issue.

33. There may be descendants of Mary Tudor in the Americas too. Anya Seton in her book Devil Water (1962) recites the tale of a daughter (by a secret first marriage) of Charles Radclyffe, Lord Derwentwater, second son of this marriage, and successor to his brother James, as having married and come to Virginia, where she left descendants. Miss Seton claims access to records to substantiate the story. It is interesting to note that a similar story about a daughter of the same name (illegitimate) of Sir Charles, is current in Charleston, S.C., where a Dr. James Wilson over a century ago wrote down a slightly variant tale claiming to be her descendant. The author has seen no factual evidence to support either story.

He married in Pittstown, N. Y., 28 Feb. 1793, CYNTHIA WHIPPLE, born 17 Sept. 1768, living in Utica in 1840.

Lyman Ellis and his brother Marvel Ellis enlisted as fifers in Capt. Cushing's Company in 1777, when both were mere boys. A deposition, dated 11 Sept. 1840, by Lyman Ellis was presented on behalf of his sister-in-law, Cynthia (Whipple) Ellis, then widow of his brother Marvel, in which he swore that his brother was born in Mendon, and gave an account of his service. He said that about 1786 Marvel removed to Pittstown, where the deponent already resided. He added that Marvel had married Cynthia Whipple there and that on 4 Feb. 1794 they had jointly purchased from Daniel McCormick a tract of land in the County of Washington, N. Y., "on the West side of Lake Champlaine" (a copy of which deed was attached); and that there the daughter, Elizabeth Harriet, had been born. Finally, he deposed "that he and the said Marvel removed from Pittstown to Troy, Rennselaer County, N. Y. in the year 1795 or 1796." A deposition by Cynthia Ellis, widow of Marvel Ellis, dated 14 Aug. 1840, gives her marriage date and furnishes a Bible record showing births of their children and the date of death of her husband and their daughters. Both depositions state that Marvel Ellis served in the Regiment of Col. Revere (Revolutionary Pension Record W-16250, National Archives). We note that the celebrated Paul Revere served for a time at Ft. William in Boston Harbor as a Captain of artillery.

Children (Bible record in pension claim):

i. ELIZABETH HARRIET,[6] b. 22 Jan. 1794; d. 2 Aug. 1797.
ii. ELIZABETH HARRIET, b. 4 Aug. 1797; d. 1 Dec. 1817 "in the 21st yr. of her age."
iii. MAHLON MARVEL, b. 31 Oct. 1801; m. 6 Oct. 1847 LUCINDA FIFIELD. They had at least one child.

ROYAL BYE-BLOWS III*
ILLEGITIMATE DESCENDANTS OF THE SCOTTISH KINGS TO JAMES VI

By WALTER LEE SHEPPARD, JR., M.S., F.A.S.G., of Havertown, Pa.

The writer has arbitrarilly started this list with Malcolm II (Mac Kenneth). Little is known about the marital status of the earlier kings, but those seeking data on them may wish to consult the references noted.[1]

An interesting feature of Scottish history is the Competition for the Crown in 1290, which resulted from the deaths, within a short period, of all those closely related by blood to the immediate Royal House. This necessitated making a decision between a large number of claimants, thirteen of whom were related by blood, and one, Eric of Norway, by his marriage to a princess of the blood. Of the thirteen blood claimants it is interesting to note that seven based their claims on descents from bastards. The Competition was renewed seven years later when John Balliol surrendered the Crown to King Edward I of England, but at that time the succession of the Bruce was a foregone conclusion.[2]

MALCOLM II, reigned 1005-1034, son of Kenneth II (reigned 971-995), left no known bastards, and no sons. He had three daughters of whom (1) Bethoc married Crinan and was the mother of Duncan I; and (2) Donada married Finlac of Moray and was the mother of Macbeth (below).[3]

DUNCAN I, reigned 1034-1040, had no known bastards, but three, or perhaps four, children: Malcolm III (Canmore); Donald Bane; Melmare, ancestor of the Earls of Atholl; and perhaps Madach.[4]

MACBETH, reigned 1040-1057, had no known issue. He married as her second husband Gruoch, daughter of Bode, a son of Kenneth III (cousin of Malcolm II) and grandson of Dubh, the brother of Kenneth II. By her first husband Gillacomen, she had a son Lulach.[5]

LULACH "the Simple", reigned for only seven months before he was assassinated in 1058. He had a son Malsnechtal and a daughter whose son Angus succeeded to the earldom of Moray and was associated with Malcolm, natural son of Alexander I, in a rising against David I in 1130.[6]

MALCOLM III Canmore, reigned 1058-1093, had no known bastards. By his first wife Ingeborg, widow of Thorfin, Earl of Caithness and Orkney, and daughter of Jarl Finn Arnason, he had Duncan II; by Margaret, daughter of Edward Aethling, he had (with others) Edgar, Alexander I, and David I, as well as a daughter Eadgith (otherwise Matilda) who married Henry I, King of England, and had issue.[7]

* Part I published in THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 94, April 1965; part II published in THE REGISTER, vol. 121, p. 185, July 1967.

DONALD BANE, reigned 1093-1094, and again 1094-1097, had no known bastards.[8] His granddaughter and heiress Hextilda (daughter of his daughter Bethoc by Huchtred of Tyndale, son of Waltheof), married Richard Comyn. Their descendant John Comyn, "the Black Comyn", was a Competitor for the Crown in 1291.

DUNCAN II, reigned half of 1094, had no known bastards.[9] His son William fitzDuncan had a son Donald MacWilliam who may have been illegitimate, who claimed the Crown against William the Lion, and was killed in 1187. A son of Donald named Guthred raised a rebellion in 1211-12 but was captured and killed. Another son Donald Bane, was killed in 1215.

EDGAR, reigned 1097-1107, died unmarried 8 Jan. 1106/7 and had no known issue.[10]

ALEXANDER I, 1107-1124, left no legitimate issue by his wife, Sibyl, illegitimate daughter of Henry I of England (THE REGISTER, vol. 119, p. 96, April 1965).[11] He had a bastard son Malcolm.

DAVID I, "The Saint", reigned 1124-1153, had no known bastards.[12] His son Henry,[13] Earl of Huntingdon, was the father of Malcolm IV, William the Lion, and David, Earl of Huntingdon, and three daughters of whom Ada married Florent, Count of Holland, and had a son who was a Competitor in 1291. Henry had a bastard daughter Marjorie, whose grandson Robert de Pinckney was a Competitor in 1291. The 3rd son:

David,[14] Earl of Huntingdon, had three known daughters (1) Margaret married Alan of Galloway, whose daughter Devorguilla married John Balliol and had a son John Balliol, successful Competitor, who became King in 1292; (2) Isabel married Robert Bruce (Brus) whose son Robert was a Competitor in 1291, whose grandson became Robert I; (3) Ada married Sir Henry de Hastings whose grandson Sir John de Hastings was a Competitor,[15] but deferred to Balliol. Earl David had also, illegitimate: i. Henry of Stirling, d.s.p.; ii. Henry of Brechin, held the Lordship of Brechin, and by a wife Julian, had issue; iii. Ada married Malise, son of Earl Ferteth, and brother of Earl Gilbert of Strathern, issue.

MALCOLM IV, "the Maiden", reigned 1153-1165, died unmarried leaving a bastard son whose name is unknown who died in his father's lifetime.[16]

WILLIAM, "the Lion", reigned 1165-1214[17] had only one surviving legitimate son, Alexander II, and at least six bastards:

i. Robert de London.
ii. Henry Galithtly, whose son Patrick was a Competitor in 1291.[18]
iii. Isabella (by a daughter of Robert Avenal) married (1) 1183 Robert Bruce, no issue; married (2) 1191 Robert de Ros, whose great-grandson William de Ros was a Competitor.[19]

iv. Ada married 1184 Patrick de Dunbar, 5th Earl. Her great-grandson Patrick de Dunbar was a Competitor.[20]
v. Margaret (by a daughter of Adam de Hythus) married Eustace de Vesci. Her grandson William de Vesci was a Competitor.[21]
vi. Aufrica married William de Say. Her great-grandson Roger de Mandeville was a Competitor.[22]

ALEXANDER II (died 1249) had only two known children, his son and heir Alexander III, and a bastard daughter Marjorie who married Sir Alan Durward,[23] and whose grandson Sir Nicholas de Soulis was a Competitor.[24]

ALEXANDER III (died 1286) had no known bastards.[25] Two sons predeceased him together with his daughter Margaret who had married King Erik of Norway and had an only daughter Margaret, "the Maid of Norway", who at the age of six was heir to her grandfather.

MARGARET,[26] "the Maid of Norway", died in 1290 aged seven, on the North Sea en route to her coronation, leaving the succession in doubt with many claimants, and finally it was resolved in favor of John Balliol.

JOHN BALLIOL, descendant of David I, "the Saint" (see above), compelled to resign 1296,[27] had a son Edward, later King Edward Balliol, but no known bastards.

ROBERT I, the Bruce (died 1329)[28] (see above under Henry of Huntingdon), succeeded John Balliol after several years of struggle; married (1) Isabella, daughter of Donald, 10th Earl of Mar, by whom he had a daughter Marjorie who married Walter the High Steward, killed by a fall 1316 leaving an only son Robert Stewart who became Robert II. Robert the Bruce married (2) Elizabeth, daughter of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, by whom he had sons David II and John (d.y.) and daughters (1) Mathilda[29] married Thomas Isaac and had two daughters Catharine d.s.p., and Joanna married John, Lord of Lorn; and (2) Margaret married William, 4th Earl of Sutherland, and had two sons John, d.v.p. and William, 5th Earl. King Robert I had also the following bastards:

i. Sir Robert Bruce, Lord of Liddesdale & Sprouston, killed 12 Aug. 1332.
ii. Walter Bruce of Odistoun, d.v.p.
iii. Nigel (or Neil) Bruce of Carrick, killed at Neville's Cross 17 Oct. 1346.
iv. Margaret married Robert Glen, living 29 Feb. 1363/4.
v. Elizabeth married Sir Walter Oliphant of Gask.[30]
vi. Christian Bruce of Carrick, living 1328/9.

EDWARD BRUCE, Earl of Carrick, King of Ireland, was the younger brother and (in 1315) the designated heir of Robert; he died in 1318[31] He obtained dispensation to marry Isabel, daughter of William, Earl of Ross, but there is no record of the marriage. His son Alexander Bruce, created Earl of Carrick about 1329 by David II, was by Isabel of Atholl, sister of David de Strathbegie, who was not his wife though she is so called by Balfour. Edward died s.p. legitimate, leaving probably two bastards:

i. Alexander, Earl of Carrick, mar. Eleanor, sister of the 1st Earl of Douglas, had no sons but is said to have a dau. Eleanor who mar. Sir William de Cunningham.
ii. Thomas, falsely stated to have succeeded to the Earldom of Carrick on death of his brother Alexander. He has been variously identified as (1) an illegitimate son of Robert I, by whom he was created Earl of Ross for life, which story can be positively disproven; (2) as descended from John de Brus, a younger brother of the Competitor (Robert I's grandfather), which is possible although this line has not been investigated; (3) as a son of Edward Bruce which is more generally accepted although positive proof has not been found. This Thomas was the ancestor of the Bruces of Clackmannan, Earls of Elgin, Barons Kinloss.
iii. Robert. Edward Bruce is often credited with a bastard of the name (perhaps his eldest) who is said to have succeeded to the earldom of Carrick upon Edward's death and to have died s.p. in 1332 when he was succeeded in the earldom by Alexander. However, this seems to be a confusion of names with that of Edward's brother, the King; no such son Robert appears to have existed.

DAVID II, succeeded in 1329, died in 1371, twice married but left no issue by either wife.[32] Although he had many mistresses including an English favorite, Katharine Mortimer, there are no known bastards.

EDWARD BALLIOL, crowned by the English at Scone in 1332, was chased back to England three months later; he was 'off-and-on' king in competition to David II, until he surrendered his crown to England in 1356 where he died s.p.s. 1363. No known surviving issue, legitimate or bastard.[33]

ROBERT II, grandson of Robert I, son of Marjorie Bruce and Walter Stewart; crowned 1371, died 1390; twice married.[34] He had nine children by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Adam Muir, all born before legal marriage, later legitimated; the eldest, John, Earl of Carrick, ascended the throne as Robert III (see below); the third, Robert, Duke of Albany (see below); the fourth, Alexander, Earl of Buchan (see below). He married (2) Euphemia, daughter of Hugh, Earl of Ross, widow of John Randolph, Earl of Moray, and had by her four more children. He had eight known bastards:

i. Sir John Stewart of Rowallon, "the Black Stewart," hereditary sheriff of Bute.[35]
ii. Thomas Stewart, Archdeacon of St. Andrews.
iii. Alexander Stewart, Canon of Glasgow.
iv. Sir John Stewart of Dundonald, "the Red Stewart," lord of Burley, Clerk of the Audit, Capt. of Dunbarton Castle, where killed in an attack 1425 by his grandnephew, James, son of Murdac, Duke of Albany; married Elizabeth, daughter of William, Lord of Graham.
v. Alexander Stewart of Inverlunon, charter 3 Jan. 1377/8, erected into a Barony. Remainder to his brothers of the whole blood, James & Sir John of Cairdney.
vi. James Stewart, received a charter in 1383 for part of Kinfauns, also in a charter of 25 Dec. 1372. Living 1391. Remainder to his brothers Alexander and Sir John.
vii. Sir John Stewart of Cairdney, received land in charter 15 Jan. 1382/3; remainder to his brothers James and Alexander. Descendants.
viii. Walter Stewart, said to be a 4th brother, and in the remainders for Cairdney.

ROBERT STEWART (1340?-1420), Duke of Albany,[36] 3rd legitimated son of Robert II, had a son Murdac,[37] 2nd Duke, whose children included (1) Walter who by a lady named Campbell had two bastard sons: i. Andrew, lord of Avondale; and ii. Arthur; by (?) Janet Erskine he had another bastard named iii. Walter of Morphie from whom descended the Earls of Castle Stewart in Ireland. These three sons were legitimated 17 Apr. 1479. Possibly he had other bastards. The Duke had a younger son, Sir James, who had by a lady named Macdonald a bastard i. James Beg from whom come the Stewarts of Ardverlich; and a daughter ii. Mathilda who married William Edmondston of Duntreath. The story frequently told that James (or alternately Walter) had by a lady of the house of the Lord of the Isles, seven bastards: Andrew, Walter, Murdac, Arthur, Robert, Alexander, James, is a confusion and amplification of the above.

ALEXANDER STEWART, Earl of Buchan,[38] 4th legitimated son of Robert II, had no legitimate issue, but seven bastards: i. Alexander, Earl of Mar, d.s.p. legit. but had a bastard son Thomas d.s.p. & v.p., and a bastard daughter Janet mar. Lachlan M'Lean of Dewart, who received a grant of rents from James II; ii. Sir Andrew of Sandhuach; iii. Duncan; iv. Walter; v. Robert of Atholl; vi. James; vii. Margaret mar. Robert, Earl of Sutherland.

ROBERT III, eldest son of Robert II, baptised John, crowned 1390, died 1406, had seven children by his wife, including James I,[39] and two known bastards:

i. James Stewart of Kilbride, flourished 1388-1400.
ii. Sir John Stewart of Auchingowan and Ardgowan 1390, ancestor of the Shaw Stewarts of Ardgowan, Blackhall and Greenoch.

JAMES I, eldest son of Robert III, crowned 1424, assassinated 1437, married 1424 Joan Beaufort, granddaughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, son of Edward III, and by her had twin sons Alexander (d.y.) and James II, and six daughters.[40] He is said to have been deeply in love with her and to be the only Stewart King of England who had neither mistresses nor bastards. His widow married (2) 1439 James Stewart, Lord of Lorn, "the Black Knight of Lorn" (see above under Robert I), the son of Sir John Stewart, Lord of Lorn, jure uxoris, by his wife Isabel,[29] daughter of Joanna Isaac (or Ysak), daughter of Mathilda Bruce and Thomas Isaac of Lorn. By this second marriage Joan had three sons: (1) Sir John Stewart, Earl of Atholl,[41] (2) Sir James Stewart, Earl of Buchan (who had bastards: James, ancestor of the Earls of Traquair,[42] and Agnes[43] married (1) Adam, Earl of Bothwell); (3) Andrew, Bishop of Moray.

JAMES II, reigned 1437-1460,[44] had four sons, including James III, and two daughters: (1) Mary who by 2nd husband James Lord Hamilton, had with others, Elizabeth, married Matthew 2nd Earl of Lennox; (2) Margaret who had a bastard daughter Margaret Crichton by William, 3rd Lord Crichton. The daughter had three marriages with issue by the third.[45] King James had also an illegitimate son John Stewart of Sticks and Ballechin, ancestor of the Stewarts of Ballechin, Perthshire.

JAMES III, reigned 1460-1488, had three sons including James IV and probably an illegitimate daughter who married a Logan of Restalrig.[46]

JAMES IV, reigned 1488-1513,[47] married Margaret Tudor, daughter of Henry VII of England and had two daughters and four sons, James V being the only child to survive infancy. His widow Margaret married 2nd, Archibald Douglas, 4th Earl of Angus, by whom she had an only daughter Margaret who married Matthew Stewart, 4th Earl of Lennox, whose eldest son Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley, became the 2nd husband of Mary, Queen of Scots, and father of James VI. King James IV had the following bastards:

i. Margaret (or Jane),[48] by Margaret Drummond; mar. (1) John, Lord Gordon of Huntley, and had issue; mar. (2) Sir John Drummond of Innerpeffry.
ii. Alexander Stewart, Archbishop of St. Andrews, by Marian Boyd.
iii. James Stewart, by Marian Boyd; when 8 years candidate for Abbacy of Dunfermline.
iv. Catherine,[49] by Marian Boyd; mar. James Douglas, 3rd Earl of Morton.
v. James Stewart,[50] Earl of Moray, by Janet Kennedy.
vi. Joan, by Agnes,[43] illegitimate dau. of James, Earl of Buchan (see above), by Margaret Murray who afterward mar. Adam, Earl of Bothwell; mar. Malcolm, Lord Fleming.[51]
vii. Henry (called Wemyss), who became Bishop of Galloway; by a lady named Wemyss.

JAMES V, reigned 1513-1542, had three legitimate children of whom only Mary, Queen of Scots, survived.[52] He had the following bastards:

i. Lord John Stewart, Prior of Coldingham, by Elizabeth, dau. of John Carmichael; legitimatized by Papal decree 1534, issue.[53]
ii. James Stewart "senior,"[54] Abbot of Kelso and Melrose, d.s.p. 25 Sept. 1557; by Elizabeth, dau. of Alexander Shaw.
iii. James Stewart "secundus," Earl of Moray, regent temp. Mary;[55] by Margaret, dau. of John, 5th Lord Erskine.
iv. James Stewart "tertius," apparently d. s.p.;[54] by Christina Barclay.
v. Robert Stewart, Earl of Orkney, Prior of Holyrood, many descendants;[56] by Euphemia, dau. of Alexander, Lord Elphinstone.
vi. Adam Stewart, Prior of Carthusian House, or of Charterhouse at Perth;[57] by Elizabeth, dau. of John, 3rd Earl of Lennox.
vii. A child, name unknown, by Elizabeth Beaten.
viii. Robert Stewart "secundus," Prior of Whithorn,[58] by an unknown mother.
ix. Joan, by Elizabeth Bethune; mar. Archibald, 5th Earl of Argyll.[59]
x. Margaret, by Elizabeth Bethune; proposed wife of Alexander, Master of Home, son of George, 4th Earl of Home. Her fate unknown; prob. d. s.p.[60]

MARY, Queen of Scots,[61] reigned 1543-1567, had by her second husband, Henry Stewart, Lord Darnley, an only son and heir, James VI of Scotland who ascended the English Throne as James I. Mary's third husband was James Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell, d. s.p. legit., son of Patrick, who was son of Adam by his wife Agnes, illegitimate daughter of James, Earl of Buchan[43] (see above). His sister, Lady Jane Hepburn, became the wife of Lord John Stewart,[53] Prior of Coldingham, bastard of James V, and their son Francis Stewart Hepburn[62] was created Earl of Bothwell by James VI (and I of England), and was subsequently attainted.

JAMES VI, King of Scotland (1567) and I of England (1603), son of Mary, Queen of Scots (see THE REGISTER, vol. 121, p. 187, July 1967).

24. D.N.B., vol. 16, p. 266: Alan Durward "the Usher," justiciar, regent, Earl of Atholl 1233-35, may have mar. (2) Isabella, Countess of Atholl, after the death of her husband, Thomas (who d. s.p. legit.), and may have fathered a daughter Lora by her who contested the succession with Isabella's sister Forflissa, unless this is a misdated record of the earlier contest between Isabella herself and Forflissa. D.N.B. (see also A. O. Anderson, Early Sources of Scottish History, vol. 2, p. 571) says Alan sought Papal legitimation for his daughters by Marjorie, illegitimate dau. of Alexander II; further wording shows Nicholas de Soulis the claimant to be a descendant of Marjorie. Ermengard, wife of William de Soulis, was a daughter of Marjorie by Alan Durward, her husband. The request for legitimation was for Marjorie herself to make her daughters eligible to succeed to the Crown. Names of other daughters of Marjorie have not been found. D.N.B. suggests Thomas Durward, a knight in 1258, was a son of Alan. Another Alan Durward flourished about 1306, apparently connected with the Soulis family of claimants. Alan was the son of Thomas de Lundin, "Ostarius" or "the Doorward." See also S.P., vol. 1, p. 6, 422; vol. 2, p. 256; vol. 8, p. 249-50. The descent of the claimant was: Ermengard Durward mar. William (son of Nicholas de Soulis (a border chief)) d. 1264. Their son, Sir Nicholas, the Competitor, married Margaret, 5th dau. of Alexander Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had William, involved in a conspiracy to seize the throne in 1320, and Sir John who was killed at Dundalk. Agnes, Countess of Strathern, widow of Malise, also involved in the conspiracy, was probably the 2nd dau. of Alexander Comyn and sister-in-law of Sir Nicholas. Transactions of the Dumfrieshire and Galloway Natural History and Antiquarian Society, 3rd ser., vol. 24, p. 163-193.

SOME LIGHT ON THE MARRIAGE OF ROBERT AND MARY ROYCE OF CONNECTICUT

By Clarence Leslie Hewitt, Jr., of Clearwater, Fla.

The limbo of Robert Royce's origin and ancestry still seems to be impenetrable despite efforts over many years to clear it up. There is ample evidence that he and his wife lived in Connecticut—in Stratford, New London, and Wallingford—and that he left his mark on contemporary history of that period. It is well recorded that his wife's name was Mary but it is not at all clear that her surname was Sims.

To those of us who are descendants of Robert and Mary Royce, the following report will prove disappointing. The writer's keen interest in tracing the English roots of his family had given rise to the hope that some day a leisurely trip to England, with an automobile to provide convenient and adequate transportation would enable him to establish beyond question the link between the American and English families. In 1965 we took advantage of the opportunity afforded by recent retirement, and with our automobile, indulged ourselves to the limit in this fascinating but frustrating experience.

The marriage of Robert Royce and Mary Sims has been stated frequently as having occurred in Martock, co. Somerset, 4 June 1634. The date and place have no apparent validity as the following account of recent research seems to establish.

The search for this couple's origin and ancestry must of necessity start with the earliest record of either person. Robert was an early settler in Stratford, Conn., but it is not recorded how he got there or from whence he came. He had land—lot #74—recorded in his name as early as 16 Sept. 1648. In 1658 he appeared again in the Stratford land records as Robert "Rise" (New page, old folio #62, vol. I).

He appeared next in New London in 1657, a year prior to the last record of him in Stratford, where he was named among the first sixteen members of the New London Church. The town granted him the original lot on Post Hill in 1657; he was constable in 1660; a member of the General Assembly in 1661, 1667, and 1669; and townsman in 1663 and 1668. In 1663 he was granted land by the town to settle his two sons, Samuel and Nathaniel, and in 1667 was appointed to keep an "ordinary" (tavern) and was freed from training, probably on account of his age.

Robert died in New London in 1676. His unsigned will was probated there and is recorded in the County Court records, vol. III, p. 87. His inventory was presented 22 Sept. 1676.

Mary continued to live in the Post Hill homestead until 1688 when, on 4 February, she signed an agreement with her children consenting to the sale of the property of which she had life use. She died intestate in Wallingford where, on 14 July 1697, her son Samuel was granted the administration of her estate (New Haven County Records, vol. I, p, 251).

Many reputable sources have tried to answer the question as to how Robert and Mary got to Stratford and from whence they came. Two of the best known references are found in F. M. Calkins' History of New London (p. 293-295); and James Savage's Genealogical Dictionary of New England (vol. 3, p. 570).

These sources associate Robert Royce of Stratford with Robert Royce of Boston who in 1637 became involved with the Rev. John Wheelwright and Mrs. Ann Hutchinson in the contemporary religious controversy and was disarmed. This Robert (with his wife Elizabeth) came to Boston in 1630 in the Winthrop Fleet, on the ship Francis.

Charles Edward Banks, in his book The Winthrop Fleet of 1630 (1930), p. 90, gives this item from the passenger list:

> "Royse (Ryse), Robert.—Boston. Possibly from Exning, co. Suffolk, No. 137 in church list of 1630. Freeman, 1 April 1634 (Mass. Col. Rec., vol. 1, p. 368)." and "Elizabeth. Wife of Robert."

On 27 Aug. 1965, the writer visited St. Martin's Parish Church, Exning, and, with the help of the Vicar, the Rev. Mr. Edmund, examined the original parish registers which are in remarkably good condition, albeit the English script is difficult reading. Many Royses are recorded but no wedding of a Robert and Elizabeth, or of a Robert and Mary Sims was found. A Robert Royse did marry Mary Lawes (or Hawes) on 11 Oct. 1602 but nothing was found that might link this couple to the American immigrant.

A study of the Banks' Manuscripts in the Rare Book Room, the Library of Congress, reveals the evidence supporting the "Royce" entry in his Topographical Dictionary of 2885 Emigrants to New England (1620-1650). There is no doubt that Banks made quite a

According to the Tewkesbury Abbey Chronicle,[c] BRICTRIC, son of Algar, otherwise known as Brictric Meaw, a great Thegn of the time of Edward the Confessor, held, with Tewkesbury, various lordships in Worcester, Gloucester, Somerset, and other counties. Maud, afterwards wife of William the Conqueror, in her youth wished to marry Brictric, who refused her. When she became Queen she imprisoned him, and on his death shortly afterwards his manors, the (later) "honour of Gloucester," were given to her. On her death in 1083 the King took possession. After the Conqueror's death William II gave this honour to Robert FitzHamon in reward for his services to the King and the King's father.

WILLIAM FITZEUSTACE, possibly son of Eustace II, Count of Boulogne, is called by Dr. David Powel, in his additions to Caradoc's Historie of Cambria, "Earl of Gloucester," but there is no good evidence of his having held the earldom.[d]

He witnessed charters of the King from about Apr. 1113.(g) He fought at the battle of Brémulé, 20 Aug. 1119, where Henry I defeated Louis VI.(h) Between June and Sep. 1122 he was cr. EARL OF GLOUCESTER.(i) In 1123 he brought a force to assist in the capture of the castle of Brionne, which was held by the rebellious Norman barons. In 1126 he had the custody of his uncle, Duke Robert of Normandy, as a prisoner at Bristol,(j) and later at Cardiff.(k) In 1127 he did homage to the Empress Maud, recognising her as his father's successor in the kingdom.(l) On this occasion he had a dispute with his cousin Stephen of Blois as to precedence, which was decided against him. the Abbey of Neath.[a] He was also a benefactor of Gloucester.[b] At the Council of Northampton in 1131 he took precedence among the five Earls who attended it.[c] In 1133 he was sent by the King to Bayeux, after the death of Bishop Richard, to enquire as to the fees and services due to the see by its barons, knights and vavasours.[d] He was present at the King's death at Lions-le-Forêt in Dec. 1135, and had 60,000 livres from him, apparently as executor.[e] On Stephen's accession to the English Crown and his recognition as Duke by the Normans, Robert gave up Falaise to his agents, but he removed his father's treasure.[f] In Mar. 1136 he returned to England, and after Easter did homage[g] for his English lands, and when Stephen granted his Charter of Liberties he was a witness.[h] At about this time or in the following year he founded St. James's Priory at Bristol as a cell to Tewkesbury, giving to the Lady Chapel of the Priory every tenth stone, while building the keep of Bristol Castle at the same time.[i] In 1137 he accompanied Stephen to Normandy, but they quarrelled,[j] and next year his English and Welsh estates were forfeited.[k] Thereupon he prepared for war with Stephen and took up the cause of his half-sister Maud in Normandy, obtaining the surrender of Caen and Bayeux to her husband.[l] In Sep. 1139 he landed been a composition instead of one-third of the total realised. In most cases at this early period the third penny appears to have been actually one-third of the sum for which the profits were farmed—e.g., in Essex it amounted to £40 10*s.* 10*d.* It remained at this figure for more than two hundred years—and, indeed, as long as it can be traced in records. At some time, therefore, this odd amount probably was offered and accepted as a composition, for it is inconceivable that throughout so long a period the amount paid by the farmer never varied. The third penny in the case of Gloucester remained at £20, which is the sum for which the third penny was compounded in most of the grants of earldoms in the fourteenth century.

in England with Maud and took her to Arundel Castle,[a] and became her commander-in-chief in the civil war that ensued. In 1140 he burnt Nottingham,[b] and in Feb. 1141 he and his son-in-law, Ranulph, Earl of Chester, relieved Lincoln and took Stephen prisoner,[c] sending him to Bristol.[d] He accompanied Maud in her progress to Winchester and London, and when the citizens drove her out fled with her to Oxford. He took part in the fighting at Winchester and helped Maud to escape from the city, but was captured 14 Sep. (1141) at Stockbridge and taken prisoner to Rochester.[e] Shortly afterwards he was exchanged, without concessions on either side,[f] for Stephen, who was set at liberty on 1 Nov., and Robert then joined Maud at Bristol, and with her proceeded to Oxford. In June 1142 Maud sent him over to her husband, Geoffrey of Anjou, to urge him to invade England. It would appear that on this occasion Robert entered into a treaty of alliance with Miles of Gloucester, Earl of Hereford.[g] Geoffrey declined to help until he had conquered Normandy, whereupon Robert joined him in his campaign.[h] On hearing that Maud was besieged in Oxford, Robert hurried back to help her, taking with him her son, afterwards Henry II. He captured Wareham and other places,[i] and on Maud's escape from Oxford he and Henry met her at Wallingford, and they went to Bristol, which was Robert's chief residence till 1146. In 1143 Robert defeated Stephen at Wilton, and in 1144 blockaded Malmesbury, Stephen refusing battle; but Maud's party was now so much reduced that Stephen was able to take Faringdon, which Robert had fortified.[j] In the spring of 1147 Robert took Henry, Maud's son, back to Wareham and sent him over to Anjou; and in the same year he founded Margam Abbey.[k] He m. Mabel,[l] da. and h. of Robert FitzHamon, by Sibyl, da. of Roger (de Montgomery),

The granting of the earldom is connected by chroniclers with the marriage of Robert and Mabel, but the date (1122) raises a difficulty, for it is unlikely that the King would have kept his son waiting for 15 years, or the heiress waiting so long. The local tradition in Robert of Gloucester (Rolls Ser., vol. ii, p. 623) that Mabel objected to the marriage because Robert had no to-name [surname], and when the King said he should be called FitzRoy replied that that would not go down to her children (for they would be merely FitzRobert, not FitzRoy), and that then Henry made him Earl of Gloucester, may refer to two stages: (1) At the time of the marriage he was called FitzRoy (and so he is described as filius Regis in the charters he attested); (2) later, when the children began to grow up, Mabel made the further complaint that this name would not descend to them, and so the King, in order to please her, made Robert Earl of Gloucester. The argument might appeal to a feudal lord, who ought not to marry a ward to his (or her) disparagement.

He was patron of William of Malmesbury, who wrote the Historia Novella at his request and dedicated to him the Gesta Regum (Rolls Ser.). In the dedicatory address he is eulogised by the author in the following terms: "You have the magnanimity of your grandfather, the munificence of your uncle, the prudence of your father, and while you eagerly copy their outlines you have the special glory of attending to literature . . . looking on scholars with kindness, receiving them with pleasure and letting them depart with reluctance." APPENDIX D[a]

HENRY I'S ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN

Henry I and Charles II were the only Kings of England to beget a large brood of bastards. Charles II's children have already been catalogued in vol. VI, Appendix F; from which it appears that Charles, who had no legitimate issue, is credited with 8 sons and 6 daughters, but that the paternity of one of those sons is not certain. This record is easily beaten by Henry I. Besides his 2, or possibly 3, legitimate children,[b] it seems fairly certain that he was the father of at least 9 sons and 11 daughters. Moreover it is possible that one of the 9 sons really represents 2 brothers of the same name; and finally it remains doubtful whether a certain unnamed daughter of the King was identical with one of the 11 or was yet another addition to his extensive family.

No complete catalogue of Henry's bastards is given by any contemporary writer. However, Robert de Torigny, in his additions to the Gesta Normannorum Ducum of William de Jumièges, enumerates 6 sons, mentioning the marriage of the first, gives the marriages of 6 daughters, of whom he names only three, and refers to another daughter, also unnamed, who was still unmarried when he wrote.[c] Particulars of Henry's other children have to be collected from different sources.[d]

It is impossible to set out the names of the children in the order in which they were born, as the date of birth is not known for any of them; nor is it possible to arrange them according to their maternal parentage,

(a) This Appendix is by Geoffrey H. White.

(b) Besides his 2 well-known children, William the Aetheling and the Empress Maud, Henry is said to have had by his 1st wife, a 2nd s. (and 3rd child), named Richard (Gerv. Cant., Rolls Ser., vol. i, p. 92); who, if he really existed, must have d. young. He is ignored in the Dict. Nat. Biog. (sub Henry I).

(c) William de Jumièges, Gesta Normannorum Ducum (ed. Marx, Soc. de l'Histoire de Normandie), pp. 306–08—additions by Robert de Torigny.

(d) There is no satisfactory modern list of Henry's bastards. A table of the "Illegitimate Issue of William II, Henry I and Stephen" is given by Cobbe, Norman Kings of England, Table III; but, like most of his tables, it is very inaccurate. The best list is probably that printed by Ramsay, Foundations of England, vol. ii, pp. 338–40, which enumerates 7 sons and 9 daughters (2 unnamed); but one of these ladies was not the child of Henry. The same 16 children are listed by Lord Onslow, The Empress Maud, p. 199. The Dict. Nat. Biog. does not profess to give more than a selection of the children.

for in most instances this is not recorded.[a] Indeed, Robert de Torigny does not name the mother of any of the 13 children whom he enumerates except the unmarried daughter, although his omissions may occasionally be made good from other sources.

The sons were as follows, nos. 1 to 6 being those named by Robert de Torigny. He states that no. 1 was the eldest son, and it is certain from other evidence that no. 2 was the 2nd son;[b] but it is doubtful how far the others follow any chronological or other order. It seems likely that no. 6 was 3rd of the six, because when Robert wrote, probably not earlier than 1142,[c] nos. 3, 4 and 5 were still young and unmarried (or so he says); but no. 6 had died soon after his father,[d] being then a married man, leaving issue. Where the 3 remaining sons should be inserted is again uncertain; but no. 8 should probably follow no. 2, and no. 9 come after no. 3, each pair being apparently children of the same mother. On the other hand, it is possible that Henry had two or more mistresses simultaneously.

(1) ROBERT the KING'S SON, styled also DE CAEN,[e] the name and identity of whose mother are uncertain;[f] b. probably circa 1090; cr. in 1122 (June–Sep.) EARL OF GLOUCESTER; m. Maud (named also Mabel and Sibyl),[g] da. and h. of Robert FITZHAMON, LORD OF GLAMORGAN, by Sibyl, da. of Roger (DE MONTGOMERY), 1st EARL OF SHREWSBURY; d. 31 Oct. 1147 at Bristol; bur. at the Priory of St. James, Bristol. For fuller particulars of Robert and for his issue, see ante, vol. v, pp. 683–86, sub GLOUCESTER.[h]

(a) However, an attempt will be made, after discussing the children separately, to group as many as possible under their respective mothers.

(b) See p. 107, note "b"; cf. p. 107, notes "a" and "c" below.

(c) Apparently between 1142 and 1150, probably finishing his interpolations and additions about 1149 (Marx, William de Jumièges, p. xxviii).

(d) Idem, p. 307.

(e) He attested charters regularly as Robert "filius Regis"; but he is twice styled Robert de Caen (de Cadomo) by Orderic (ed. Le Prévost), vol. v, pp. 121, 122. The statement in the Dict. Nat. Biog. that Robert was born at Caen, citing Orderic, seems to be a deduction from these passages. That he was "known . . . as Robert 'de Caen' from his birthplace" is also assumed by Round, Family Origins, p. 214.

(f) The statement by Pezet, cited ante, vol. v, p. 683, that she was Sibyl, da. of Robert Corbet, a burgess of Caen, seems to arise from confusion with Henry I's mistress Sibyl, da. of Robert Corbet of Alcester (see below).

(g) Her name seems to have been Maud (Round, Cal. Docs., no. 799; Orderic, vol. iii, p. 318); but she is called Mabel by William of Malmesbury, Hist. Novella (Rolls Ser.), pp. 529, 587, and by Robert of Gloucester (Rolls Ser.), ll. 8876, 8883, and Sibyl by Robert de Torigny, in his additions to Will. de Jumièges, p. 306. As Earl Robert claimed to be a banner-bearer (signifer) of the see of Bayeux by hereditary right (Rec. des Hist. de France, vol. xxiii, p. 700), that office was probably hereditary in his wife's family, and may have been appurtenant to the lands which she inherited.

(h) The statement there (ante, vol. v, p. 686, note "b") that Robert had a da. Mabel, who m. Aubrey de Vere, is certainly mistaken.

Ancestry & Descendants of Marlin Plumb

Editor's note:
This short summary by Edith C. Thatcher, obtained by DEW from the LDS Library (film 1032969) in 1984, was very blurry in the original, but it is still readable (with difficulty). Be aware that Thatcher's conclusion about the connection to royalty of the Elizabeth Norton who married John Plumb was rejected by DEW. See the editor's note at Norton family.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE PLUMB LINE

The oldest Plumb we have record of on our direct line is John Plumbe, born about 1505 in Coppesfield, Essex, England. They lived there and in Shayne's Hall, Great Feldham, Essex, England.

It is through the 11th great grandmother, Elizabeth Norton, who married John Plumb, 24 Nov 1668, that we branch out into the many lines, and royalty. The Norton (and Norville as they change to earlier) goes back into the Le Sieur Norville who came to England with William the Conqueror, as his Constable. John Norton came to America with his family in about 1650. Sir John Norton was born about 1421 in Sharpenhow, Beds., Eng. He married Maude de Grey (they were 13th great grandparents), daughter of Lord John de Grey, and f Anne de Ferrers, (who also used the name Dispencer, as her mother was Joan or Anne Dispencer. Lord John de Grey was the Lord of Wilton, and Justice of North Wales, also Governor of Carnerven Castle. He died between 1322-1349.

Ann de Ferrers was the daughter of William de Ferrers, Lord of Groby, and the de Ferrers line was in Derby, they being the Earls of Derby, for several generations. I believe they came to England with William the Conqueror, and the first one of them (22nd great grandfather) was Walkelyn or Walchelin de Ferrers, who was born in Galenius, Normandy, and died about 1036.

William de Ferrers, the 7th Earl of Derby (Anne de Ferrers grandfather) married Margaretde Quincy, daughter of Roger de Quincy and Helen MacDougal, Princess of Scotland (Hence the Scotland line of Kings.) Helen was daughter of David le Scott, and Maud Kevelioc. The Kevelioc line goes into Randle le Meschin and Cohun. They came to Wales in the 1100's from Normandy.

David's father, Henry le Scott, Earl of Huntingdon married Ada, or Adeline deWarren (21st great grandparents); and Henry le Scott, Earl of Huntingdon was son of King David I, King of Scotland, who married Matilda, or Maud. David I, was son of Malcolm III born about 1031, who married St. Margaret Atheling, daughter of Prince Edward, born 1016, who was called the Exile. Malcolm III, was the son Of Duncan I, and Grandson of Crinan the Thane of Atholl, and Princess Bethoc, also called Beatrix of Scotland.

Prince Edward's line goes on up through Kim ni l "ironsides" Athelred II "Unready", and the others through Alfred the Great whoin is the English Royal line we go into. Alfred Great, 30th Gnf. Another part of the Pedigree goes to William the Conqueror, 23rd Gnf.

Coming another way, Roger de Quincy's parents were Maire de Quincy(Magna Charta Baron) who married Margaret de Beaumont (Beaumont) in 1170. Her lines were the Earls of Leicester, Eng., and three generations above her Robert de Beaumont married Isabel de Vermandois, in 1096. In some places she is called Isabel Elizabeth. Her father, Hugh the Great or Magnus was a n of Henry the First King of France, and his wife, Anne of Russia, Queen. Incidentally her grandfather was Olaf Skotkonung, King of Sweden)

Isabel de Vermandois' mother was Adelheid (Adelaide) of Vermandois, daughter of Hubert the 4th, who was sone of Henry the 3rd who was son of Edward I, King of England (29th great grandfather)

Going back to the Norton's, Dennice Cholmely, of St. Anne's, Blackfriars, London (chr in 1562) was the wife of William Norton. Her Cholmeley(Cholmondeley) line goes back to Cholmondeleigh Cheshire, 1175, and John Belward 1055 of Malpas, Cheshire. It branches out into a lot of Cheshire Pedigrees, Kingsley, Dutton, Brereton, Vernon, Done, Sandbach, le Botor, or Thornton, Venables, Vernon, Bromley, Chetwinton, Praers, Berkeley, Massy, and a number of other early Cheshire families. George Ormerod's History of Cheshire has some 154 great-great grandparents and their families.

Well, so much for the ancestors. I guess it is up to the descendants to live their lives in a way that they can be able to hold their heads up in the world. It is the way WE live OUR lives that counts.

SUNNO, or HUNNO, King A.D. 186, had much war with the Romans and Gauls. Upon the death of the Emperor Severus, A.D. 211, he entered Gaul and wasted it with fire and sword; d. 213, reigned twenty-eight years. His son, HILDERIC, King A.D. 213. He built a castle in an isle of the Rhine and called it Hildeburg, 214; reduced his Franks to civility and politeness A.D. 226, and caused them to alter their mean buildings; d. 253, reigned forty years. His son, BARTHERUS, King 253. The Franks and Germans spoiled Italy as far as Ravenna, 264, and razed a town of Arragon to the ground, 267. The King d. 272, reigned nineteen years in the reign of Aurelian, the Emperor. His son,

CLODIUS III, or CLOCIO, King 272. In his time the Emperor Aurelian built Orleans, 275, and the Emperor Probus recovered Gaul from the Germans and slew 40,000 of them, 277, but 283, Clodius entered Gaul, and having slain many Romans recovered some of that which he had formerly lost, but the Romans again expelled him, A.D. 289. He d. 298, reigned twenty-seven years, in the reign of Diocletian. His son,

WALTER, King 298, d. 306, reigned eight years, in the first year of CONSTANTINE THE GREAT. His son, DAGOBERT, King 306, a mild and loving Prince to his subjects. He d. 317, reigned eleven years, in the reign of Constantine. His second son, CLODOMIR IV, was King of the Franks, 319. He aided the Sarmate against the Romans, of whom he slew 36,000, A.D. 321. The Almans and Thuringi being at continual war, the Franks were permitted to plant themselves where Holland, Utrecht, Gelders, part of Frisia, Westphalia, and Brabant now lie. Clodomir d. 337, the year after Constantine died; reigned ten years. His son, RICHIMIR II, King 337, opposed Constantius with 200,000 men A.D. 342. He fought unadvisedly with the Romans and was slain in battle A.D. 350, reigned thirteen years. Wife Hastila. Their son, THEODOMIR, King 350, was taken by the Emperor Julian, who slew him and his mother A.D. 360, reigned ten years. His son, CLODIUS V, or CLOCIO, King 360, to revenge his father's death took Cambray, slew many Romans, entered Gaul and annexed much of it to his dominions A.D. 361, d. 378, reigned eighteen years in the reigns of Valens in the East and Gratian in the West. His elder son, Marcomir V, last King of the Franks, A.D. 378, obtained a great victory over the Romans at Collogn, A.D. 382, and recovered all that the Emperor Maximus had got, except Armoria, or Little Brittany, A.D. 390, was slain in battle A.D. 393, and the Romans then overpowering the Franks commanded them to elect no more kings, but dukes, in the reign of THEODOSIUS THE GREAT. Marcomir V, was succeeded by his brother,

DAGOBERT, younger son of Clodius V, and was the first Duke under the Romans, to whom the Franks were forced to pay tribute, d. 389. Of his three sons, Marcomir, the second Duke, d. 414; Sunno, the third Duke, d. 414, and the eldest son was

SIGIMERUS I, m. a daughter of Ferreolus Tonantius, a Roman Senator and son-in-law of the Emperor Avitus. Their son,

FERREOLUS, Duke of the Moselle and Markgrave of the Schelde, m. (1) a daughter of Clovis I, King of France, and m. (2) Deuteria, a Roman lady, and had by his second wife

AUSBERT, on account of his grandmother is said to be of an Imperial descent, d. 570; m. Blithildis, daughter of Clothary I, King of France, who had Soissons, Vermandois, Piccardy, Flanders and Normandy, son of Clovis I, Magnus (and his wife Clotildis, who got Clovis to promise to turn Christian, but he delayed it some time, daughter of Chilperic, King of Burgundy, m. 492, and she d. 548 or 551), who slew Alaric the Goth for being Arian, 507, and overturned the Gothic Kingdom in Languedoc and annexed it to the Crown, 508, also made other conquests in Germany; son of Childeric I; son of Merovaeus I. Their eldest son,

ARNOALDUS, Markgrave of the Schelde, after his wife's death turned monk and went into the monastery of St. Martin in Villa Longa, which he himself had built, succeeded as Bishop of Mentz, d. 601; m. Oda, a Swabian lady, and had Itta (Itha, or Ida) who m. Pipinus de Landis, the first Duke of Brabant, 615, Major Domus of Clothary II, d. 647, and also

ST. ARNOLPH, the first Major Domus of Clothary II, after his wife's death was Bishop of Mentz, d. an hermit 641, and afterwards canonized. He is the common patriarch of the Carolingian and Capetian kings. Wife Dodo, a Saxon lady. Their son,

ANCHISES, or ANDEGISUS, Markgrave of the Schelde and in his wife's right Duke of Brabant after his brother-in-law Grimoaldus 658, was also Major Domus of King Childeric II, and was slain 685. Wife Begga, heiress of Brabant, 658-698, daughter of Pipin de Landis, the first Duke or Count or Lord of Brabant, A.D. 615, d. 647, reigned 32, and his wife Itta (Itha, or Ida), daughter of Arnoaldus, Markgrave of the Schelde (see ante). Their son,

PEPIN of Heristal, or Crassus, founder of Carlovingian line of Frankish kings, became Duke of Austrasian Franks 680, Duke of Brabant 685, Major Domus in the time of Theodoric III, Clovis III and Childebert III, kings of France. In 687, in battle of Sestri, conquered Burgundy and Neustria. He d. 16 December, 714. His son,

CHARLES MARTEL, King of the Franks, b. A.D. 690; m. Lady Bothrude. He succeeded his father as Mayor of the Palace in 714, and obtained royal power while Chilperic was the nominal King. He gained near Poitiers, in 732, a most important victory over a large army of Saracens who had invaded the Kingdom. This is known as the Battle of Tours and is regarded as one of the decisive battles of the world's history. For this victory he was surnamed MARTEL (i.e., the Hammer). He d. in 741, at Quierzy-Sur-Oise, and was succeeded by his son,

PEPIN LE BREF, b. in 714, m. Lady Bertha, daughter of Charibert, Count de Leon. (Another account says she was daughter of a son of one of the Eastern emperors). He became in 741 Major Domus of Neustrasia and Burgundy under Childeric III, a Faineant, and in 747 succeeded his brother Carloman as Major Domus of Austrasia and the Rhine country, including Thuringia and Swabia. In 749 he defeated the Bavarians and in 752 was crowned King of the Franks by St. Boniface by authority of Pope Zachary; conquered Septimania from the Saracens 752-760; was again crowned by Pope Stephen III, 754. Broke the power of the Lombards in Italy 754-756, and gave the Exarchate of Ravenna and the Pentapolis to the Holy See, the origin of the temporal power of the Popes; overcame the Saxons 757; took Marbonne from the Saracens 759; waged a stubborn war with Guifar, Duke of Aquitainia, 760-768; and in the latter year procured the assassination of his valorous enemy. Died September, 768. His title LE BREF (the "Short") was given on account of his small stature. He first established Parliaments in France 18 January, 757. His second son,

CHARLEMAGNE (CHARLES I), King of the Franks and Roman Emperor, b. 2 April, 742, probably at Aix-La-Chapelle; after his father's death, in 768, reigned over the Franks jointly with his brother Carloman until the death of the latter, in 772; from that time, sole ruler during a reign of forty-three years, he carried on incessant wars on all his borders, extending his domains and at the same time spreading Christianity, subduing rebellions and building up the vast dominions over which he was crowned a successor of the Roman Cæsars by Pope Leo III in 800. In 772 he began a thirty-year war with the determined Saxons, after the successful opening of which Charlemagne was called to the assistance of Pope Hadrian I against Desiderius, King of the Lombards, who had demanded the banning of Charlemagne and the coronation of the sons of Carloman because the former had put away the daughter of Desiderius on account of sterility and m. the Swabian Princess Hildegard of Savoy. Charlemagne marched two armies over the Alps and conquered Lombardy in 774; returned and beat the Saxons again and hastened into Spain, in 778, to help the Arabian rulers of that country against the Osman Caliph of Cordova. It was in this war that the hero of romance, Roland, fell in the pass of Roncesvalles.

The extensive domain of Charlemagne was only rendered secure by ceaseless vigilance and warfare. In 799 the Romans revolted against Pope Leo III, and were again brought into subjection by Charlemagne, who, in return, while he was praying on the steps of St. Peter's Church, was crowned by Leo with the iron crown of the Western Empire, unexpectedly to him, as he pretended, on Christmas Day 800. Charlemagne laid the foundation of his empire securely. He was sagacious, energetic, and vigilant as a ruler and commander alike. He watched over and fostered agriculture, trade, arts and letters with untiring zeal, clearing away forests, draining swamps, founding monasteries and schools, building up cities, constructing splendid palaces, as at Aix, Worms, and Ingelheim, and drawing to his court scholars and poets from all nations, as Alouin, Paulus, Diaconus, and Turpin. He was himself proficient in science, as well as all hardy accomplishments, speaking Latin and knowing Greek. He was tall and stately, measuring seven feet of his own foot-lengths, simple in his life, "excelling all men of the time, to all alike dread and beloved, by all alike admired," according to the historian Nithard.

His fame spread through all the land. The Caliph Haroun-al-Rashid sent an embassy to the Court of Charlemagne with gifts in token of good will.

He had three sons: Pepin, Charles, and Louis. In 813 he associated his only surviving son, LOUIS LE DEBONNAIRE, with himself in the empire. He d. at Aix-La Chapelle January 28, 814, and was succeeded by his son Louis. His descendants are called Carlovingians.

LOUIS I, le Debonnaire, or the Gentle, Roman Emperor 814 to 840, born at Casseneuil in 778, son of the Emperor Charlemagne by his wife Hildegard, m. (2) Lady Judith, the Fair Maid of Bavaria, daughter of Guelph I, Duke of Bavaria.*

LOUIS I, le Debonnaire, his elder brothers having died, succeeded his father January 28, 814, and the first years of his government were quite successful; but in 817 he yielded to the wishes of his sons and gave each of them a share of his dominions, and hence arose complications which he was incapable of managing and from which resulted the dissolution of the Empire. He d. at Ingelheim June 20, 840, and was buried at Metz. By his first wife, Irmingardis, daughter of Ingram, Count of Hasbania in Saxony, who d. 818, he had LUDOVICUS GERMANICUS (LOUIS THE GERMAN) b. 800, King of Bavaria; Gisela, wife of Eberhard, Count of Burgundy; and Adelheid, wife of Robert Fortis, Count of Burgundy, Duke of France. By his second wife, Judith, the Fair Maid of Bavaria (see ante), he had CHARLES II, the Bald, b. 823, King of France, 840, Emperor 875, d. 878.

LUDOVICUS GERMANICUS (LOUIS THE GERMAN) b. 800, by his father's partition was made King of Bavaria 817, which he maintained by his arms against his brother Lotharius, King

* The Huns and other such nations as found a passage westward into Old Germany seemed to be colonies of the ancient Russians and Muscovites, at least their very near neighbors. But the Russians themselves were not famous until the time of Michael III, the Emperor of the East, when coming from Mount Taurus they infested the Euxine Sea and attempted to take Constantinople, A.D. 864, but failing in their attempt and not willing to go home, they made a descent on the northwest banks of the Euxine Sea, where the inhabitants were much akin to them; and enlarging their bounds northwards they became so powerful that their King Wolodomir I (see genealogy given below) was married first to Helena, daughter of the Emperor Nicephorus Phocas; and after he was converted to Christianity, he was married next to Anna, daughter of the Emperor Romanus I, when they left off molesting the Eastern emperors and turned their arms against Sarmatia Europæa, Lithuania, Padolia, Russia Rubra, and the countries thereabouts, until A.D. 1240, Bathu (or Boydo), the son of Occata Chan, with his Crim Tartars, conquered them, after which they had not one sole monarch, but many princes called Lords of Russia or Muscovy, tributary to the Tartars, who held them in vassalage very long, even after John, the son of Basilius II, came to call himself the Great Duke of Muscovy; for at the conclusion of a peace with the Tartars, it was stipulated that Duke John once every year should stand on foot in the Castle of Moscow and feed the horse of the Crim Tartar with oats out of his own cap; which homage was afterwards changed into a tribute of furs; and this being also denied by his successors, occasioned long and bloody wars between them and the Tartars. But though the Tartars have had the assistance of the Turks, the Muscovite has bravely asserted his own sovereignty and also wrested from them many goodly provinces. * This map gives approximate location of the Clans and Families of North Scotland. Territories located outside the Highland Line (that invisible boundary forming the division between the Highlands and the rest of Scotland) have been determined by reference to reliable records and manuscripts. On a small scale map it is possible to detail only the most prominent names. Absence of any family does not mean that they were landless.

Foreword to the First Edition

A couple of years ago, while staying with Mac Cailein Mor to shoot roe in a drive with Scottish deer-hounds to clear the young timber plantations in Glenshira, I was given access to the many neat note-books at Inveraray on West Highland history and clan genealogy that contained the life-work of that scholarly recluse, the late Duke Niall of Argyll. Everything was unfinished and unpublished. It all seemed such a waste.

I realised that I too had been doing the same sort of thing: more than thirty years spent in collecting material for an exhaustive book on the clans and families of Scotland, highland and lowland alike—impeded by simultaneous work on the influence of the Dawn Religion and sacral royalty on subsequent civilisation in general and on British custom in particular. Recently, David Hicks had also taken a number of photographs to illustrate another of my projected works: on the historic homes of the present-day lairds associated with the Highlands, who still hold some of the lands they held at the time of the sixteenth-century Parliamentary Rolls. Duke Niall's unfinished notes made it clear that these tasks cannot adequately be completed in anybody's otherwise busy lifetime.

It therefore seemed better to write something now than everything never. This book is the result. So it is not meant to be a disciplined work of scholarship. Nor does the layout permit space for references. It's more like a note-book of random jottings about this vast subject. The length of an article has nothing to do with historical importance, but usually only indicates that I've more fairly new stuff to write about one clan or family than about another. Thus the mighty MacLeods and the massacred Lamonts are already extensively written up in the excellent histories published by their active Clan Societies, but little has been written before about such interesting clans as the Maclachlans and the McCorquodales. And time has prevented any research as yet into the history of such families as Polson and Swanson (branches of Mackay and Gunn), MacNicol of Portree (otherwise Nicolson), Rankin (hereditary pipers to Maclean of Coll), Maclaverty and MacSporran (respectively tatlers and purse-bearers to the Lords of the Isles). But we do try to give a panoptic view of the clans in particular and of Highland history in general.

A lot more work needs to be done by Gaelic scholars, like the Rev. John McKechnie, who can collate the Irish annals and MacFirbis's genealogies with the Highland genealogical papers (often with several generations obviously omitted) that are already printed or gradually being made available for research. Far more will probably be known about clan origins when the work of such modern scholars as Professor G. W. S. Barrow, Professor Archie Duncan and Dr. Grant Simpson can be fully considered: although unfortunately mediaeval genealogy is only incidental to their work as historians. Meanwhile, I have been greatly helped by the draft county maps of feudal superiorities in the thirteenth century so generously made available to me by their compiler: Major John Weir, Keeper of MSS. in Glasgow University Library.

So many other people have helped that it's impossible to thank them all. My wife, for instance, is responsible for most of the typing errors. Of all those who were kind about the illustrations I'm especially grateful to Sir Anthony Wagner, Garter Principal King of Arms, who has allowed us to reproduce a part of his unique Balliol Roll even though it's at present awaiting special editing before general publication. Then there is Ian Cameron, who has undertaken the layout of a book made difficult by the length of the pictures' captions. But above all, I must thank Miss Elizabeth Kingsley-Rowe (a genealogically interesting specimen as a cousin of Kingsley who wrote The Water Babies), who has been the driving force behind getting the book completed in time and space—and who, as a result, has had skilfully to edit our over-lengthy captions. Finally, David Hicks and I are especially indebted to two Chiefs who had us to stay and provided us with bases from which to operate. One is Lochiel, perhaps the most talented of a long line of remarkable Chiefs. The other is Lord Lovat, of whom Winston Churchill wrote to Stalin (quoting Byron) that Lovat was the mildest-mannered man that ever scuttled ship or cut a throat.

Of course the book is intended to appeal to clannish pride. But it should always be remembered that the Highland clan system produced vertical as opposed to horizontal social distinctions. A Maclean or a Campbell, a Cameron or a Mackintosh, were distinguished by features which cut clean across class. Although people often speak of 'old families', in fact no family is older than any other. What is meant is that the particular families called 'old' have managed to maintain their identity and retain records of their past longer than the majority of other folk. In England and abroad, this is too often true only of a limited aristocracy. In the Highlands, however, everybody was eventually descended one way or another from several of the great historic royal clans. Nor did parental disregard of the canonical laws of marriage bar innocent children from membership of the clan. At a meeting of the Standing Council of Scottish Chiefs, while discussing the Succession Bill, the present writer pointed out that illegitimacy did not necessarily in Scotland exclude a son from succession even to a chiefship, if covered by a parental nomination accepted by the Crown—and that this applied in fact to a fellow chief present. After the meeting two other chiefs

(neither of them the one I had in mind) came up to me separately and protested: 'I've never been called a bastard in public before'

All the same, this book stresses the sacral royal and dynastic origin of the founder chiefs, and thus of the clans themselves: the ultimate biological unity with the Sovereign that accounts for 'Highland pride' and loyalty. The end-papers should make this meaning clear. Also, a short history of a clan must be based on some account of its chiefs, just as a short history of a realm tends to concentrate on the doings of its kings. (Incidentally, the royal title was not King of Scotland but King of Scots, as Chief of Chiefs of the whole family of Scots throughout the world). Economic and social history can better be studied in the works of Dr. I. F. Grant, and by reading Scottish Studies, the twice-yearly publication of the School of Scottish Studies run by Mr. Basil Megaw for Edinburgh University.

Again, any Perthshireman is conscious of the overlapping of the Highlands and the Lowlands. So some of the families who held lands in both parts of Scotland tend to be given extra space, as their history is usually omitted altogether from standard clan books. Indeed, had there been more time and space, I would have included accounts of such other 'overlapping' names as Rose of Kilravock, Brodie of Brodie, Dunbar of Westfield, Erskine of Mar, Spalding of Ashintully, Ramsay of Bamff, Fothringham of Fothringham, Lyon of Glamis, Haldane of Gleneagles and Stirling of Keir: though it would perhaps be a bold man that tried to write anything new about such an 'overlapping' family as Innes of that Ilk, whose historian and scion is the present Lord Lyon King of Arms—Sir Thomas Innes of Learney, author of The Tartans of the Clans & Families of Scotland (Edinburgh 1947) and editor of Frank Adam's The Clans, Septs & Regiments of the Scottish Highlands (Edinburgh 1952). I should perhaps mention at this point that the following crest badges appearing in this book have not yet been recorded in Lyon Register: Galbraith, Gunn, Macaulay, Macfie and Macquarie.

Readers who want to follow up a particular clan or family should refer to Margaret Stuart's Scottish Family History (Edinburgh 1930), supplemented by Joan Ferguson's Scottish Family Histories held in Scottish Libraries (Edinburgh 1960). Much fascinating detail about the rarer surnames is to be found in Dr. George Black's The Surnames of Scotland (New York Public Library 1946). A good short general history of the Highlands is W. R. Kermack's The Scottish Highlands (Edinburgh 1957). The pioneer work on the older castles of the Highlands and Lowlands alike is of course MacGibbon & Ross, The Castellated & Domestic Architecture of Scotland (Edinburgh, 5 vols. 1887–1892)—on which we have drawn for some of our illustrations—but which should be read in conjunction with the present-day works of Dr. W. Douglas Simpson, who has kindly allowed us to use two of his drawings. Highland dress is examined in J. Telfer Dunbar's History of Highland Dress (Edinburgh 1962). The selection of tartans for the present work had to be made while I was temporarily abroad, and so that difficult task fell upon my editors. However, those who want to study tartan further should read Lady Hesketh's Tartans (London 1961). We received a lot of kind help from Mr. R. E. Hutchison of the Scottish National Portrait Gallery and Mr. Stuart Maxwell of the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland. Finally, I can hardly miss this opportunity of warmly recommending my own coloured map, Scotland of Old, illustrated by Don Pottinger and published by John Bartholomew & Son, of Edinburgh.

Foreword to the Second Edition

Since the first edition of 1967, I have modified my views in certain cases, and made numerous corrections and additions. Also, the clans and families associated with Highland history are now arranged for convenience in alphabetical instead of geographical order.

For revisions to Macquarie and Munro history, I am grateful to Dr. Jean Munro and her husband, R. W. Munro, author of Highland Clans & Tartans (London 1977). To Professor Peter Loptson of the University of Saskatchewan, I am indebted for clearer understanding of the Hamilton duchy of Châtelherault's legal history; and to the American genealogical scholar, Andrew B. W. MacEwen, I am equally indebted for solving the problem of the relationship of the Buchanan chiefs to the dukes of Albany. I would also like to thank Professor William Matheson of the University of Edinburgh for his suggestion that the Clan Shaw's opponents in the famous Battle of the Clans at Perth in 1396 were not, as I had believed, the Cummins but the Clan Ghille-mhaoil or Macmillans from Lochaber. As a result of further research, there seems little doubt that his suggestion was right, and so I have amended the text accordingly.

An entirely new entry is MacArthur, based on recent research by two American clan historians, acknowledged by name in the text itself.

The Highland

North of the Forth and the Clyde is the true Scotland that once had her capital at Scone. This was the old Gaelic-speaking kingdom of Alba, later known in 'Scots' as Albany in rather the same way as Moscow-ruled Russia was known as Muscovy. This was Scotland as she stood before she assimilated the Cumbrian Welsh from the Clyde to the Solway and conquered the Northumbrian English from the Forth to the Tweed: before the wily lawyers and clerks of Glasgow and Edinburgh retaliated by getting their grips on the North and gradually eroding the Celtic culture and Gaelic language of their erstwhile conquerors.

Within the ancient land, there has never been quite such a clear-cut distinction between the highlands and the lowlands as has perhaps had to be made by many writers obliged to generalise. Tartan was worn in the lowlands as well as in the highlands, although of course highland dress was not worn in the lowlands as it is a hill dress. Everywhere the Scots are of mixed race: Picts mingled with Gaels from Ireland, Norsemen from Scandinavia, Britons from Strathclyde, Angles from Northumbria, Normans and Flemings and Franks from the Continent. The Hebridean clan of MacLeod is of Norse origin, the Sutherlands were Flemish, while in the conquered territory south of the Forth such families as Dundas and Dunbar (and probably Home) were Gaels. Intermarriage had already scrambled the Scottish genealogical egg by the dawn of our national history.

Moreover, there were always families who held land both in the highlands and the lowlands. While they were temporarily a younger branch, for example, the present line of the Frasers of Lovat made their principal home at Strichen in lowland Buchan, but they always held land also at Abertarff in highland Stratherrick. Again, the Wemyss family belong to the Clan Macduff, the oldest known of all our surviving Gaelic clans, and because they held lands in the highlands the then Laird of Wemyss appears on the parliamentary Roll of Highland Landlords in 1587. Yet they have held lands in lowland Fife since time immemorial, and have made their home there at Wemyss itself since the eleven hundreds. As late as the sixteenth century the Lords Glamis in Strathmore spoke Gaelic as well as English, and

The Fair City of Perth, long the capital of Scotland, and still her natural geographical centre. Here Parliaments were held, and the kings inaugurated on the Stone of Destiny (or later, crowned) in the old Pictish capital at Scone, a little to the north across the Tay. In the foreground is Moncreiffe Island, held by the Moncreiffes until the end of the last century. The two open spaces beyond it are the two famous 'Inches' of Perth, once islands in the marshes (Inch is from the Gaelic innis, an island). There is an unsubstantiated local tradition that they were given to the City of Perth in the fourteenth century, in return for the right to a family burial vault in St. John's Kirk, by the earliest known Provost of Perth: John Mercer of Aldie, M.P., Ambassador to England and France.

'Folk say the Mercers tried the toun to cheat,
When for twa inches they did win sax feet'.

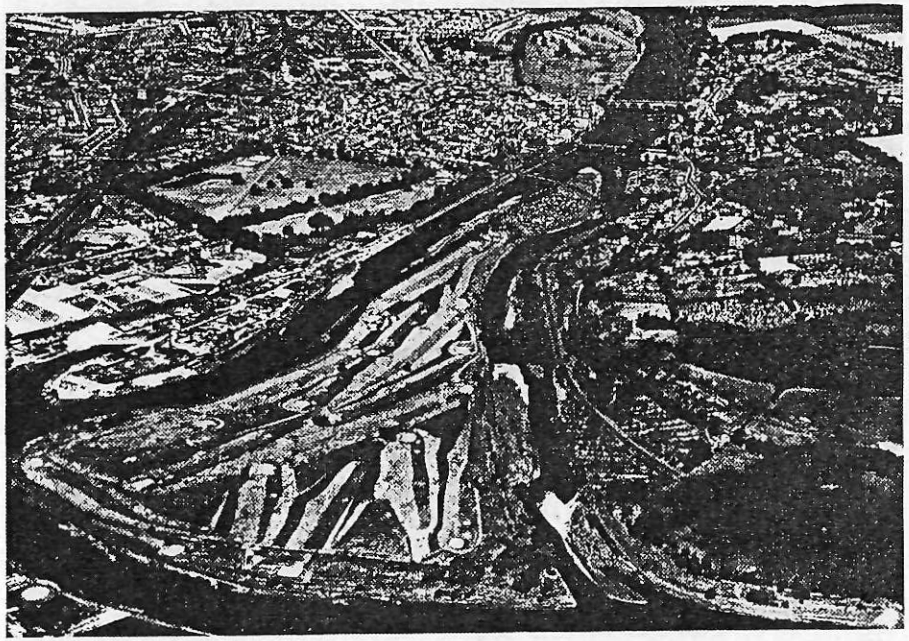
We are reminded that Perth was then a leading seaport, for Provost Mercer himself was robbed when shipwrecked in England, as a result of which his son Andrew Mercer, Bailie of Perth, gathered a mixed fleet of Scottish, French and Spanish vessels, and raided the English coast until defeated in 1378 in a naval battle by Sir John Philpot, Lord Mayor of London. From the Mercers' heiress springs the present Lord Lansdowne.

It was an old Norse and Anglo-Saxon custom to fight 'Trials by Combat' on a special island called a holmgang, and the nearest holmgang to the mediaeval Parliaments at Scone or Perth was the North Inch: while our old parliaments (as opposed to councils) were most usually summoned when trials for high treason were impending. So it was on the North Inch that trials by combat were usually fought in Scotland. The most famous was the 'Battle of the Clans' in 1396, which the present writer believes was fought between the Mackintosh Shaws of Clan Chattan and the Macmillans: in the presence of King Robert III. One night in 1437, however, Sir Robert Graham swept down on to Perth at the head of a picked raiding party of his highlandmen, and slew King James I himself. Thereafter, Scone and Perth were less often the centre of Scottish national affairs.



in the eighteenth century highlanders from as far afield as Glenmuick on Deeside took the surname of Lyon and acknowledged the Earl of Strathmore in the lowlands of Angus as their chief.

All the same, there was of course an ever-increasing difference. This appears for instance in the mediaeval historian Wyntoun's chronicle, in various Acts of Parliament too, and in the late sixteenth-century ballad lamenting the slaughter by Huntly of the bonnie Earl of Moray—'Ye hielands and ye lawlands, and whaur hae ye been?'. This distinction gradually became more and more marked as the Gaelic language retreated into the highlands and islands and as, after the Union of the Crowns, English gold was able to give the King more strength to control, through his Privy Council, his unruly subjects throughout the low country in Scotland. Blood feuds between the great lowland Names were stamped out, leaving clan warfare isolated in the highlands. King James VI was able to write from Whitehall that where his ancestors had been hard pressed to rule by the sword, he could rule by a stroke of the pen.

Although the original Scots were Gaels, yet 'Scots' is an English tongue. The blood of both was a mixture of Celt and Teuton: but the Gaelic-speaking mountain folk were increasingly thought of as a dangerous nuisance by the 'Scots'-speaking lowlanders. The well-armed hillmen had traditions and customs, a costume and a music all their own, and a language which seemed literally 'barbarous' to the businesslike burgesses and canny countrymen of the low ground.

Sir Robert Dalrymple, who married the Hamilton heiress of Bargany in 1707, and was son of Lord President Dalrymple of North Berwick. He belonged to one of the greatest and most powerful of the Lowland Whig families, but is wearing a tartan dressing-gown in his own home.

Although heather, peat hags and bracken cover so much of the highlands today, in the old days vast tracts of the hill-country were wooded. Intensive efforts are now being made to revive forestry in the highlands, both by the Forestry Commission and by such timber-enthusiasts as Lord Dundee. Yet almost until modern times a great part of what is now moorland was covered by the eerie Caledonian Forest. A few remaining woods of this forest are to be seen in the Black Wood of Rannoch in the Robertson country in Glenstrathfarrar in the Lovat country and at Rothiemurchus in the Grant country (where reindeer – long extinct in Scotland, except for some obtained from Lappland in 1790 by the 4th Duke of Atholl, which did not thrive – have been reintroduced as an experimental research project by the Reindeer Council of the U.K., mainly in Glenmore Forest Park). In these and other patches are continued what was once the native woodland of the highlands, dominated by the true Scots fir, which has survived by reseeding naturally. But the rest of the huge Caledonian Forest had similarly regenerated itself century after century until, after the population explosion in the highlands during the seventeen and eighteen hundreds, vast areas were denuded by man.

There used also to be in the highlands deciduous forests of oak and alder. Oak in Rannoch was long used for smelting. But little attempt has been made to replant hardwoods because they grow so slowly. Forestry is now in the hands of either the Forestry Commission, who must have a fairly rapid turnover to justify themselves, or of the lairds, who must make a foreseeable profit in order to maintain the economy of their estates. So the highlands are now being re-afforested with conifers—particularly the larch. This was introduced into the highlands in 1737 when Menzies of Culdares brought three larches back from the Tyrol and presented them to Lord George Murray, who in turn gave them to his brother, the 2nd Duke of Atholl. 'At first they were treated as hothouse plants, which condition not suiting them, they were planted out in 1738.' The Atholl family encouraged the larch, about 20 million trees being planted by the 4th Duke; and in 1883 the 7th Duke of Atholl, visiting Japan, brought back seedlings of the Japanese larch which he planted near Blair Castle. Quite accidentally, these were cross-pollinated with the European larch and produced the hybrid larch which, being ideally suited to the Scottish climate, has become the standard tree for Scottish forestry.

The Bonnie Earl of Moray's corpse, shewing his every wound in detail, taken by his mother's orders immediately after he was slain by the Gordons. He was surrounded at night in his castle at Donibristle in Fife by the Gordons under Huntly, who had a royal commission to arrest him. The castle was set on fire, but held out under the hereditary Sheriff of Moray (Dunbar of Westfield) while the earl made his escape. Unfortunately, the silken tassel in his cap took fire, and he was tracked down in the darkness. As Gordon of Gight (the poet Lord Byron's ancestor) slashed his face, the dying earl exclaimed: 'You have spoilt a better face that your own.' The earl's mother, Lady Doune (a Campbell of Argyll), extracted several bullets with her own hands from her son's corpse and ordered this portrait of the atrocity to be painted—it is referred to in a contemporary report by the English Ambassador—before dying herself of burns sustained in the fire. The picture is now at Darnaway Castle.

Until late in the seventeenth century, wolves roamed the highland forests. Mary Queen of Scots was present at a hunting party in Atholl when, in addition to 360 red deer and some roes, 5 wolves were killed. The last wolf in the highlands is often said to have been killed by Lochiel in 1680, but in fact a female wolf with her cubs was slain in a cave in Sutherland perhaps as late as 1743. Now that the wolf has gone, the fierce Scots wild-cat remains as the largest savage wild animal in Britain. Felis catus has never yet successfully been tamed, and is quite unlike the domestic cat both in character and appearance. The present Farquharson chief has a striking sporran made from the pelt of a large wild-cat trapped at Invercauld. One of the rarest of all British mammals—the pine marten—is also still occasionally trapped by accident in the highlands. Such an unfortunate accident has at least provided a very fine pine marten sporran for the Mackenzie chief: Lord Cromartie. The capercailzie (the Gaelic 'old gaffer of the woods') became extinct in the eighteenth century, and was reintroduced successfully by the Marquess of Breadalbane. It is a purely woodland bird and so (contrary to recent uninformed opinion) nobody was 'cleared' to make way for its revival. Golden eagles still fly, and ptarmigan in the high peaks, while the rare osprey has returned to nest in Badenoch. But the blackcock and the 'moor-fowl' or grouse are above all the birds of the Highlands.

Life was primitive in the old clan days. The shallow soil of the highlands was broken with a crude spade-plough worked by foot, the cas-chrom. The main crops on the cultivated low ground were barley and oats, which provided bread and porridge, but potatoes became an important supplement by the second half of the eighteenth century. Flax was also grown. On the more level ground it was possible to use horse-drawn ploughs with four small horses abreast and a highlandman walking backwards between the centre animals to guide the plough from stones. The staple summer dish of the clans was a mixture of milk and whey, also oatcakes and porridge, augmented by fish caught locally. On the West Coast and in the Isles, whale and seal steak occasionally gave variety to the fish diet of the mainland: salmon, trout and pickled herrings. Geese and poultry were kept. Meat was eaten more in the winter, also salted butter, crowdie, and skim-milk cheese. The surplus in livestock formed the principal highland trade: cattle, horses (far more than is generally realised), sheep, goats and pigs. Indeed, the money obtained from the sale of hides, wool and especially of livestock in the Lowlands and the South was for centuries the Highlanders' constant source of income.

But the martial clans' prestige was based above all on cattle (like other pastoral warrior races as far afield as the Masai and the Watutsi). Many barrels of pickled beef were exported annually to the Continent: and a fascinating book has been written on the well-worn drove roads that carried the bestial through many a dangerous territory to such famous cattle-markets as the Falkirk 'tryst' and that at Crieff in Perthshire. The animals were normally pastured on the moorland near the cultivated land in the broad straths and narrow glens. On the higher ground, even highland cattle were only hardy enough to be loosed for a few summer weeks. The stone huts whose ruins are still to be found throughout the mountains were never permanent habitations, but were the summer shielings put up to shelter the women and children who enjoyed their annual outing as cattle herders. When the brief summer was over, they returned to their settlements around the small arable patches far below the high ground. At the onset of winter, beasts were slaughtered to provide barrels of salt meat, two or three households often sharing one carcase, and the making of haggis ensured that nothing at all was wasted. Even 'braxy' mutton from sheep found dead on the hillside was eaten. The cattle that were spared for breeding were bled alive to give the raw material—fresh blood—to be mixed with oatmeal for 'black pudding'. By Spring they were often so weak that they had to be manhandled out to pasture in the 'lifting time'.

Cattle always meant prestige. From ancient Celtic times cattle raids were looked on as a sort of sport or test of prowess. The highlanders saw little wrong in it, unless they had been paid tribute for 'protection'. The late W. C. Mackenzie put their viewpoint thus: 'The animals were made by God; they derive their food direct from God's pastures, on which man has expended neither labour nor money; therefore the animals are the common property of mankind. If we steal our neighbours' cattle to-day, our neighbours will steal ours tomorrow, and so we are quits; and as for the Sasgunnaich (Lowlanders), well, their country belonged to our forefathers, so it is a land where every Highlandman can take his prey.'

So cattle raiding was regarded by the otherwise very law-abiding Gaels as quite distinct from ordinary theft: it was simply up to the other side to try and prevent them from succeeding. Thus from pre-Christian times onwards the famous boroma or cattle tribute levied by the high kings of Ireland on the kings of Leinster was never handed over without a battle. And, in times when a certain amount of blood-letting was thought a reasonable show of vigour, the heir to a highland chiefship was expected to have led at least one cattle raid before his succession. This practice of cattle raiding added a word to the English language: ordinary 'mail' meant 'rent', so 'black mail' was the name originally given to the illegal levy made by highlanders on cattle raiders from other clans to allow them free passage through their territory—or alternatively, levied as 'protection money' on Lowland neighbours.

But life was not as primitive as all that. For the Gaels, being naturally resourceful, made full use of their natural resources.

The clansfolk usually built their own wee houses, and often made their own pottery and shoes. In all districts, there were of course carpenters, wrights, blacksmiths, armourers and weavers: hence surnames like Macintyre and Gow. Tailors and shoemakers used to travel, making suits or shoes in their patrons' houses. There were itinerant stocking merchants as late as the nineteenth century. There was a considerable linen industry, from home-grown flax and mostly for the home market. Beautiful 'waulking songs' remind us of the part played by the women in fulling the cloth.

The salmon fishing industry was and is still a valuable source of income to the eastern Highlands. From the Beauly, Spey, Ness and other rivers, the Frasers of Lovat, Stuarts of Moray, Gordons of Huntly, Mackenzies of Seaforth and the Gairloch, all exported smoked, salted or dried salmon to the Continent: the Inverness merchants who acted as middlemen sending the fish in Inverness-built ships as far afield as the Netherlands, France and Italy. Sea fishing was even more lucrative. The chiefs and chieftains usually put up the money to provide the fishing-boats, and the merchants generally bartered for the catch—cod, herring, ling, skate—with oatmeal, iron, wine, brandy, and tobacco.

Timber was floated down main rivers like the Spey and the Tay, and sold in the Lowlands. Oak bark was used for tanning, and much leather was sent abroad. Until Canada was opened up to the fur trade by the French in the seventeenth century, the Highlands exported to the Continent many thousands of furs annually: mostly fox, pine marten and weasel skins. The 12th Earl of Sutherland set up saltpans, and also started the coal-mining at Brora, early in the seventeenth century. About the same time, slate quarrying for export to the Lowlands was begun in Mull and elsewhere.

For local consumption, heather ale was brewed in the home from very early times. By the sixteenth century frequent mention is made of brogadh, 'the stimulation', a sweetened malt liquor whose production (anyway in Inverness) had to be repeatedly restricted to prevent a grain famine. About this time whisky, 'the water of life', began to take over in Inverness, and soon private stills were started by lairds and tacksmen all over the Highlands—suppressed from the eighteenth century onwards by harsh revenue demands that only led to illegal distillation. In the seventeenth century, the Islesmen had a dangerous 'stop-the-breath' whisky, four times distilled from oats, also a milder whisky, only thrice distilled, called treslarig (from the Danish words tröst, 'comfort', and arak, 'distilled spirit'). The chieftains and tacksmen drank a great deal of claret, but the Privy Council laid down a scale for them, anyway in the Hebrides, and strictly limited the import of wine. However, a late sixteenth-century writer tells us of the Islesmen: 'They boil the flesh with water poured into the paunch or skin of the animal they kill, and in hunting sometimes they eat the flesh raw, merely squeezing out the blood. They drink the juice of the boiled flesh. At their feasts they sometimes use whey, after it has been kept for several years, and even drink it greedily.'

The Macnab (1734–1816), by Raeburn. Francis Macnab, 16th Chief of Macnab, in his uniform as Lt-Colonel of the Royal Breadalbane Volunteers, to whom he used to give his commands 'in voluble and forcible Gaelic'. He courted a lady in vain, even though he 'told her as an irresistible charm that he had the most beautiful burying-ground in the world' (the Macnab chiefs are buried on the island of Inchbuie, 'the Yellow Isle' in the river Dochart, which is covered with Scots pines, larches, beeches and sycamores). So he never married, although he had thirty-two children and it was rumoured that several lasses in the district got 'the bad disorder' from him. He had his own distillery at Killin; and Heron, who toured Perthshire in 1792, wrote that The Macnab produced the best whisky to be found in Scotland.

The Highlanders were immensely hospitable. They loved their ceilidhs, which were held 'by the light of the peat-fire flame' in the townships on winter evenings. The same sixteenth-century writer says: 'Instead of a trumpet, they use a bagpipe. They are exceedingly fond of music, and employ harps of a peculiar kind, some of which are strung with brass, and some with catgut. In playing they strike the wires either with a quill, or with their nails, suffered to grow long for the purpose; but their grand ambition is to adorn their harps with great quantities of silver and gems, those who are too poor to afford jewels substituting crystals in their stead. Their songs are not inelegant, and, in general, celebrate the praises of brave men; their bards seldom choosing any other subject.' At the ceilidhs, poetry and legendary epics were declaimed by bards and story-tellers. There was also music and dancing, solo and collective singing. Their outdoor games were curling and shinty.

The ancient instrument of the Celt was the clarsach or harp. But although bagpipes are obviously very ancient in the Highlands, as with hill-folk in other countries, there is little mention of the pipes until the sixteenth century, when Alasdair 'Crouchback', 8th Chief of MacLeod (1481–1547), founded the famous College of Piping at Borreraig in Skye for the MacLeod chiefs' hereditary pipers, the MacCrimmons, the greatest pipers of all Gaeldom. It took between eight and twelve years to qualify at this college. A piper played during a raid made in about 1600 by the Stewarts of Atholl on Coupar Angus, and thereafter the pipes were so regularly used in battle as to be banned in 1747 as an 'instrument of war'. Sometimes the Highlanders danced reels or solo to the pipes or the Jew's harp.

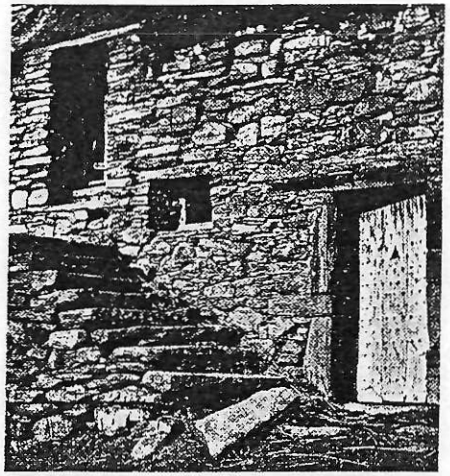
At other times they danced to 'mouth music' or, particularly during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, to the fiddle. The greatest were the Atholl fiddlers, Neil Gow (1727–1807) and his son Nathaniel Gow (1766–1831), who composed many strathspeys and country dances.

In the highlands, funerals have always been great ceremonies. Over 5,000 men, horse and foot, attended the 6th Lord Lovat's funeral in 1633. During the American War of Independence, in 1779, the celebrated Scots-American naval raider Paul Jones sailed into Loch Dunvegan, only to hasten back to sea again because he mistook a funeral procession for an armed body of clansmen marching to defend the castle. At Sir Malcolm MacGregor of MacGregor's funeral in 1879, the procession in Balquhidder was several miles long. At the conclusion of the 8th Duke of Atholl's burial service in 1942, after a motor procession from Dunkeld to Blair, Atholl Highlanders, Hillmen, Curlers and Freemasons, also men of the Scottish Horse and the Canadian Forestry Corps, filed round the grave, the masons dropping in sprigs of acacia and the Atholl Highlanders sprigs of juniper, while others drank to His late Grace and poured oblations of whisky. And a great gathering of Campbells attended the State Funeral of the 10th Duke of Argyll in 1949, when his coronet nearly fell off his coffin and his styles and titles were proclaimed by a royal herald wearing a tabard. In the old days, a coronach or lament used to be wailed by the women. Led by the principal mourner, the others then danced through the night of the 'wake'. Burials were followed by speeches and much drink—Charles Robertson of Auchleeks was drowned when he fell through the ice on Loch Tummel while returning drunk from a funeral, early in the eighteenth century.

Most of the chiefs and greater chieftains necessarily possessed a stone stronghold. A few of these still survive, much adapted or enlarged as their modern homes: Hebridean castles like those of Maclean at Duart and Macneil at Kisimul and MacLeod at Dunvegan—and on the mainland, those of Atholl at Blair, Sutherland at Dunrobin, Perth at Stobhall, Rattray at Craighall, Farquharson at Invercauld, the Cromartie Mackenzies at Castle Leod, the Campbells at Cawdor and the Ogilvys at Airlie. Picturesque ruins remain of such other strongholds as that of Clanranald at Eilean Tioram, Glengarry at Invergarry, MacIain of Ardnamurchan at Mingarry, Argyll at Inchconnel, the Gordons at Huntly, Lamont at Toward, McCorquodale at Loch Tromlie, Macfarlane at Eilean-a-Vow, Colquhoun at Rossdhu, Menzies at Castle Menzies, the Shaws of Rothiemurchus at Loch-an-Eilean and the Sinclairs at Girnigoe.

But a chief who lived at a sufficient distance from any unpleasant neighbours usually moved out of his tower. Whenever it was safe, he naturally preferred to live in a house. Chiefs therefore tended either to abandon or else to convert their strongholds as soon as it was possible for them to live more comfortably. In the seventeenth century, the Mackay chiefs lived in the charming House of Tongue. In the eighteenth century, Macneil of Barra moved out of Kisimul Castle into a modest Georgian house at Eoligarry. Achnacarry, the home of Lochiel, which was burnt by the Government troops in 1746, appears to have consisted of two stone gable ends with a wooden house built between them: though earlier chiefs had lived in the tower of Torcastle.

We are told in the Dewar MS. that in the age of King



The old 'Laird's House' at Pitcastle in Atholl, former home of the royally-descended Robertson chieftains of Pitcastle. Now roofless, it is the typical four-roomed house of a sixteenth-century 'bonnet laird'. On the ground floor was Pitcastle's sitting room, and a twenty-foot long public room that was partitioned to allow for a kitchen and passage. Carved fir panelling from these once painted partitions, together with the nail-studded front door with its triangular peep-hole, has been taken to Blair Castle for preservation: and probably dates from the time of Duncan Robertson of Pitcastle, who sat on a local assize with six more Robertsons and eight other Athollmen to try a Stewart murderer in 1602. An inside stone staircase led to Pitcastle's own bedchamber, but there is only an outside stair (shewn in the illustration) to the general bedroom, also on the upper floor.

James VI 'Macfarlane of Arrochar had a castle on the island of Inveruglas and another in Eilean a' bhùtha, but his dwelling-house was in Tarbert at a place called the Cladach Mor, Big Strand, at the side of Loch Lomond. . . . The house was but thirty-four feet long and thirteen broad, inside. It contained but three rooms: a kitchen, a sitting-room and a pantry, and the pantry was in the middle of the house. The kitchen-fire was on the middle of the floor and a hole right over it in the roof allowed the smoke to escape. The fire of the sitting-room was near the gable and a stone with a smooth surface behind it. A chimney-top made of twigs and daubed with clay was above the fire of the chamber to let out the smoke. The rafters of the house were about three feet asunder. Beams of cleft oak placed close together and covered with sods formed a loft above the laird of Arrochar. There was but a single window with six panes in the chamber. There was one window with four panes in the kitchen, on the front of the house, and there was a window-hole at the back, which was shut with boards when the wind blew through it. There was another window-hole in the pantry shut with boards, which was opened when anything was to be done there. The house was thatched with bracken.'

The tacksmen or leading gentlemen of the clan lived in pleasant but not very large houses. Nowadays they would often be considered mere cottages. For although the ordinary gentlemen were well educated and in many cases most polished, they lived close to their people and anyway could not afford grand houses. For instance, as a Baron, the MacLaren chieftain of Wester Invernenty had local powers of life and death, but he still went ploughing with the rest. In 1736, Stewart of Invernahyle wrote to Atholl's factor: 'Rob Roy's youngest son . . . came with a gunn and pistle to the Town of Drumlich where John McLaren, Baron Stoibchon and Wester Innernenty liv'd, and the said Baron with two of his neighbours being att the pleugh, this youngest son of Rob Roy's, called Robert, came to the pleugh, and without any provocation, as the Baron was holding the plough, shott him behind his back, of which wound he dyed that night.'

Simpler still were the 'black houses', which were thick-walled rubble cottages, often consisting of a single room with no window. Usually they had no gables, and their roofs were pitched at a low angle, supported by longitudinal beams over coupling timbers and usually springing from the inner part of the ledges formed by the tops of the four walls. The hearth was in the centre of the floor, and some of the peat-smoke could escape through a chimney-hole beside the roof-tree. Turf, rushes or heather were the usual thatching materials, although latterly straw was used. The custom was that the walls belonged to the laird, but the roofing to the cottar, who took it with him if he removed When the thatch had grown too old, it was used for manuring the infield. A clay and wattle partition often provided a second room, used to shelter livestock (who entered by the same door) in bad weather. Even Dunvegan itself was originally just a great long 'black house' surrounded by a curtain wall, and the late Macneil of Barra found the ashes of the mediaeval central hearth when he was restoring Dunvegan Castle, as it was in the time of Leod, name-father of the MacLeods, during the thirteenth century. The curtain wall and well still exist, as also does the sea-gate, which until the middle of the eighteenth century was the only entrance to the castle. The long-hall of those days was like a great 'black-house' (with a central hearth as at Kisimul), but has long since been replaced by an ever-changing complex of buildings. This reconstruction was drawn by Dr. Douglas Simpson.

the ruined (and always until now, chimneyless) Great Hall of Kisimul Castle.

Buchanan wrote of the Hebrideans in 1582: 'In their houses, also, they lie upon the ground; strewing fern, or heath, on the floor, with the roots downward and the leaves turned up. In this manner they form a bed so pleasant, that it may vie in softness with the finest down, while in salubrity it far exceeds it.' He adds that when they 'travel in other countries, they throw aside the pillows and blankets of their hosts, and wrapping themselves round with their own plaids, thus go to sleep'. It is recounted that when the great Sir Ewen Cameron of Lochiel (1629–1719) was snowbound on the open hills at night while out wolf-hunting, he kicked away a snowball which his heir had made up to rest his head on, asking angrily if his son had grown so soft that he could not sleep without a pillow?

Up to the sixteenth century, the bare-legged clansmen or 'redshanks' wore pleated tunics to the knee, usually dyed with saffron. They had great mantles or plaids, apparently of tartan, their favourite colours being purple and blue until the mid-sixteenth century, when dark browns became popular for camouflage. Mediaeval chiefs sometimes wore plate-armour under their armorial surcoat. But as late as the sixteenth century the chieftains tended to wear a distinctive 'yellow war coat', of thickly padded and quilted linen, and their followers' bodies were often protected by leather jerkins in place of armour. On the whole, however, their defensive armour consisted of a conical 'iron head-piece, and a coat of mail, formed of small iron rings, and frequently reaching to the heels'. They carried bows, with barbed arrows that were difficult to extract from a wound, Lochaber axes (with a hook at the end of the staff, for dragging an enemy from his horse) and long two-handed swords. These claymores or 'big swords' usually had quatrefoils ornamenting the end of their upward-sloping crossguards.

By the seventeenth century, however, these claymores had been cut down to form basket-hilted broadswords. A round Celtic shield of leather on wood, often with a central spike, called a targe, was carried on the left arm; and a dirk was held point downwards in the left hand. The Roll of Arms for the Earl of Atholl's following in 1638 appears to indicate some connection (perhaps only sufficient means) between the wearing of a targe and the ownership of a gun or pistol. One entry on that roll shows a Highlander still in possession of a coat-of-mail. But it was already rare, for the MacGregor chief's brother, who was killed at the battle of Glenfruin in 1603, was nicknamed Iain Dubh nan Luireach: 'Black John of the Mail-Coat'. Arm-pit knives were carried for practical use, but the black stocking-knife or sgian dubh is first illustrated in Raeburn's celebrated portrait of MacDonell of Glengarry, who appears to have a knife and fork together in his stocking; although Stewart of Ardvorlich has what he believes to be seventeenth-century examples of a similar knife and fork, flattened for the leg but now lacking the sheath. Its introduction into regimental uniform gave it its modern vogue. Bye-knives and forks were also often carried, side by side or one above the other, in the scabbards of dirks. The Highland pistol, of which the finest were made at Doune, is usually distinguished by a ball-trigger (a round knob in place of a normal trigger) and by having no trigger-guard. Screwed into the butt, there is often a pricker for cleaning the touch-hole.

By the seventeenth century, the ancient tartan mantle of the clansmen had developed into the great belted plaid, which was itself divided in the eighteenth century into kilt and short plaid, worn over a dyed shirt. Belted plaids were often cast off in battle, much to the horror of lowland or foreign foes, who called the highlanders ' naked savages '. This was hardly fair, as they tied their shirt-tails between their legs before going into action. From at least the sixteenth century, the King, great nobles and mounted chieftains wore ' short Highland coats ' over tartan trews which combined breeks and hose in a single close-fitting garment: the plaid being belted over all.

The antiquity of clan and family tartans is much in dispute. It seems certain that there were some in existence before the Jacobite Risings, possibly even from the sixteenth century (when the Macleans had an annual rent payable in ells of black, white and green cloth: the colours of their present tartan); and Garth implies that old war tartans existed. But if family or district tartans did exist so early, they were certainly not consistently worn. However, family or estate tweeds (such as the Atholl grey or the Dalhousie tweed) have existed for upwards of a century, but are certainly not worn constantly by those who have a right to them. The same applies to regimental tweeds, such as that of the Scots Guards which is already about a century old.

By the reign of Queen Anne, the Grants had a red and green uniform war tartan, but contemporary paintings show that they wore whatever they fancied in civil life. There are reasons for supposing that the Red Murray, or Murray of Tullibardine, hangings on a bed at Blair Castle have survived from the late seventeenth century; and what looks very like the same sett appears on the plaid of Norman, 22nd Chief of MacLeod (whose grandmother was sister of the 1st Duke of Atholl and who was brought up partly in Perthshire), in his famous mid-eighteenth century portrait in the pose of Apollo Belvedere, by Allan Ramsay. And in 1768, Sir Robert Murray Keith wrote from Dresden, where he was British Envoy, for ' a plaid of my colours '. In his case, the tartan was probably regimental, and several clan tartans undoubtedly began as regimental tartans when chiefs raised clan regiments in the eighteenth century. The Gordon clan tartan, for example, was designed originally for the Gordon Highlanders by adding a yellow stripe (which their old rivals the Black Watch infuriatingly refer to as a ' yellow streak ') to the old Government or Black Watch tartan.

The blade is older, and the silver mounting is inscribed ' Major Evan MacGregor, Aid de Camp to H.R.H. Prince Charles, Sept. 1745 '. Major Evan, whose son Sir John eventually became 18th Chief of Clan Gregor, was younger brother of Robert MacGregor of Glencarnock, Chieftain of the Children of the Mist, who commanded the MacGregors in the 1745 Rising. It was Evan MacGregor who, with a long gun (' she was so heavy that no man could carry her above a mile at once ') fired the first shot at Cope's army the day before Prestonpans. ' The Prince thought much of this, that we got the first blood of them.' Duncan MacGregor, who was present as an officer, wrote years afterwards to Evan's son, Sir John, about the MacGregor regiment at the battle of Prestonpans itself: ' Captain Duncan MacGregor was wounded through the thigh, Captain James Mor MacGregor was wounded thro' the thigh, Captain Malcolm MacGregor got his two legs broken, twenty-one private men were wounded and one shot dead upon the spot. We pursued the retreating army a mile and a half . . . The Prince came and took Glencarnock in his arms, and Captain Evan, and told them to gather the whole Clan MacGregor upon the middle of the Field of Battle. There was a table covered and the MacGregors guarding him at dinner, every man got a glass of wine and a little bread. Your Father and Uncle sat down with him, the rest of the Chieftains took it amiss that the MacGregors got this honour, but it was dear bought . . .'

The distinguishing mark of kings or chiefs in many parts of the world, from Africa to America, is the wearing of eagle's feathers. Dr. Johnson wrote of the young Laird of Coll and his clansmen that ' He did not endeavour to dazzle them by any magnificence of dress: his only distinction was a feather in his bonnet '. The convention has long been established that a chief wears three eagle's feathers, the chieftains of cadet branches wear two, and the gentlemen of the clan may wear one feather. The Sovereign, as Chief of Chiefs, wears four. These distinctions are followed by the Royal Company of Archers (who used to wear tartan uniforms). Their Captain-General wears three eagle's feathers, their officers two, and the ordinary Archers of the Queen's Body Guard wear a single feather.

When chiefs went about, they were accompanied by a body of armed clansmen known as their ' tail '. Besides an adequate following of armed men, it included the bard or seanachaidh (historian), the henchman (the chief's personal body-guard, as Gold Stick is to the Queen), the bladaire or tatler (the chief's ' mouthpiece '), the harper or piper, and even a special man to carry their chief dry-shod over fords—the chief was as tough as they were (as witness the Great Lochiel), but they liked to do him this honour, shedding lustre on the whole clan. A great magnate like Atholl, just like his Lowland counterparts such as Douglas, was attended in Edinburgh by followers who wore his crest hung around their necks (rather like decanter-labels), as can be seen, for instance, in Chambers' eighteenth-century print of the Riding of the Scottish Parliament in 1685. From this there were evolved the modern clan badges, which consist of the chief's crest surrounded by a strap-and-buckle bearing his motto. These badges are usually made of silver, and have been worn in the bonnet since the nineteenth century.

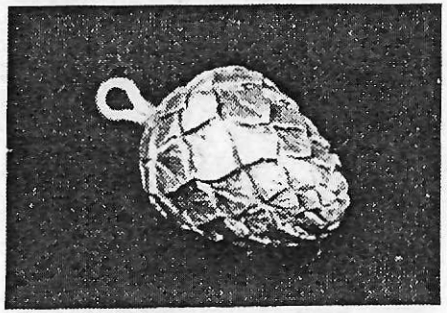
The older badges were the lucky plants of the clans. The idea of a sacred plant is very ancient, going back to the Dawn Religion in the New Stone Age. Family plants are found as far afield as among the Japanese samurai. And there was an ancient Greek who, fleeing from a battle-field, came on a field of clover and stopped to be slain rather than tread on his family plant. The Hay mistletoe at Erroll is referred to in Frazer's monumental work, The Golden Bough. The Moncreiffe oak-leaves appear on a stone carving of the 12th laird's heraldic ' mantling ' by 1634.



A silver pine-cone button from Sir Gregor MacGregor of MacGregor's evening kilt coat. It is the plant-badge of Clan Gregor.

After the 1745 Rising, one of the Government witnesses at the trial of Lord Lovat gave evidence that 700 Frasers had paraded at Castle Dounie wearing the Jacobite white cockade and sprigs of yew in their bonnets. There is still a great yew in Stratherrick, where the Stratherrick Frasers cut their plant badges—the Frasers in the Aird got their yew badges from Tomnahurich, which was the main Fraser gathering-place. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the Macdonalds marched to war behind a bunch of heather tied to a pole. In 1678 ' the Glencow men were verie remarkable, who had for their ensigne a faire bush of heath, wel spred and displayed on the head of a staff '; and in The Grameid in 1691, James Philip says of the Macdonalds in Dundee's Jacobite host two years before: 'These all being chiefs sprung from the blood of Donald, they . . . carry into battle, as the emblem of their race, a branch of wild heather hung from the point of a quivering spear.'

Another interesting survival from ancient times is that certain ' beasts ' have always been considered sacred, dedicated to that spirit of royalty which represents the whole symbolic feeling of the nation. For example, Edward II of England protected by statute the whole of the dolphin family, and also protected the sturgeon under the mistaken impression that it was a form of dolphin. That is why the sturgeon is the fish that most people think of as Fish Royal, and all sturgeons caught in English waters are sent to The Queen. But in the Celtic world, especially among the ancient Gaels, the salmon was the sacrosanct royal fish. When one Irish king overthrew another, he used to kill the salmon in his enemy's royal fishpond. Ancient Irish kings wore the salmon as a brooch. Even today the Duke of Argyll, his son Lord Lorne, and the Campbells of Lochnell, the branch who have long been the nearest heirs, are Velvet doublet of the present Mac Cailein Mor, Ian Campbell, Duke of Argyll, shewing as silver buttons the sacred royal salmon of the ancient Gaels, worn by the Argyll family as ultimate successors in the female line of the local Kings of Argyll: the 'Border of the Gaels'. regarded as having a special right to wear silver salmon as the buttons on their doublets. When the late Duke of Argyll as a young man went to stay with the late Duke of Atholl, the younger members of the Atholl family went up to his bedroom, cut off his silver salmon doublet-buttons and replaced them with real sardines stuck on to pieces of cardboard; thus continuing the ancient feud between the Atholl and Argyll families into modern times as what social anthropologists would call a 'joking relationship'. So salmon fishing was reserved to the Crown, whose revenues were thus augmented by the ability to grant charters of particular salmon fishing, like ordinary grants of land. Until the sixteenth century, too, the King of Scots was always accompanied by a live lion, the royal ' beast ' of Scotland, and there was a Lyon's Den in every royal palace.

From the most ancient times known to us, it was perhaps one of the main purposes of ceremonial pageantry to inculcate religious concepts or ethical principles within the growing community. But after the Reformation (which in Scotland occurred in 1560) an extreme reaction against elaborate ritualism drove almost all beauty and colour out of Highland church life for a long time. It's sad, for instance, to realise that the lost pre-Reformation Scottish sacred music was famous throughout Europe. The lovingly carved statues of holy men (which is all that ' saint ' actually means) were smashed, though now once again we have a statue of a holy man, John Knox, outside St. Giles' Cathedral. The popular emotional need for colourful ceremony found outlets in other ways, often secret. It was in the time of the learned theologian King James VI (who was himself made a mason in what is now Lodge Scone and Perth) that Freemasons began the process that led to the formation of purely speculative as opposed to operative Masonic Lodges: for Freemasonry inculcates the highest brotherly and indeed divine ethical principles through the beautiful symbolism of its ritual. The late Lord Macdonald, Chief of the great Clan Donald, was a past Grand Master Mason of Scotland, as was the late Sir Iain Colquhoun of Luss, Chief of the Clan Colquhoun.

A more sinister result of the suppression of all colour in religion after the Reformation, was a marked revival of the witch cult. People talk about ' witch-hunts ' nowadays as if there never were any underground witches. But indeed there were, and many, though not necessarily always those unfortunates who were hunted out and ' pricked ' as such. Of course, many vestiges of the Dawn Religion, the sacrificial cult of the divine king (that venerates the continuity of the embodied life-force), survive in Christian ceremonial: the magic of the old rituals being translated poetically to express new and more abstract meanings (see the present writer's Blood Royal). Other traces continue, such as touching wood, not walking under a ladder (Woden's sacrificial scaffold), or the keeping of an animal mascot. But in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries more sinister rites underwent a marked underground revival. It must be remembered that witchcraft was the primaeval religion, the fertility cult (that perceives divinity in the spark of life), with its symbolic worship of the Horned One, and that men as well as women could be witches: joining in the secret covens of thirteen grouped around the ' devils ' (local priests of the Fertility Spirit) scattered throughout Scotland.

The Clach Dearg or ' Red Stone ', the charm of Ardvorlich. In 1722, the celebrated heraldist Nisbet reckoned the then Mac Mhic Bhaltair to be Chieftain of all the Stewarts of Balquhidder because he possessed this sacred Charm Stone. From forty miles around, the worried owners of sick cattle used to bring kegs of spring water to Ardvorlich. ' There the Lady of Ardvorlich took the Charm, dangled it by its chain in the water and swirled it round three times, reciting a Gaelic incantation the while. After the Charm was taken out of the water, it was necessary for the owner of the beasts to take his keg back to his animal to drink; and shortly afterwards it would recover. One other obligation had to be observed; the man carrying the keg was not allowed to enter any building with the keg on his way home . . . ' It is a ball of rock crystal mounted in bands of silver with a Celtic pattern. It was probably part of a reliquary, and the family tradition is that it was brought back from a Crusade. Of course Ardvorlich's direct ancestor Alexander, 4th Steward of Scotland (1214–1283) was a Crusader, but any charm brought back by him would obviously have descended to the senior line of the Royal Stewarts. However, it could have been brought back from a much later Crusade. For instance, Sir Colin Campbell of Glenorchy went on a Crusade as a Knight of Rhodes (what is now called a Knight of Malta) in the fifteenth century, and brought back a similar charm stone, listed in a Glenorchy inventory c.1600 as ' ane stane of the quantitye of half a hen's egg set in silver, being flatt at the ane end and round at the uther and lyke a peir, whilk Sir Coline first laird of Glenurchy woir when he fought in battel at the Rhodes agaynst the Turks, he being one of the Knychtis of the Rhodes.' So it seems possible that Ardvorlich's more recent ancestor, whom King James III in 1465 called ' our beloved kinsman, James Stewart of Albany, natural son of the late James Stewart, son of Murdach Stewart, late Duke of Albany ', accompanied Glenorchy in his ' caravan ' against the Turks—or else took part in some similar Crusade—and brought back the blessed Charm Stone of Ardvorlich.

Men of the highest rank joined with the most humble in these pagan rites. The Lord Lyon King of Arms was burnt at the stake for witchcraft in 1569; while King James VI's cousin Francis Stuart, Earl of Bothwell, was the Devil of the North Berwick witch-coven in 1589, and used his occult power to plot the king's death. In the same year, Hector Munro of Foulis, Chief of the Clan Munro, called in some local warlocks and witches to save his ailing life by casting his approaching death on to his younger half-brother, George Munro of Obsdale, as a Substitute Victim. The principal witch, Marian McIngarrath, dug a grave in which the Munro chief lay down at midnight, wrapped in blankets, and was covered over lightly with green turf fastened down with withes, ' probably cut from a rowan tree, to guard the spot from evil spirits '. His foster-mother Christian Neil then ran the length of nine riggs (over a mile) to consult with the local Devil, and then returned; whereupon the witch Marian asked her if she had made her choice, and the chief's foster-mother spoke the grim doom that ' Mr. Hector was her choice to live and his brother George to die '. The chief then literally returned from the grave to Foulis Castle. That he was called ' Mr. ' at this date implies that he had graduated at a University; and it seems clear that he had profited by his education, for his reliance on witchcraft proved sound. His brother George duly died in 1590, and he himself recovered from his long illness in time to stand trial for murder and witchcraft. Naturally he was acquitted, but his poor witch-doctor, the unhappy sorceress Marian McIngarrath, was strangled and burnt at the stake, with the rest of her coven, after duly confessing under torture. Her highly successful skill was derived from an Old Norse magic ritual of pagan times, that had lingered on underground through the centuries. The last Highland witch to be burnt at the stake was so executed in 1722, at Dornoch in Sutherland.

Today, perhaps our most everyday reminder of the gay witches' ' sabbaths ' is the popularity of round reels. From the cave rites of the New Stone Age, and throughout aeons of time, on through the Bronze and Iron Ages into the eighteenth century, a basic religious ceremony continued all over Europe, and certainly in the Highlands. A mixed circle of both sexes danced round and round a central figure, who played on pipes or a flute, or sometimes (in more sophisticated days) even on a fiddle. This central figure was the Fertility Spirit's local priest and representative—a man dressed up full hairily in horns and a tail, Pan's living image. Nobody could deny there was something rather beastly about him. As the dance went on, the worshippers became gayer and gayer, in fact in their fine frenzy definitely abandoned. Perhaps that is why the poet Gray called them our ' rude forefathers '. Christianity had overthrown the newer gods far more easily than it conquered Pan and his beguiling pipes. So much so, that while all false gods were ' devils ' to the Christians, yet it was the image of the Horned One himself that they usually depicted as ' The Devil '. The spirit of fertility became to ecclesiastical thought especially identified with Evil, and soon the catholic words ' sin ', ' immoral ' and ' licentious ' took on a narrowed meaning that is perhaps behind many of our psychological, social and religious problems today. In 1489, the Inquisitors (who were all men) sensibly found that ' witchcraft is more natural to Women than to men, on account of the inherent wickedness of their hearts'. Nor is it surprising to find that Wine (or any intoxicant brew) and more especially Song were in exuberant demand at the witches' sabbaths. It is said that the witches, for instance, used to dance as late as the sixteenth century under the arches of the old bridge at Avignon: ' Sous le pont d'Avignon, on y danse tout en rond ' still has a fine diabolical ring. But by the eighteenth century such dances survived in the Highlands only as popular reels. The eightsome reel in its present form was evolved out of the old round reels by two Murrays, the 6th Duke of Atholl and the 7th Earl of Dunmore (whose son the 8th Earl, by the way, won the Victoria Cross) in the nineteenth century. The innocent mainstay of every Highland ball, the dancers still circle round a central figure; and as each successive man jigs alone in the middle, he raises his arms crescent-wise like antlers above his head, in a Stone Age symbol of the Horned One. But that is all. The pipe-major's piercing pipes are not the pipes of Pan.

A contemporary of the Wizard Earl of Bothwell and of the witch Marian McIngarrath was the famous Brahan Seer, many of whose remarkable prophecies still await fulfilment. ' Second Sight ' undoubtedly exists in the Highlands, in the sense that if the many witnesses to its existence were witnesses instead to a crime, somebody would be convicted on the overwhelming volume of their corroborative evidence. This also applies, of course, to the Loch Ness Phenomenon, better known as the Monster or ' Nessie '. We are told in a MS. History of the Campbells of Craignish, written c. 1717–1722, to cite but one instance, about ' the MacViccars being Rectors of it (Kilmun) but very lately before (1540), and from whom the old Parsons of Kilmalew, and Barons of Brenchellie, so famous for the surprizeing Gift of Prophesie inherent to that Race of the MacViccars for many ages '. It is hard to find the natural explanation for Second Sight, except perhaps on the basis of J. W. Dunne's Theory of Time.

A ' sheila-na-gig ' figure, built into the wall of the late mediaeval church of Rodil on the island of Harris, once the burial place of the MacLeod chiefs. These very ancient fertility symbols were often incorporated in old churches. After Harris passed from the MacLeods of Dunvegan in the nineteenth century, it was held for some time by the Murray earls of Dunmore, cadets of Atholl, and the present Earl is a Gaelic-speaker and piper who keeps up his connection with the island. The then Earl of Dunmore built Amhuinnsuidh Castle in North Harris in 1868. But Lady Dunmore is said not to have entirely approved of the sheila-na-gigs at Rodil, and to have made her gamekeeper shoot at them.

It is easier, of course, to account for visionary dreams of past events, by the theory of Ancestral Memory. A moment's reflection will shew that a general ' folk memory ' is impossible, for a man can no more inherit a memory from some unrelated person than he can inherit the colour of his eyes from him. But he does inherit the colour of his eyes, and indeed all his other basic features, mental and physical, in a jumble from his myriad ancestors: and every now and then things slip into a recognizable shape and someone is the ' spitting image ' of some ancestor: as for instance the late ninth Baronet of Moncreiffe closely resembled the first Baronet of Moncreiffe, who was born in 1626. It does not seem impossible that in our subconscious mind we similarly inherit a jumble of memories, occasionally falling into shape in the same picturesque way. This would account for many of the emotional prejudices, not always attributable to environment, that sway individuals for apparently very ancient historical or religious reasons about which they nevertheless usually have never heard. An interesting Highland case of visionary dreams is that of the late James Fraser, cartwright in Beauly, who shortly before the Second World War related to Charles Ian Fraser of Reelig, the meticulously careful Highland scholar, a dream which often recurred to him, and of which Reelig sent an account to the present writer shortly before his death in 1963. The cartwright proceeded to give such an account of the fatal battle of Blar-na-Leine by Loch Lochy in 1544 (when Mac Shimi and almost all the Frasers were slain fighting the Clanranald) as very few scholars could have compiled. Some of his details, though obvious in retrospect, had not generally occurred to anybody before. Other details can be corroborated from certain obscure sources, but it seems improbable for various reasons that this particular cartwright or any friend of his could have undertaken the necessary research. And his description of the contemporary costumes, equipment, and methods of fighting could scarcely be bettered. Reelig, though naturally sceptical, was unable to resist the impression that he was telling the truth. The Fraser clansmen were much inter-bred in their own clan country, and James Fraser the cartwright probably descended over and over again (through cousin-marriages within his own ancestry) from a particular Fraser eye-witness of the battle: so that his recurring dream could possibly well be an example of Ancestral Memory.

Another survival from ancient times was the crois taraidh or ' Fiery Cross ', the Scottish successor of the Old Norse ' fire arrow '. Two pieces of wood were charred at the upper end and then fastened together to form a Cross, to which was attached a rag dipped in sheep's or goat's blood. Being both burnt and bloody, the Cross represented Fire and Sword. In time of war, the chief or chieftain sent it in relays throughout every township and clachan in his territory. Each successive bearer, usually mounted on a garron pony, shouted out as he passed, a single word: the name of the Gathering Place. The normal gathering place of the Grants was ' Craigellachie ', of the Campbells ' Cruachan ', of the Robertsons ' Fea Choire '. Every able-bodied clansman thereupon seized his weapons and hurried to the appointed spot. Thus mobilisation was very rapid.

The Fiery Cross was used all over Scotland as late as the sixteenth century. Before the battle of Pinkie in 1547, when the English had invaded Scotland, ' the Governour of Scotland . . . caused certane herauldis and pursevauntes with all possible diligence pas throch all the partis of the realme with a fyrie croce bering fyre on the heid of it in thair handes, as the use of that realme hes bene in all gret extremiteis, chargeing all maner of man alswell spirituall as temporall of the aige betuix saxtene and saxtie bodin with armour in feare of wear to repair towart Mussilbruch with all possibill haist.' The last occasion on which the Fiery Cross called clansmen to war was in 1746, when Lord George Murray sent it out through Atholl in his attempt to retake Blair Castle from the advancing Hanoverians. But the Fiery Cross went out once again, during the General Election of 1820, and 800 Grant clansmen mobilised immediately and marched on Elgin to protect their Chief and his sisters, who had been blockaded in their townhouse there by an urban mob belonging to the opposite political party from that for which the Chief's brother was the candidate. The startled townsfolk gave no further trouble, except doubtless to vote as they pleased.

In time of peace, the chiefs gathered their clansmen periodically, to practise mobilisation and to make sure they were properly equipped and fit to fight. ' It was these ordinary people who formed the fighting men of the district in time of war, for the Scottish chiefs depended upon the loyalty and love of their own clansmen rather than on hired men-at-arms. Little countries of their own, the great districts were often at war with one another—but at least they knew their enemy and why they were fighting, and the casualties were nothing compared with those in the wars brought about by the existence of the vast agglomerate States of today.'

Gatherings called ' wapenschaws ' or weapon-shews were held both by highland chiefs and lowland lairds for the inspection of weapons, since they were responsible for the defence of their own territory and, in time of war, for the defence of Scotland. At these Gatherings, it was customary to hold Games at which feats of athletic prowess were performed by the local clansmen. For strength and alertness were prized by these warrior herdsmen. There were foot races and trials of strength, tossing the caber and putting the weight. Often, the opportunity was taken of driving the red deer for the great ' hunts ', when young clansmen learnt to use country in a martial way while collecting in the deer to pass the cross-bows or guns in the butts. In 1715, at Aboyne on Deeside, the Earl of Mar held a famous hunting party which emphasised the dual purpose of highland gatherings: hunting combined with preparation for war. The great hunt was attended by many of the peers and chiefs and, as a result of their deliberations, their host gathered his men in the Braes of Mar, raised the Jacobite royal standard, and began the 1715 Rising.

In time of national emergency, such as the Jacobite Risings, harsh measures were employed by the authorities on either side to force out those few who hung back, just as is done by the State in modern conscript War. The present writer was distressed, during the Second World War, to sit on the court-martial that tried a gipsy deserter, who had been conscripted and sent most unsuitably to the Grenadier Guards. Nevertheless, the unfortunate gipsy had to be sentenced to a term of imprisonment, for the country was at war and the State had so ordained. After the 1745 Rising, many clansmen wisely pled that they had been forced out by threats of burning their roof-trees, and there is no doubt that such threats combined with public opinion to bring out some unwilling men on both sides. On the other hand, Stewart of Garth tells us (of such chiefs as Grant, who thought it right, and MacLeod, who thought it wise, to support the Government cause in 1745) that: 'The sound arguments that prevailed with the Chiefs, who could comprehend them, had no influence on their followers who were, in this instance, more inclined to follow their feelings than listen to reason. Of this, the behaviour of the clan Grant was an instance. Eleven hundred men pressed forward to offer their services, on condition that their Chief would lead them, to support, what they styled, the cause of their ancient Kings. Afterwards, when it was found necessary to pay a compliment to the Royal General [i.e. Cumberland] by meeting him at Aberdeen, all the Chief's influence could only procure ninety-five followers to attend him; a Chief, too, much beloved by his people. In the Isle of Skye, likewise, Sir Alexander Macdonald (father of Chief

King George IV, by Wilkie. He had a great respect for his Highlanders and, in 1822, was the first de facto Sovereign to visit Scotland since 1651. The present writer believes that he was also the lawful Jacobite Sovereign.

Baron Macdonald) and the Lairds of Macleod, Rasay, and others, had 2,400 men ready, when expresses arrived from Culloden. The former remained at home with his men, Macleod obeyed the summons of the President [Forbes of Culloden, Lord President of the Court of Session] whose arguments had such influence. Though Macleod is described by this great law officer as the only man of sense and courage he had about him, his influence over his followers failed so completely, when they discovered that his opinion was different to their own, that he could not command the obedience of more than 200 men, although upwards of 1,000 men, consisting of his own people, the Laird of Rasay's, and other gentlemen, were ready at Dunvegan Castle. These, and several circumstances which occurred at that period, are of themselves sufficient to prove, that the Highlanders were not those slaves to the caprice and power of their Chiefs that they have been supposed; and that, on the contrary, as I have already noticed, the latter were obliged to pay court, and yield to the will and independent spirit of their clans. These facts also refute a general opinion, that those who engaged in the Rebellion were forced out by their Chiefs and Lairds.'

After the failure of the 1745 Rising, gatherings were frowned on for over half a century. But after the accession of King George IV, who wore the kilt (as did his brothers), had a special affection for the Highlanders and was the first Sovereign to set foot in Scotland for 171 years, local Gatherings and Games were held once more. His niece, Queen Victoria, loved the Highlands (where she made her own favourite home) and actively fostered the Games. At first, the authorities were a little worried, as when rowdyism occurred and swords were drawn at the Caledonian Society's gathering in Inver Park at Dunkeld in 1826. But although some, like the annual Atholl and Breadalbane Gathering , included processions of armed highlanders—the Lonach Gathering on Donside still does—the emphasis now moved more and more away from war and on to the Games. Nowadays, the old warlike training of the horsemen, 'tilting at the ring', is performed on motor-bicycle or jeep-back. Tossing the caber, putting the weight, and throwing the hammer, still continue. Piping and dancing were always features of these gatherings, and so the Highland Games once more became the annual meeting-place of the local community. It is sad that the smaller local Gatherings are now being quite deliberately taxed out of existence (by the decision of a former Tory Government) despite the vigorous protests of all lovers of the Highlands, at a time when special tax privileges are being accorded to an alien game of the English, called cricket.

Law and order was maintained in the highlands through two sorts of jurisdiction—the feudal power of the barons and the traditional authority of the chiefs. To some extent the two forms overlapped, as many chiefs were also barons. For example, Lochiel and Duart were baronies held of the Crown, as were Struan and Strathlachlan and Foulis. The Mackintosh was Baron of Moy under the bishopric of Moray, while other barons held their jurisdictions under the earldoms of Atholl and Erroll. A laird was a tenant-in-chief of the Crown, while a baron was somebody whose jurisdiction included powers of 'pit and gallows'. A barony was a unit of government and jurisdiction over a specified area, of which the baron was the local administrator. His duties in keeping the law included the powers of life and death for capital crimes, but his principal work was in day-to-day local organisation and social welfare.

The greatest Highland magnates even possessed the rights of Regality, with powers wider than those of the king's own Sheriff Courts (and they were usually the local hereditary Sheriff as well). For instance, the Atholl family had their Regality Courts at Logierait, where they were advised in a great council chamber by what amounted to a local parliament of nearly a hundred Atholl gentlemen, 'many of them of great landed property'. Stewart of Garth tells us of this Atholl 'feudal parliament' that it assembled in 'a noble chamber of better proportions than the British House of Commons'.

The feudal laws, which the barons themselves had enacted in Parliament, obliged them to provide certain facilities, such as a mill for their people, and to see that their heirs received adequate education to fit them for their baronial duties. A specified number of times each year, a baron had to hold a Baron Court. Those who held directly of the baron, called the 'goodmen', were divided into assizes which assessed the guilt or innocence of those brought before them. Over the Court there presided the baron himself, or more usually the Baron Bailie appointed by him. If the assize found somebody guilty, the sentence or doom was pronounced by the Deemster. The baron himself could sit in the court instead of his Bailie but could only be there as the judge, not as part of the assize or jury. He could however mitigate the sentence. A witch found guilty by an assize at Slains in 1597, for instance, was nevertheless freed by the 9th Earl of Erroll who was presiding; though the poor woman was later re-arrested and burnt by the less kindly burgesses of the City of Aberdeen. The assizes at the Baron Court also determined questions of local administration, such as 'should the Lang Craig be laboured, or should it lie fallow?'.

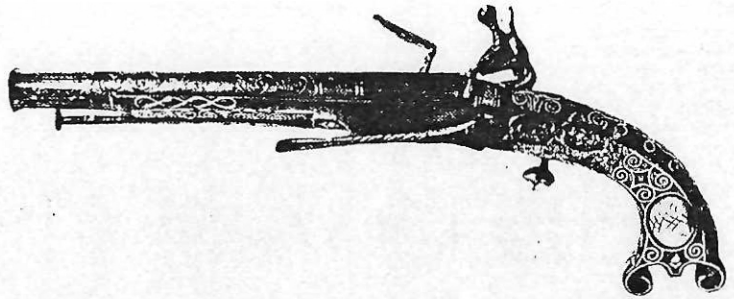
The jurisdiction of the chiefs as such was very different from that of the barons. By ancient custom, the chief was father and head of the family of all his clansmen, who therefore accepted his patriarchal rulings. His influence extended not only to the younger branches of his family who had acquired territories of their own elsewhere and still looked to him as patriarch, but also to individual members of the clan who had settled outside clan territory, and to the 'broken men' who had given him their calp (a bequest of their best beast) or who had adopted the chief's clan surname to secure his protection.

In view of the chiefs' traditional powers, the Scots Privy Council was wont to hold such of them as it officially recognised, responsible for the actions of all people of their clan or name. In this case, the Crown styled them, e.g. the Laird of MacGregor, even if they were not tenants-in-chief, the theory being that they held their clan, though not their lands, directly of the Sovereign. In the sixteenth century, the Government took hostages from them. In the seventeenth century, it made chiefs find cash security for their clansmen's good behaviour. By the eighteenth century, a 'bounty' or pension was sometimes paid by the Government to chiefs, in return for the task of keeping their clansmen under control. In 1714 the MacGregors, then a chiefless and broken clan, even went so far as to elect a remote cadet as 'Chief', simply in order to get the pension for them, with a secret agreement that he should split a third part of any pension received among the three chieftains—Roro, Glengyle and Bracklie—who each really claimed the true chiefship.

Often clansmen went to their own chief with a problem, and accepted his jurisdiction or arbitration, even if he did not have a legal title to his lands and they themselves were living elsewhere. A chieftain like MacDonell of Keppoch lived on lands which were not properly held of the Crown, nor at times by any good charter, yet his influence carried far beyond the bounds of his territory. In 1744 Cameron of Lochiel entered into an agreement with the MacDonell chiefs of Glengarry and Keppoch to deal with crime among their clansmen 'within proper districts of our estates (or where our authority among our followers and dependents will extend and reach)', and in accordance with this agreement, for example, Lochiel appointed a depute to deal with any offenders among the Camerons who had settled far away in Ardnamurchan, although it was former Clan Donald country then long in Campbell possession and nominally subject to Campbell jurisdiction.

Clan discipline was sometimes rather summary. The following incident occurred during the 1745 Rising. 'When (MacGregor of) Glencarnock and (Cameron of) Lochiel were at breakfast in the morning, they heard shooting on the brow of the hill, Lochiel said to Glen "What shooting can be in the hill?" Glencarnock answered "I shall tell you that the Camerons are shooting sheep on the hill".



Right-hand pistol of a pair carried by Donald Cameron, the 'Gentle Lochiel', in the 1745 Rising. Interlaced Ls for 'Lochiel' on the butt. He was Master of Lochiel in the Jacobite peerage, as his father, who was still living in exile, had been created Lord Lochiel by the Old Chevalier.

"God forbid" said Lochiel "it is the MacGregors". Says Glen "I shall lay forfeit one hundred guineas that it is not the MacGregors". With this the two left breakfast, and drew their pistols and vowed if they were Camerons that Lochiel would shoot them and if MacGregors that Glen would shoot them; and by great fortune, passing the head of the avenue, there was a Cameron with a sheep upon his back; Lochiel fired at the fellow, and shot him thro' the shoulder, there he fell, the two went on a good way further but they got not a MacGregor yet.'

Lochiel could not have shot the man in his capacity as Baron of Lochiel, because he would have had first to call the case before his own Baron Court to obtain a conviction and give sentence before punishment could be administered. He was simply shooting him as his Colonel and as the chief of his clan, and the tough Camerons in general accepted that he was doing right: they knew 'the Gentle Lochiel' well enough to know that though it was rough, in time of war it was justice. In the Government Army at that time, such an offender, if not shot to death instead, could have been given several hundred lashes of the cat-o'-nine-tails on successive days and would doubtless often have died under the torture.

Before the North of Scotland came to be considered as in some way different from the South, the Gaelic world had itself been divided by the quarrel between the Stewart kingdom, the heartland power, and Macdonald's realm, the western coastal power, which had originally been a local kingdom under the high king of Norway. Macdonald still regarded himself as King of the Isles under the Scottish high-kingship, but was regarded as Lord of the Isles by the mainland power. Moreover, Macdonald was also Earl of Ross and therefore held much of the northern mainland of the Highlands. Although this division between Macdonald and Stewart spheres of influence is blurred, it gave rise to a fairly well-defined social distinction between systems of land tenure adopted under the two régimes.

The parts of the highlands always held directly of the King of Scots, like Atholl, were feudalised at the same time as the rest of Scotland. Land was then held on a feu (the word is the same as fee) which implied security of tenure. A chief like Robertson of Struan, holding land feudally of the Crown, often feued some of it out to his own cadets, who in turn thus acquired security of tenure—and so on downwards. Eviction from land held feudally was impossible except on such grounds as rebellion. An even more outright concession to a cadet was to grant him lands in 'ward', which 'primarily involved service in the field without any regular payment whatsoever. But when a vassal was a minor the superior drew the whole profits of the lands. This was a most valuable perquisite, though, of course, its yield was uncertain. But ward had one disadvantage in the highlands. Custom entitled a chief anyway to the support of his clan; thus, in making a grant to a cadet, he was really giving away something for nothing.' But clansmen with ward-holdings were as secure as the feuars, in fact more so.

But Macdonald of the Isles had held the Hebrides and the earldom of Ross, a vast highland area including what is now called Inverness-shire, as an almost independent realm until nearly 1500. In these wilder highlands, a chief like Macdonald of Clanranald would usually grant to a younger son not a feu but a tack, which was a form of lease. The tack was often given for life. More usually it was for three generations. When this time was up, the then tacksman could try to buy the land in if his branch had done well enough and prospered. Sometimes this was accomplished by way of wadset, when his chief 'pawned' the land for a capital sum and did not redeem it. Otherwise, he was shifted to a smaller tack, but was nevertheless provided for within the clan country. As a result, the more distant a tacksman's relationship to the chief, the less land he held, unless he had managed to make and save enough to buy it in for himself; for there were always younger sons of later generations pressing for the land. However, until the end of the seventeenth century, this system encouraged the feeling of clanship; and the members of the clan did expect the chief ultimately to provide for them.

Indeed, the chief administered a clan 'welfare state'. Thus, when the 21st Chief of MacLeod died in 1707, twenty-six widows were receiving pensions from the Dunvegan rents, and his successor took over the duty of looking after 'the widows and crippled folk of the clan'. Again, we are told of Macneil of Barra in 1695 that: 'When a tenant's wife in this or the adjacent islands dies, he then addresseth himself to the Macneil of Barray . . . Upon this representation, Macneil finds out a suitable match for him; and the woman's name being told him, immediately he goes to her, carrying with him a bottle of strong waters for their entertainment at marriage, which is then consummated. When a tenant dies, the widow addresseth herself to Macneil in the same manner . . . If a tenant chance to lose his milk-cows by the severity of the season, or any other misfortune: in this case Macneil of Barray supplies him with the like number that he lost. When any of these tenants are so far advanced in years that they are incapable to till the ground, Macneil takes such old men into his own family, and maintains them all their life after.'

When the Lordship of the Isles was overthrown and the Earldom of Ross also annexed to the Scottish Crown, all Macdonald's grants of land to the native inhabitants became invalid. This, as also the system of tacks in those parts of the Highlands which he had ruled, enabled the triumphant Scottish government to make attempts at dispossessing ancient but troublesome clans by unfairly granting feudal charters of their lands to strangers. The charters themselves were all right, and gave security, but often to the wrong clan. Also, some chiefs were deliberately forced or inveigled into debt and their lands then foreclosed on, under the Scottish legal system that was incomprehensible to them and to their clansmen. The Campbells of Argyll in the West, and the Gordons of Huntly in the East, were the main instruments of Government policy at first. Then came the Jacobite forfeitures of the eighteenth century. Later, 'progressive' schemes to modernise the highlands by putting in sheep farms were helped by the same system of tacks which made evictions easy. Those highland families who had feus of their lands could not be evicted, providing they were held securely in feu by charter confirmed by the Scottish Crown. Therefore the Clearances were only completely possible in those parts of the highlands that had never been properly feudalised down to a fairly low level.

Of course, small holdings were never feudalised anywhere in the highlands. The tacksmen sometimes sub-let crofts to smaller tenants who were called mailers because they paid mail or rent. Later these mailers tended to become crofters holding their land directly of the Laird. Often these were joint tenants (see, for instance, the Judicial Rentals of the MacLeod Estates 1664, of the Macdonald Estates 1733, and the Mackinnon Estates 1751). Joint leases of up to three hundred acres of moorland and a little green pasture were often held by townships of tenants. These townships usually also divided annually by lot their much smaller arable acreage which was in 'runrig'. The infield was kept manured, but the outfield was simply ploughed until it was exhausted and then left to recover under grass. Such tenant families would keep two to twenty milk cows, several garron ponies and from twenty to two hundred sheep or goats.

In peacetime, the gentlemen of the clan had duties in attendance on their chief. In wartime, they officered its fighting force. In Islay, for example, each merkland maintained one gentleman in 'meat and cloth', who did no ordinary manual labour but had to be in constant readiness as one of the laird's household, ready both with service and advice. But, contrary to much woolly thought in modern times, the land was always theoretically the chief's or laird's, subject to customary obligations, for 'the idea that "there is no partnership in women or land" is of long standing in the highlands: cha bhi bràithreachas mu mhnaoi no mu fhearann.'

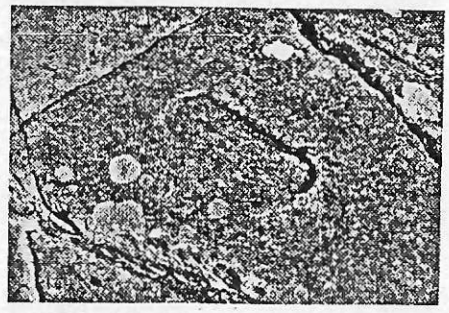
In times of war, the ordinary tenants formed the bulk of the chief's fighting force. Many were true clansmen whose genealogies went back at least nominally to the forefather of the whole clan. To the crofters this was important, because the chief and his branch chieftains accepted the usual Celtic moral obligation to ward off famine from their kindred and to provide a share in the ancestral lands for every descendant of the common ancestor. The system lasted until a Whiggish statute of the Scottish Parliament in 1695 eventually brought about the end of runrig tenure of the land. 'Nor is it difficult to date from the passing of this Act that break-up of the Clan system in its agrestic character, not reached, in its patriarchal aspect, until after 1746.'

The rest of the fighting force was made up of new-comers who had sought the chief's protection. For example, when the MacGregors massacred the MacLarens, slaying their chief and temporarily breaking the clan, many MacLarens went to the neighbouring chieftain, Campbell of Glenorchy, and offered him their calp. This was the best beast or steed in each clansman's possession at the time of his death, in return for which he and his heirs were protected, provided they followed that chief or chieftain. Calp was abolished by statute in 1617.

Attached to the tacks and crofts were usually a number of cottars who helped to labour them in return for a couple of cows and sufficient land of their own to sow a boll of oats. They were originally not true members of the clan but incoming 'broken men' or else descendants of the once unfree nativi, doubtless mostly of Pictish stock, who were attached in ancient times by 'direction of labour' to the soil of the country. But they too intermarried with the clansmen and other followers of the chief and, by the end of the seventeenth century, the whole of the chief's following was so much inter-related that everyone had come to be regarded as a member of the clan. This communal spirit was reinforced by the custom that the chieftains had of boarding out their own children to foster-parents, so that they were brought up to share the everyday lives of their people in the households of ordinary clansmen. But, by the middle of the seventeenth century, fosterage had begun to become honorary, and some chiefs nominally fostered their sons with honoured members of the clan, who took on certain financial or other obligations to the child without actually having to bring him up in their homes.

Yet, curiously enough, fosterage was originally a royal custom from pagan times, when a king was expected to be slain as a sacrifice by his successor. For the concept of clanship goes far back into the Celtic world, particularly into ancient Ireland. Each community was a little kingdom, for it was thought quite natural that there should be local kings acknowledging greater kings, indeed several grades of king. But it was the local king who actually administered his own local kingdom: the paramountcy of the greater kings being a matter of prestige rather than of government. Ancient Ireland contained a hundred, and Norway about thirty, little kingdoms. In what is now Scotland, there are said to have been seven kingdoms, excluding Argyll, the Orkneys, and everything south of the Forth and Clyde. There were Kings of Atholl, Kings of

The Royal Footprint carved in the rock at Dunadd, in the sacred inauguration place of the ancient Dalriadic dynasts who were Kings of Argyll. At his inauguration, each successive king placed his own foot in this footprint of his royal ancestors.



Strathearn (Fortrenn), Kings of Moray, Kings of Argyll and Kings of Strathclyde. We still talk of the Kingdom of Fife. There is no reason to suppose that people were less happy when they enjoyed local autonomy and were able to know their sovereign personally, as in Monaco and Liechtenstein today. The Benelux economy does not require that the Kingdom of the Belgians and the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg should be merged politically in the Realm of the Netherlands. But it seems that only very sophisticated people can distinguish between economic and political union: and so the greater kingdoms gradually swallowed up the little ones during the Middle Ages.

Whether Celtic or Norse in origin, the pagan kings were sacred beings. At his inauguration, each king had to go through various religious rituals, as a result of which he and his people felt that the Lucky Spirit of the community entered and dwelt in the king's body. This is what was meant when it was said that the royal families descended from the gods. Since this Lucky Spirit's human casket could not be allowed to decay, such kings were periodically sacrificed or slain by their rightful successors. Christianity, with its emphasis on Our Lord being the once only and final sacrifice, put an end to open king-slaying, although in practice Celtic kings went on being slain by their successors up to the eleventh century. Indeed, of the MacCarthy of Muskerry branch of the ancient royal house of Munster, we are told that 'the MacDonough MacCarthys kept up the custom of family murders' apparently as late as the sixteenth century. 'The attempt by each heir on the life of the successive dynasts of Muskerry seems to have been looked on with the religious fervour accorded by the Romans to the arena and by moderns to boxing contests. When the then Lord of Muskerry was slain by his heir in the sixteenth century, the murder was described as his being "slayne by his cosen Donaghe McOwen who had the best challenge to Muscrye".' A similar state of affairs can be observed among the Kings of Scots, until the sons of Saint Margaret ganged together against all comers, and put a stop to it.

A great Irish chieftain in his national dress: Sir Niall O'Neill, 2nd Baronet of Killeleagh, Lord Lieutenant of Armagh, who was mortally wounded as the Colonel of O'Neill's Dragoons, fighting for the Jacobite Cause at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. His portrait by J. M. Wright in 1680 (now in the Tate Gallery, though a slightly different version of it is at Dunrobin Castle) is unique, in that it depicts a great Irish noble in the Erse costume of that period; with his 'wild Irish' fringed cloak, curious but beautifully adorned Erse apron, long red hose, pointed brogues, Celtic dirk, basket-hilted broadsword, great oval shield of studded red leather, gold-tipped black javelin, and elaborately-tooled red leather conical cap with the flowing plumes of an Irish chieftain. Sir Niall descended in the direct male line from King Domnall 'the Young Ox' O'Neill, elder son of Aodh 'Athlone', King of the North of Ireland (1030—1033), whose younger son Anrothan was ancestor of the Highland chiefs of Lamont, Maclachlan, Macneil, MacEwen and other clans of Cowall and Knapdale in Scotland.

After the adoption of Christianity, the kings continued to receive the awe that had rightly been accorded to their sacrificial position, for it was felt that they still symbolised the Spirit of their people. As the supreme patriarch, the High King, whether in Ireland or in Scotland, was regarded in the Gaelic world as head of the whole national family: the Chief of Chiefs. In Ireland, the local kings of the Gaels were gradually brought under the English Crown. In 1515, a report to Henry VIII observed that 'ther byn more than 60 countryes, called Regyons, in Ireland, . . . some region as bygge as a shyre, some more, some lesse; where reygneith more than 60 Chyef Capytaynes, wherof some callyth themselffes Kynges, some Kynges Peyres, in their langage, some Prynceis, some Dukes, some Archedukes, . . .: and every of the said Capytaynes makeyth warre and peace for hymself, and holdeith by swerde, and hathe imperiall jurysdyction within his rome, and obeyeth to noo other person.' Although even the Macdonalds had stopped styling themselves kings by the sixteenth century, the situation in the Highlands was not so far different: and it is important for a proper understanding of the clans to realise that their chiefs, like the 'Chyef Capytaynes' of Ireland, were also of dynastic origin. Indeed, the seventeenth-century Wardlaw MS. tells us of the Highlands that 'all our chiftens derive themselves from kings and princes'. The Lord Lyon will still only allow crest-coronets (which are in fact open crowns) to Chiefs.

This royal background is of great importance in understanding Highland pride. For the clan were the 'children' of the chiefs, and the chiefs were the scions of the prehistoric Blood Royal. By the Middle Ages, the local kings had become earls or mighty lords, like the Earl of Strathearn who reigned 'by the Indulgence of God', or the Lord of the Isles, who was called the Shepherd of the Islands (Buachaille nan Eileanan). Nobody was ever made an earl in mediaeval Scotland, who was not either a king's son or cousin, or else married to a king's daughter or cousin, except in the case of local dynasts also of royal stock. The earls created between Flodden and the Union were equally drawn from the old nobility. Until the late seventeenth century, only earls (and the newer ranks of marquess and duke) wore coronets or open crowns, as 'cousins of the Sovereign', and had the royal ermine on their robes: and the full ceremonial style of an earl, proclaimed for instance at state funerals in the old days, is 'Most Noble and Puissant Prince'. When the Queen makes an ex-Prime Minister an earl, she is making him an honorary cousin of the Royal Family, and it would of course be a meaningless honour if, for example, Her Majesty's own brother-in-law were not also made Earl of Snowdon. There was no need to create the Duke of Edinburgh 'Prince Philip', since all dukes and earls are princes. That is why royal princes are called after their dukedoms or earldoms as soon as they are bestowed on them. It is only because we have nobody called 'prince' who is not already an earl, outside younger sons of the Royal Family who have not yet been given peerages, that the idea has gained ground that 'prince' is a separate (supposedly higher) rank than duke or earl.

The local dynasts' younger branches, in the male or female line, were settled in appanages. Their heads were the 'captains' or chiefs who held the actual thanages, often converted into baronies in feudal times. The word 'chief' is Norman-French, and was introduced into Scotland by the chiefs of great Norman families like the Bruces and Hays and Lindsays. It has long been used to translate the different words by which at various periods the Highlanders have designated the heads of their clans, although the earlier translation was 'captain' in the sense of headman (from Latin caput, a 'head') and still survives in the formal style of two of the greatest chiefs: the Captain of Clan Chattan and the Captain of Clanranald. (These should not be confused with the captains of castles, such as the Captain of Dunstaffnage.) In very early charters, the head of the clan is called the toiseach which was then translated into English as 'thane', and his territory (the clan's appanage) was called a thanage. Also, in some fourteenth-century charters, there appears the ancient Erse style ceann-cineal: head of the cenel or cineal, an older word in normal use than clan. The Cenel Conaill, for example, were the kindred of St. Columba and the ruling dynasty of Tirconaill ('Conall's Land', conquered by their ancestor King Conall Gulban in the fifth century) in Ireland. Similarly, before 1256 the last of the male line to hold the earldom of the old Earls of Carrick (a branch of the ancient Princes of Galloway) nominated by a special charter his brother's son Sir Roland of Carrick to the position of 'kenkynol' (ceann-cineal) of the old dynastic clan of Carrick—a position inherited from Sir Roland by the powerful Kennedy chiefs who were locally known as late as the sixteenth century as the 'Kings of Carrick'. When the gypsies first came to official notice under their celebrated Faa' or Fall dynasty, King James V granted the then Faa' a charter with a jurisdiction of life and death over all the 'Egyptians' in Scotland, and styled him 'Earl of Little Egypt': so it is perhaps interesting that the Privy Council in their turn styled him 'Captain of the Egyptians' as though he were a Highland chief.

The title 'chief' is now applied by custom only to the head of a whole Name—with certain exceptions, notably the heads of the principal branches of the royal Clan Donald, also sometimes those of the royal clan of Stewart, and the head of the Clan Fraser of Lovat, long separated from his Lowland kindred. The heads of branches are called 'chieftains'. Where chieftains held their lands directly of the Crown and not of their own chiefs (e.g. Campbell of Breadalbane or Maclean of Ardgour), they Kildrummy Castle, mediaeval centre of the great highland Earldom of Mar, that included Deeside and Donside, territory of the Forbes, Gordon and Farquharson clansmen. The Earldom of Mar is the oldest surviving peerage in Britain, dating from before peerages were created by the Crown, and the family of the present Countess of Mar are simply styled, e.g. 'Lady Janet of Mar'. It has passed through several heiresses over the centuries. But the Erskines, who had inherited the earldom through an heiress in 1438, were unjustly deprived of it by the Crown until 1565, as a result of which the head of the Erskines in the male line has been recognised as also holding a separate earldom of Mar from 1565, and is now styled the Earl of Mar & Kellie. The two peerages of Mar should, however, not be confused.

Sir Iain Glas Campbell of Glenorchy, Mac Chailein mhic Dhonnachaidh, afterwards 1st Earl of Breadalbane, known to his enemies as 'Slippery John'. The identification of this portrait has been disputed, but for various reasons the present writer does not doubt it. This is perhaps the earliest surviving painting of a highland chieftain in his national dress, and was taken by J. M. Wright c.1680 as a companion picture to that of Sir Niall O'Neill, the Irish chieftain. 'Slippery John' bought up the debts of the childless 6th Earl of Caithness, got a bond from him of his titles and estates, and after the earl's death managed to get a charter recognising himself as Earl of Caithness in 1677. The rightful 7th Earl opposed him in force at the head of the Sinclairs, so he and 700 of his Campbells marched north, invaded Caithness, and defeated the Sinclairs in battle. As his own men were dressed like him, in belted plaids, while the Sinclairs preferred to wear the trews, the Campbells of Glenorchy mocked the Sinclairs for their costume—and before the battle Glenorchy's piper, Finlay MacIver, taunted them with his specially composed tune Bhodach nam Brigeis: 'Gaffers in Trousers', now known as Breadalbane's Salute. The Sinclairs continued resistance, and King Charles II intervened. 'Slippery John' gave up the Earldom of Caithness, and in 1681 was created Earl of Breadalbane and Holland instead.

did not always follow their chief in political matters—but usually branches of the same surname acted collectively in matters affecting the affairs of their clansmen. This was true of the Lowlands, too, up to the seventeenth century; but continued in the Highlands until after Culloden.

Younger sons were settled within the appanage that formed the clan territory. Their children in turn settled there, and thus the clan took roots. For the word clan simply means 'children', and originally each clan was made up only of the immediate descendants of the man after whom it was named. Thus the Clan Donald were the actual descendants of King Donald, who was a Lord of the Isles in the thirteenth century; and the Macnabs, 'Sons of the Abbot', were the family of the hereditary Abbots of Glendochart. As there was little emigration, and as it was considered the moral duty of the chief to provide a portion of land within the appanage for every genuine member of his clan, generation after generation the land was divided up, with the smaller portions going on the whole to the more remote relations. These naturally intermarried with the other inhabitants of the district, and so the whole people of each territory gradually came to feel themselves related to the chief. Although this feeling was often fictional in the male line, it was usually very real in the female line. So, by 1746, MacDonell of Keppoch, a chief of the Blood Royal of the Isles with an ancestry going back to the gods, could refer naturally to his armed tenantry (in his dying words at Culloden) as 'the children of my tribe': clann mo chinnidh.

People often speak of 'old families'. In fact, of course, no family is older than any other, and what is really meant is that the particular families called 'old' have managed to maintain their identity and retain records of their past longer than the majority of other folk (to cite the present writer's Scottish genealogical introduction to the 1952 edition of Burke's Landed Gentry). People also speak loosely of 'blood running thin', as though a long-recorded family had in truth a longer descent than an unrecorded family—and sometimes they talk about 'new blood', when what they refer to is just as 'old blood' as anybody else's but happens to be (for better or maybe for worse) of unknown origin. It's also fashionable to talk about 'the accident of birth', as if it were by some accident that the nuptials of Mac Cailein Mor produce a typical Campbell, and not a Macdonald nor even a baboon. It is no accident that Winston Churchill was not a Russell, that Bertrand Russell is not an Alexander, or that Field Marshal Alexander is not a Churchill: indeed, their fathers would have eyed their wives' friends suspiciously had they turned out so. But it is, however, a true accident of birth that Sir Winston Churchill was not Duke of Marlborough, that Bertrand Russell was not Duke of Bedford, or that Field-Marshal 'Alex' was not Earl of Caledon: for it was by chance that elder brothers existed and survived. Similarly, it must not be forgotten that ultimately the true Highland clansmen descended just as much from their dynastic name-father as the chief himself did. When King George II asked to see a Highland soldier, two Black Watch privates, Gregor McGregor, 'commonly called Gregor the Beautiful', and John Campbell, son of Duncan Campbell of the family of Duneaves in Perthshire (a cadet of Glenlyon), were sent to London. 'They displayed so much dexterity and skill in the management of their weapons, as to give perfect satisfaction to his Majesty. Each got a gratuity of one guinea, which they gave to the porter at the palace gate as they passed out. They thought that the King had mistaken their character and condition in their own country.' For Private Gregor McGregor was as much a descendant of the original chief, Gregor of Golden Bridles ('Royal is my Blood'), as was the then Chieftain of the Children of the Mist; and Private John Campbell could trace his descent from Great Colin as easily as could the Duke of Argyll himself.

Prince Charles Edward's rescuers, Miss Flora Macdonald and her attendant Neil MacEachan, were just as much the descendants of Somerled, King of the Isles, as were Clanranald and Sir Alexander Macdonald of Macdonald themselves. And the tremendous vigour of the old kings burst out repeatedly in the humblest of their scions. Neil MacEachan's son, for instance, born in exile, became that Alexandre Macdonald, Duc de Tarente, whom Napoleon made a Marshal of France. But it was an advantage to them psychologically, that the main line of their chiefs always held on, with their family records, in the old clan country: for it enabled all of the clan to feel part of a continuous and traceable history, to have the knowledge of belonging to a truly historic family—abroad too often limited to a narrow upper class, but in the Highlands the prerogative of all. Even the famous Macfie race of tinklers bear 'one of the oldest and most interesting Gaelic personal names we possess'. Furthermore, a man's daughter is just as much his child as his son is—and a descent in the female line is still a descent: nobody could have been born at all if any single one of his myriad ancestors had died in infancy. The present writer doubts whether even one of the gallant clansmen who fought at Culloden could ever have been born to be there at all, had King Kenneth mac Alpin been strangled in his cradle. 'Butcher' Cumberland might well have reflected that this would have been an excellent thing, were it not that His Royal Highness also descended, many many times over (through cousin-marriages within his own ancestry), from the same King Kenneth mac Alpin.

Descents link downwards in the social scale. Kings married across the oceans, nobles across the counties, but until modern times ordinary folk married near to home. So the likelihood, for example, of a particular Mackay clansman of today descending from a particular Clan Donnachaidh clansman of the fourteenth century is infinitely remote. But it is not at all unlikely that the same Mackay clansman should descend from King Robert Bruce. If he had any descent in the female line (with so much intermarriage in Strathnaver) from Niall 'of the Bass', Chief of Mackay in 1433, he would therefore also descend from Niall's mother Elisabeth of the Isles, daughter of Macdonald himself, and her mother was in turn a daughter of King Robert II, grandson of King Robert Bruce. Similarly, the likelihood of a particular Clan Donnachaidh (Robertson) clansman of today descending from a particular Mackay clansman of the fourteenth century is equally remote. But it is most improbable that the same Robertson clansman would not descend (through local intermarriage in Atholl) from the prolific Stewarts of Garth, whelps of the Wolf of Badenoch, himself a son of King Robert II, the grandson of King Robert Bruce. Indeed, it is most improbable that there is any Highland chief today who does not descend from King Robert Bruce, nor any other Highlander who does not descend from King Kenneth mac Alpin, who united the Picts and Scots. It is the royal stock that is genealogically as well as politically the unifying force that makes all Scotsmen true kinsmen. So the royal style was patriarchal not territorial, for it embraced Scotsmen everywhere into the national family: not 'King of Scotland' but 'King of Scots'. Today the Queen, the reigning descendant of Queen Victoria and Mary Queen of Scots, of Robert Bruce and Malcolm Ceann-mor and Kenneth mac Alpin, as also of the ancient dynasts of the Picts and Scots, the Norse and Britons, is the head of this national family: the Chief of Chiefs, who freshly incarnates the Spirit of Caledonia.

Cruachan, the famous mountain at the head of Loch Awe. Now it has a reservoir storing eight million units of electricity; and two-thirds of a mile inside Ben Cruachan is an underground power station of four hundred megawatt capacity, inclined shafts rising through the mountain rock from the power station to the reservoir. Surrounding mountain peaks can be seen rising through the mist behind Ben Cruachan. The ancient Campbell gathering-place, however, was at another Cruachan, a village opposite Innischonaill Castle on lower Loch Awe.

The clans are thus simply the historic branches of this national family. So it is not surprising that the Highlander, whose clan can be traced back to one of the ancient royal houses of pre-Christian times, and whose nostalgically-remembered territory was an appanage—the clan's special portion of an immemorial realm—and not a purchased estate, usually has a great pride in his ancestry and a deep love of his homeland. This feeling is by no means for the Highlands in general. When Burns wrote 'My heart's in the Highlands' he was expressing no Highland sentiment. A Highlander would feel, my heart's in Appin, or in Atholl ('cam' ye by Atholl?'), or in Lochaber ('maybe to return to Lochaber no more')—but historically speaking, he might have been only too willing to take Fire and Sword to the neighbouring districts. 'Cruachan' means nothing to a Grant, nor 'Craigellachie' to a Campbell: but reversed, their significance is intense. For each branch of the national family—anyway in the Highlands—prefers its own home ground.

Chiefs were called most usually after the namefather of the clan, e.g. MacGregor, 'the Son of Gregor'. In English, from at least the sixteenth century onwards, there was a tendency either to call the chief 'the Laird of MacGregor' or else 'MacGregor of that Ilk'—treating his clan as if it were his estate, which indeed the Crown did when it took hostages from him even when he wasn't a Crown tenant—a style which in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries got Englished still further into 'MacGregor of MacGregor' (luckily, to avoid confusion, the present chief has the Christian name of Gregor, and is easily remembered as Sir Gregor MacGregor of MacGregor). In popular conversation, chiefs are often called 'The' in English: the first reference to the Clan Gregor chief as such appearing in the seventeenth-century Black Book of Taymouth, 'although not righteous heir to the MacGregor'. A MS. of the reign of James VI tells us 'How the MacLeoid of the Lewes was with his whol trybe destroyed', and The Chisholm appears in the Inverness Council records of 1654, as soon after does The Dallas. A rather more modern example is an entry in Sir Frederick Ponsonby's Game Book for 23 August 1911: 'Moy Hall. 7 guns. The King, The Mackintosh, Ld. Tullibardine, Ld. Lovat, Sir C. Cust, Angus Mackintosh and F.P.—1009 grouse'. But sometimes chiefs were called in English after their appanage, e.g. Lochiel or Glengarry, though in that case they always had a Gaelic patronymic too. Lochiel was Mac Dhomnuill Dhuibh, 'the Son of Black Donald'; and Glengarry was Mac Mhic Alasdair, 'the Son of the son of Alexander'. The Robertson chief was called Struan (or sometimes Struan Robertson, to distinguish him from the Murray laird of Strowan), but the Perth Hunt were perhaps unnecessarily emphasising his position as chief when the then Robertson of Struan was entered in their minutes on 30 September 1862 as 'The Struan'.

The surname of the dynastic clan spread only gradually throughout their territory. For example, the Earls of Lennox were mighty rulers, sprung from ancient royal stock. They had a younger branch, who received as their appanage Arrochar in the Lennox. The head of this branch in the early fourteenth century was called Bartholomew. So his descendants were naturally called Macfarlane, which (of course) means 'Son of Bartholomew'. They became chiefs of the ruling clan in the Arrochar district. Their younger branches were also settled there. They too came to be called Macfarlanes. To repeat, more and more of the people in the district intermarried with them until—although they might not actually all be called Macfarlane—they all regarded themselves as belonging to the clan and as being related to the chief, in whose country they were living and of whom they were holding their own homes.

Walking stick presented by the Prince of Wales (afterwards King George V) to The Mackintoh in 1909, to the inscription on which was added the bag of grouse on each successive later Royal Visit to Moy. The King held at least one Privy Council at Moy, and Lloyd George held a Cabinet Meeting there, while staying with The Mackintosh, Lord Lieutenant of Invernes-shire.

The ordinary highlanders did not necessarily have the same surname as their chief, although they often adopted it latterly. Indeed, until a late stage, most highlanders did not take fixed surnames at all. When they did, some clans like the Campbells, Cummings, Frasers and Mackenzies encouraged them to take the name of the chief's family. All the same, clan surnames were not nearly as widely adopted as many people suppose. For example, the mass of the ordinary people who made up the clan regiments in the '45 had very different names from the clan surname. The officers mostly did have the same name as the chief, but they were usually tacksmen and therefore almost certainly relations.

Thus there is only a half-truth in the popular idea that all the people in a given area had the same name and belonged to the same 'tribe'. Certainly they felt that they belonged to the local clan: and, for instance, highlanders who lived in the Robertson country would have Robertson relations and would tend to hold their land of Robertson lairds. But the clan was not a great tribe of people all called Robertson living from prehistoric times in one area and electing a chief called Struan. Quite the opposite, the area was held by Struan, descendant of its ancient dynasts, and he threw his branches like roots downward. They radiated out and gradually absorbed everyone else. Just as the system was becoming really tribalised—when Keppoch referred to his clansmen at Culloden as 'the children of my tribe'—it was broken.

When the Whig revolution took place in Britain at the end of the 1680's, its strongest opponents were the Irish and the Highlanders. Although perhaps they had suffered most from the Scottish Crown in the past, they showed enormous loyalty to it in adversity and fought like fiends. They defeated the Whig army at Killiecrankie, although it was commanded by a Highlander, Lord Reay's cousin General Hugh Mackay of Scourie. Seeing what a great danger the military organisation of the Highlanders could be, the Government (inspired not so much by the Campbells as by the Dalrymple Master of Stair) attempted to teach them a lesson of terror with the massacre of Glencoe. But the action boomeranged. For it was so horrifying that the propaganda worked against those who had attempted to make use of the massacre as an 'object lesson' to the clans. In the upshot, Sir Thomas Moncreiffe of that Ilk, as Clerk of the Exchequer (i.e. permanent head of the Treasury) signed a special authorisation for compensation to be paid to the surviving Macdonalds of Glencoe.

In 1715, the Government felt the power of the highland broadsword to such an extent, that they began to realise that the Highlanders had to be subdued in order to bring them within the organisation of the rest of the British Isles. Forts were built at Fort George in Inverness, halfway down the Great Glen at Fort Augustus, and at the south-western end of the Great Glen at Fort William, all three called after members of the Hanoverian royal family. Block-houses were erected, garrisons installed, and General Wade, a humane and charming man who got on very well with the Highlanders, started building roads and the delightful hump-backed 'Wade bridges' as his lines of communication through the Highlands. Officially, Highlanders were disarmed after the '15 Rising, but they concealed their weapons in the thatch of their houses and wherever else they could. Again in 1745 (as it seemed to the English) these gibbering aborigines, speaking an alien tongue, dressed in strange garb, bearing the sort of shield their ancestors might have borne against Julius Caesar, came rushing down, albeit in comparatively small numbers, but this time as far as Derby, chasing everybody before them. The Central Government was now so disturbed that it took a great deal of trouble to lessen the power of the Highlanders ever to do such a thing again.

In 1747, the heritable jurisdictions of the great chiefs were abolished by Parliament, against the votes of the majority of Scottish members of both Houses and contrary to the express terms of the Treaty of Union (which surely should only lawfully be modified by a majority of the Scottish representatives: else what was the point of negotiating the Treaty at all). It is said that this freed the people, but in fact the disappearance of the Baron Courts removed their traditional share (as members of assizes) in local government and turned the former units of administration into ordinary estates. And it is not clear why a local bailie appointed by the Duke of Atholl, who was dependent on local feeling, and was administering local customary law, should always be supposed worse than a sheriff substitute politically appointed by the Crown without local knowledge. Certainly, when the troubles came, the Government sheriffs took little account of local popular feeling. These old local jurisdictions would of course have died a natural death in the nineteenth century, but for quite different reasons.

The century following the overthrow of the clans in 1746, saw an unparalleled population explosion in the Highlands, that led inevitably to great hardship. Excluding Orkney and Shetland, which are outside the Highlands, the 'Crofting Counties' are Argyll, Inverness-shire, Caithness, Sutherland, Ross and Cromartie. Their total population in 1755, i.e. at the time of the overthrow of the clan system, was 216,952. Today their total population is slightly larger: at the 1961 census it was 241,389. But the chaotic period of population explosion in these counties was in the first half of the nineteenth century. In 1801, before the 'Clearances' it had risen to 255,993. In 1851, after the Clearances, it had risen by about another thirty per cent to the unprecedented figure of 334,475. These figures, coming at a time when the Industrial Revolution was changing the whole economy of the country, give some idea of the problem with which Highland estate administration was faced at this period. Different lairds tried to meet the situation in different ways. But whatever method was tried, the situation remains the same. Cattle economy on the high ground is no longer economic. Sheep failed when the Napoleonic Wars' blockade came to an end. Except for some subsidised crofters, folk no longer live in the narrow glens, whether 'cleared' or not, but are settled in the broader fertile straths or in the coastal districts. However, industry never took root in Highland hearts so long as they were rooted in the Highlands. Men of Highland descent flourish in great cities from Glasgow to Toronto. But in the Highlands they could not accustom themselves to urban life. Burghs like Inverness were planted by alien merchants; and even a cathedral town like Dunkeld was never a large place.

Emigration took away only a part of the expanding surplus population. At first the chiefs and chieftains, feeling their clansmen belonged to the Highlands, tried to dissuade their people from emigration. Burns, who did not really understand Highlanders (though his romantic sympathy for them is even more lyrically moving today than ever) attacked Lord Breadalbane for trying to discourage his own people from emigrating from the glens to the New World. Later, as the population explosion continued, some lairds, who found the pressure of economics made them unable to give their surplus population an adequate subsistence, assisted emigration out of their own pockets. As the Highland economy staggered from crisis to crisis, harsh measures were as ineffectual as the old ways in dealing with the situation. Mr. John Prebble, perhaps the most recent authority on the worst Clearances, suggests that if the hard-pressed lairds had followed the wise advice of Sir John Sinclair of Ulbster, greatest and best of the chieftains in Caithness, a 'slow and considerate change' could have made the conversion to sheep a benefit to the small tenants, with 'native shepherds among the Highlanders' acting as herdsmen in common to joint townships pooling their holdings and capital. It is an historically emotional disaster that this was not tried: even though retrospective commonsense tells us that it, too, would probably not have worked. A further and postponed disadvantage is that 'sheep monoculture in the Scottish Highlands has been slowly destroying fertility for the last 150 years or more, by eating out the finer grasses, leaving coarser grasses and bracken to predominate'. As it was, when cattle proved uneconomic, Lowland-run sheep farms cleared the higher straths—not only to fail in their turn, but actually to encourage a further increase in the population who had been shifted to the lower ground.

Colonel David Stewart of Garth (himself a whelp of the Wolf of Badenoch) wrote in 1822: 'While the country was portioned out amongst numerous tenants, none of their sons were allowed to marry till they had obtained a house, a farm, or some certain prospect of settlement, unless, perhaps, in the case of a son, who was expected to succeed his father. Cottagers and tradesmen were also discouraged from marrying, till they had a house, and means of providing for a family. These customs are now changed. The system of throwing whole tracts of country into one farm, and the practice of letting lands to the highest bidder, without regard to the former occupiers, occasions gloomy prospects, and the most fearful and discouraging uncertainty of tenure. . . . Having now no sure prospect of a permanent settlement, by succeeding to the farms inherited by their fathers, nor a certainty of being permitted to remain in their native country on any terms, they marry whenever inclination prompts them. The propriety of marrying when young, they defend on this principle, that their children may rise up around them, while they are in the vigour of life, and able to provide for their maintenance, and that they may thus ensure support to their old age; for no Highlander can ever forgo the hope that, while he has children able to support him, he will never be allowed to want. . . . If a poor man's family are under the necessity of going to service, they settle among themselves which of their number shall in turn remain at home, to take charge of their parents, and all consider themselves bound to share with them whatever they are able to save from their wages.'

During this difficult century, some estates felt obliged to reintroduce (until 1886) the old pre-Culloden convention in the form of an actual prohibition to marry on the estate without leave, properly granted on evidence of economic ability to support a family. The lairds of course applied a rather similar rule to their own children in the 'cut-him-off-with-a-penny' Victorian mode: as happened to the late Cluny Macpherson's father. Today, perhaps only young officers of the Brigade of Guards are still thirled in such a way. For example the present Lords Lovat, Bute, Forbes and Ogilvy, the Master of Lovat, The Menzies, Maclean of Duart, Colquhoun of Luss, Rattray of Rattray, MacGregor of MacGregor (and for that matter, the present writer) have all, while subalterns in the Scots or other Foot Guards, been obliged to apply for permission if they wanted to marry; a permission that is by no means automatically granted.

When the Clearances came, some of the wholesale evictions were caused by avarice, some by economic pressure on the debt-burdened lairds, yet others (what is the worst of all) by Good Intentions. To this last and nastiest category belonged the notorious Sutherland Clearances, ordained and expensively paid for out of his own pocket for purely doctrinaire reasons by an English liberal 'planner', the Marquess of Stafford (later created Duke of Sutherland) who was horrified to find his wife's ' tenantry ' living like Afghans in their huddled huts up the glens, and zealously removed them against their will but ' for their own good ' to light industries in the coastal areas. The population of Sutherland increased during these Clearances from 23,117 in 1801 to 25,793 in 1851, but the methods adopted (unknown to the Sutherland family) by the factors in carrying out this ' redeployment ' of ' local labour ' were unnecessarily insensitive and bitterly oppressive. There is nothing such a planner understands less, nor is annoyed by more, than heart-felt ' sentimental reasons ' for passionately wanting to go on doing what he in his Olympian certainty considers non-utilitarian, uneconomic or irrational. Scotland's loss was the Commonwealth's gain, as we are reminded in Andrew Dewar Gibb's Scottish Empire (London 1937). Mr. Ian Grimble, a sensitive and up-to-date researcher into these particular Clearances, said in a recent speech that Karl Marx had found them ' very much to the purpose as he rummaged about in the British Museum piling up evidence for Das Kapital '. The present writer, when he worked in Russia in 1946, observed Stalin's brutal ' Clearances ' of whole nations like the Volga Germans and the Crim Tatars as an irony of history, since they were brought about ultimately by Marx.

Sir Gregor MacGregor of MacGregor, Chief of the Children of the Mist, a skilled mechanic and parachutist.

The Clearances in general took several forms. Some were not total evictions (and the distinction is not always sufficiently made in works on the subject) where the dispossessed had to leave the district for ever; but were instead examples of planning within a district, people being moved from black-houses in glens and resettled in other accommodation on another part of the same estate—rather like the ' slum clearances ' carried out by modern town councils, often with equal harshness in the case of old folk naturally attached to their old homes, however decrepit. In other cases, chiefs who had struggled not to evict their clansmen fell so much into debt in the effort, that their creditors did it for them. Thus Lord Macdonald, a kindly chief who adhered to the patriarchal school, who had ' spent all his resources on the relief of destitution ' among his people during the Potato Famine of 1846, found himself in the hands of his creditors, who formed themselves into a body of Trustees and forced him to clear part of North Uist: though he insisted on remitting arrears of rent, taking crop and stock at valuation, and himself paying to assist the resulting emigration. Another Clan Donald chief, MacDonell of Glengarry, who had been obliged by the Highland economic collapse to sell Invergarry and emigrate to Australia, wrote from the Antipodes during the Potato Famine to remit until better times all rent from his remaining tenants in Knoydart, for he looked on them ' less as tenantry than as children and followers ': but his hard-faced Sassenach widow, less MacDonell-minded but equally hard-pressed for cash, afterwards went back on his wishes. Tragically enough, none of the coercion was really necessary, for the people would eventually have gone anyway, as they have done equally from the estates that never cleared.

In many cases, clansmen emigrated together, often led by a chieftain or even sometimes by their chief himself. Thus, in the middle of the eighteenth century, some of the Mackintoshes of Borlum (descended from the 16th Chief of Mackintosh) led 200 clansmen in an organised emigration to Georgia, where they were settled south of Savannah along the north bank of the Altamaha River, to act as a buffer between the English colonists and the Spaniards of Florida. From one of their leaders (through a later marriage to a charming Creek squaw) descends Waldo E. McIntosh, present Principal Chief of the Creek Nation: 20,000 redskins in Oklahoma and Indiana. A Macneil chieftain emigrated from Vatersay off Barra at the head of 370 Barra men in 1802, settling in America, whence his great-grandson returned as the then Chief of the Clan Macneil to restore their ancestral sea-girt stronghold. The Macnab, having negotiated with the Canadian authorities for a tract of some 81,000 acres in the New World, emigrated at the head of his clan to Canada. Here things went wrong tribally speaking, through his ignorance of Canadian as opposed to Scots law, when it came to the obvious point when a particular ' clever ' clansman had to take him either for his natural patriarch or else for a ' testy tyrant '; indeed, much controversial research might be required to determine whether it was ever possible to transplant something of the pre-Culloden clan system to the New World, but commonsense tells us that it was doomed everywhere in its pristine forms. But a cousin and later chief, Sir Allan MacNab (1798–1862), became Prime Minister of Canada.

However, many reactionary chiefs and chieftains were horrified altogether by the Clearances. Struan Robertson refused to clear: now his heir has no land in Scotland and has to live in Jamaica. Mackenzie of Cromartie (heir of the forfeited Jacobite earl) not only refused to evict anyone —the County of Cromartie was formed from the family estates—but also sheltered and settled as many refugees as he could from the local evictions over his border (the ' Ross of Balnagowan ' laird of his day was an interpolating Lowlander called Ross—ultimately ' de Roos '—in no way related to the old chiefs of the local Clan Ross). By an ironic somersault of history, the present talented and socially-conscious Countess of Sutherland is the descendant of the Cromartie who sheltered the victims of those Clearances. Other chiefs, like Lord Lovat, who disapproved of the clearances, improvised temporary shelter for refugees from elsewhere, until they could provide more permanent accommodation for them on another part of their estate. But in the end, nobody would endure the hardships of the high ground in a modern world, and the mountain-tops were left to their oldest inhabitants: the red deer and the ptarmigan.

Other clans met the economic crises in what can only be called a truly clannish way. The MacLeods typify this. In the late eighteenth century the whole MacLeod economy was in a state of collapse, for chief and clansmen alike. The 23rd Chief tried desperately to persuade his impoverished clansmen not to emigrate: ' besought them to love their young chieftain, and to renew with him the ancient manners . . . and promised to do everything for their relief which in reason I could '. They did love him, and the tacksmen of the clan came forward of their own accord and entered into a voluntary obligation to pay a 7½ per cent increase in rent, ' in the hope that it may enable MacLeod and his Trustees to re-establish his affairs and preserve the ancient possessions of his family . . . on condition that, as our principal motive for coming under the voluntary obligation is our attachment to the present MacLeod, to the standing of the family, and our desire of their estate being possessed entire, we shall be freed therefrom if we shall have the misfortune to lose him by death, or if any part of the estate be sold '. This just enabled the estate to be maintained, and they then made provision for an allowance to the MacLeod chief himself, but he would not accept it, preferring instead to join the Army and seek his fortune in prize money at war. He raised personally the 2nd Battalion of the Black Watch, becoming its first Lieutenant-Colonel, and soon rose to be Second-in-Command of the whole Indian Army, where he had many adventures. Thus had the clan saved their chiefly heritage.

The other side of the same coin was shown two generations later. The 25th Chief of MacLeod ruined himself ' in 1846 in his efforts to succour his people in the great Potato Famine. The potato was the staff of life of the greater part of the population of Skye at that time; and when the crop entirely failed for two years, more than two-thirds of the inhabitants were destitute. MacLeod of MacLeod and his wife laboured to help and encourage his people. He beggared himself in providing food and work for them, so that at the age of thirty-seven he had to take a junior post in the Home Office in London in order to support himself and his family; and it was only in his old age that he was able to live in Skye '. Meanwhile, Dunvegan Castle was ' stripped of all that could be sold, pictures, plate and furniture ', to raise funds to feed his starving clansmen. Although he had had no legal obligation to do anything, Norman MacLeod of MacLeod had acted as a true Chief, and the Skye folk have never forgotten him.

Disaster after disaster struck the Highlands. For a while, in the first quarter of the nineteenth century, it seemed as though kelp might save the Western Isles and the mainland coastal districts. Kelp was the seaweed industry, introduced in 1765. Seaweed was exported to England as a rich fertiliser. Seaweed was also at first cut and burnt to produce soda. After 1823, when the Leblanc process was discovered in England, kelp was still used to produce iodine. It had subsidiary uses in the manufacture of soap and glass: and indeed the algae industry has been revived in the Hebrides today by Campbell-Preston of Ardchattan and Lochiel's brother, Colonel Charles Cameron—among the many modern by-products being, the writer understands, lovely red cherries for cocktails. The disadvantages of the kelp industry 150 years ago are said to have been that the seaweed was all taken up for industrial purposes, when previously it had been an essential source of agricultural manure, and that labour was similarly diverted from agriculture: but in fact when kelp failed, agriculture proved to be no adequate substitute. For a while, the Hebridean economy boomed. Macdonald of Clanranald (who has rather unfairly been accused of ' clearing ' when in fact he moved some black-houses to another part of the estate in the course of landscape gardening) became prosperous enough—at one glorious moment, £18,000 a year in solid golden sovereigns—to join White's and to be fêted as ' Clanronald Macdonald ' in Almack's: London's most exclusive night-club ever. Suddenly, he was broke. All had to be sold. He was gone. The new landlords began clearing at once. A sad saying was blown away in the wind: ' To whom shall I make my complaint, and no Clanranald in Moidart? '.

For, when the tariff protection that was saving the coastal economy was removed in the Whiggish interest of Free Trade, the last buttress of Hebridean life collapsed. Nearly two centuries before, the Brahan Seer had predicted that Nuair a bhitheas maor nan ordagan mora agus dall nan ceithir-meoraibh-fichead comhla ann am Barraidh, faodaidh MacNeill Bharraidh 'bhi deanamh deiseil na h-imirich: ' when the big-thumbed Sheriff-Officer and the blind man of the twenty-four fingers shall be together in Barra, Macneil of Barra may be making ready for the flitting '. And so it came to pass. The irascible General Roderick Macneil of Barra went bankrupt when the kelp industry failed as a result of the Government's Free Trade policy, a big-thumbed sheriff officer crossed over from South Uist (sharing the ferry with a well-known but decidedly unwelcome blind man who had twelve fingers and twelve toes) to serve the writ upon him, and in 1838 the island of his forefathers was taken from him and sold to absentee proprietors. Nothing the chiefs or the clansmen could do would suffice against the forces of economy when the Government (however objectively) was on the other side.

All this might have been the end of the clan idea, had not Pitt the Elder realised that the Highlands held an enormous reservoir of well-behaved martial men who were not being used. More than a century earlier, the Mackay chief Donald, 1st Lord Reay (commemorated in the beautiful MacCrimmon pibroch Domhnall Dual Mac Aoidh, ' Donald the Real Mackay ') had raised a regiment of several thousand Highlanders first for the Danish Service, and then for the Swedish Service, to assist the Protestant Cause in the Thirty Years War. There was a Gaelic saying:

Na h-uile fear a theid a dholaidh
Gheibh e dolar o Mhic Aoidh

' Whoever is down on his luck, can still get a dollar (thaler) from Mackay.' The exemplary character of these Highland mercenaries is perhaps not sufficiently remembered. Monro's Expedition (London 1637) has many anecdotes shewing that their good conduct when billeted on civilians was as remarkable as their courage. At this period, the senior general of the Scottish mercenaries in the Swedish Service was one of the present writer's favourite forefathers, Field-Marshal Sandy Leslie, afterwards Earl of Leven (his mother was a Stewart girl in Rannoch), ' the old, little, crooked souldier ' who issued and rigidly enforced a proclamation ' forbidding the firing of any dwelling-house, hewing down fruit trees, killing a yielding enemy, outrages on women, &c., and stating that " murther is no less intollerable in the time of War than in the time of Peace ".' Throughout the rest of the seventeenth century and the first half of the eighteenth century other Mackays officered the Scots-Dutch Brigade in the service of the Netherlands, doubtless recruiting many of their men from their own clan territory. From 1704 to 1712 the Scots Guards had a Highland Company, who wore tartan and belted plaids, spoke Gaelic and were stationed at Inverness. This Highland Company Scots Guards was the first unit in the British Army to have a piper on their authorised establishment.

'The first quadrille at Almack's'. Left to right: the Marquess of Worcester, the Countess of Jersey, Clanronald Macdonald and the Marchioness of Worcester. Genealogically, the dancing figures are interesting, since three of them were natural scions of Blood Royal in the direct male line. Lord Worcester, though surnamed Somerset, was really a Plantagenet, sprung from Fulk of Anjou, King of Jerusalem, through King Edward III, knight-armoured victor of Crécy and Poictiers. Lady Worcester, surnamed FitzRoy, was a Stuart, ultimate outcome of King Charles II's sport with the Duchess of Cleveland. 'Clanronald Macdonald' (as Harriette Wilson calls the third dancer in this picture) came of a race less sophisticated but also more anciently royal, the line of Somerled, King of the Isles, slain by treachery in the twelfth century. Reginald George Macdonald, nineteenth Chief and Captain of Clanranald, was like Lord Worcester a member of White's and of Parliament.

By the Regency, Almack's (they say it was an anagram and that its founder's real name was MacCall) had become 'the seventh heaven of the fashionable world'. At ten golden guineas each, tickets for the weekly balls were almost unobtainable, as their distribution was determined by 'a feminine oligarchy less in number but equal in power to the Venetian Council of Ten'—Ladies Castlereagh, Jersey, Cowper, Sefton and Willoughby d'Eresby, with the Princesses Esterhazy and Lieven—the capricious lady-patronesses, who black-balled gaily and daily. This unbridled committee of women, two foreign ambassadresses among them, met weekly in their special 'blue chamber' at Almack's, to twist to their liking the social lives of such gentlemen as were in London during the season. Their coveted vouchers of admission were so much the talk of their generation, that in 1822 when Canning was given the Foreign Office with as ill a grace as possible by his reluctant king, George IV, the new Foreign Secretary compared it to receiving a ticket for Almack's, and finding written on the back, 'Admit the rogue'. And Captain Gronow of the First Guards, apparently himself in favour with the lady-patronesses, noted with some satisfaction that of the three hundred officers serving with the Foot Guards in 1814, only about half a dozen managed to secure tickets of admission. On one occasion, the Iron Duke of Wellington himself was turned away for trying to enter in trousers, sans culottes.

The great Atholl fiddler, Nathaniel Gow, greatest of Highland violinists, was often booked with his band to play at Almack's weekly subscription balls, where 'the highest life in London' danced reels and Scottish country dances to such tunes as Hamilton House and the two De'ils; while popular engravings of Raeburn's old Neil Gow (Nathaniel's father), fiddling briskly in his tartan trews, were hung up in several English country-house lavatories. Nathaniel Gow composed many lively or melancholy airs himself, and half a dozen collections of Scottish country-dance music published in the last century are prefaced by the advertisement 'As danced at Almack's'.

But towards the end of 1814, two new dances were introduced from the Continent: the waltz by Countess Lieven (thought at first rather shocking, as the partners were clasped in each other's arms instead of jigging separately, as in the old country dances and in popular present-day dances), and the quadrille by Lady Jersey. In that year, at the age of twenty-nine, the plain-spoken Lady Jersey (who had forty thousand a year) was at the height of feminine fashionable power; and it is significant of the extent to which Highland valour and Macpherson's Ossian and Sir Walter Scott's romances had made their mark on the world of fashion, that Lady Jersey should have been dancing her own special dance with Clanranald himself at what was to her perhaps one of the most important moments in her personal history.

Later, but still early in the eighteenth century, half a dozen Independent Companies, attached to no regiment, policed the Highlands as a Watch, called Black from their dark tartan to distinguish it from the ordinary redcoats: and in 1740 they were embodied together into the famous regiment still known as The Black Watch.

After the suppression of the 1745 Rising, Pitt saw the opportunity of raising Highlanders for military service in the wars abroad. Between 1757 and 1762, when peace was concluded with France, nine new Highland regiments were raised. Although penniless and landless, the Master of Lovat, for instance—styled only Fraser of Lovat since his father's execution but still Mac Shimi to his loyal clansmen—was able to raise 600 men of his own within a few weeks; his neighbours raised more men; and in 1757 'Colonel Fraser of Lovat' sailed for America in command of 1,460 men of the 78th Fraser's Highlanders, whom he led up the Heights of Abraham to the taking of Quebec, where Wolfe himself died in the arms of a Fraser Highlander. Ironically, the conquest of Canada removed the French menace from the American colonists, and thus indirectly led to the American War of Independence. Once again, the Government appealed to the Fraser chief, now 'General Fraser of Lovat' and restored to his ancestral lands; and in 1775 he raised 2,340 men for the 71st Fraser Highlanders, six other chiefs (including Mackintosh of Mackintosh himself) being amongst his officers: this regiment wore the red hackle long before the Black Watch established it as their own exclusive privilege.

A son of Colonel the Honble. Archibald Fraser of Lovat, wearing tartan about the time his father (with Lord Graham) had secured its restoration by Parliament in 1782. Late in life, Colonel Fraser of Lovat, the 18th Mac Shimi, formed the impression that he had become a turkey and, on arrival in his carriage on a visit to the Grants of Rothiemurchus, could not be induced to leave it as he was sitting on some eggs. However, like any other bird, he left them for a moment to relieve the calls of nature, whereupon the eggs were broken and some five chicks placed among them. Finding the eggs apparently hatched on his return, Lovat relaxed and was happily persuaded to enter the Grants' house.

Among the clan regiments to survive longest were the Seaforth Highlanders, raised in 1778 in Ross-shire and the Hebrides by the Mackenzie chief: the Cameron Highlanders, raised in 1793 in Lochaber by the Cameron chieftain of Erracht; the Gordon Highlanders, raised in 1794 in Badenoch and elsewhere by the Marquis of Huntly (some would say by the kiss given to each recruit by his mother, the fetching Duchess of Gordon); also the Argyll Highlanders, raised in 1794 in Argyllshire by the Campbell chief, and amalgamated in 1881 with the Sutherland Highlanders, who had been raised in 1800 in Sutherland and Ross-shire by the Countess of Sutherland's cousin, General Wemyss of Wemyss: this last regiment formed the gallant 'Thin Red Line' at Balaclava. These regiments were so much family and clan affairs, that between 1793 and 1827, for example, no less than eleven officers of the Cameron Highlanders were the sons, brothers, nephews or grandson of General Sir Allan Cameron of Erracht who originally raised the regiment.

The Government, however, continually broke its engagement promises to the private soldiers. This sometimes led to what the English called 'mutinies', usually settled by the good sense of the clan officers being combined with their chiefs' possession of what was then known as 'interest', that is the power to be heard by the officials of the Central Government. A typical example is perhaps that of the privates of the 2nd Battalion of the Black Watch, whom the Government (contrary to the terms of their enlistment) proposed in 1786 to draft into other units in India. Their Commanding Officer, the 23rd Chief of MacLeod, wrote immediately to the Commander-in-Chief: 'I have to observe to Your Excellency that this is the first time ever that this regiment was drafted, and that we were raised upon the idea of being exempted from that misfortune. My own Company are all of my own name and Clan, and if I return to Europe without them I shall be effectually banished from my own home, after having seduced them into a situation from which they thought themselves spared when they enlisted into the service . . . I must entreat Your Excellency to allow me to carry them home with me, that I may not forfeit my honour, credit, and influence in the Highlands, which have been exerted for His Majesty's service.' MacLeod's firm request was granted, but the rumours of Governmental ill-faith can have done no good to future recruiting.

When tartan and the kilt were banned—by the hated Dress Act of 1747, repealed through the efforts in Parliament of Montrose's and Lovat's heirs in 1782—only Government soldiers were allowed to wear Highland dress: though a number of civilian portraits shew us that the Act was not rigidly enforced after the first few years of Southron panic. Perhaps it is from those martial days that there still exists a convention that only black (and never brown) shoes are worn with the kilt. So far, the last of what might be called clannish regiments were the Lovat Scouts and their rivals the Scottish Horse, raised and commanded by Lord Lovat and by the Duke of Atholl's heir during the Boer War. The present Duke of Atholl's father was killed commanding the Scottish Horse in Italy during the Second World War; and the Scottish Horse regimental tie is black with gold stripes in threes, based on the gold and black paling of the Atholl coat-of-arms.

The achievements of the Highland regiments did much to win the Highlanders a national respect that has never waned. All the same, inter-clan feeling at the end of the eighteenth century was still vicious and bitter. Macdonalds hated Campbells, MacLeods feuded with Macdonalds, Mackenzies with MacLeods. Then came Sir Walter Scott, to whom Scotland in general and the Highlands in particular owe more (psychologically) than it's now fashionable to acknowledge. Sir Walter commanded the respect of Europe, indeed of the whole civilised world, and he used this position to make what had seemed squalid really picturesque. His magic made a silk purse out of our sow's ear. In his heroic prose—then a most unusual novelty—he suddenly took the meanness out of old Scottish feuds, and made them seem romantic in retrospect.

Sir Walter Scott was backed by King George IV, whom it is now so smart to mock, but who as our most sympathetic Sovereign since the seventeenth century gave Scotland back her rightful place at last. Everybody felt that somehow the King was the heir of the Jacobite as much as the Hanoverian tradition. And they were more right, even from the strictly legalistic point of view, than is now perhaps generally realised. Up to the Wars of Independence, it had been possible to be a 'man' of two or three different realms simultaneously; but by the fourteenth century it had become settled law (in both England and Scotland) that a person who was not born in the liegeance of the Sovereign, nor naturalised, could not have the capacity to succeed as an heir—he was in the strictest sense 'illegitimate', though not of course born out of wedlock. This legal incapacity of aliens to be heirs applied to all inheritances, whether honours or lands. The effect of the succession opening to a foreigner in Scotland was that, if he had not been naturalised or if his case was not covered by some special statute, the succession passed to the next heir 'of the blood', who thus became the only 'lawful' heir. It was of course always open to the Sovereign to confer an honour or an estate on a foreigner; the rule of law merely prevented aliens from being 'lawful heirs' to existing inheritances. In Scotland, this law was modified in favour of the French from the sixteenth century, but was otherwise rigorously applied until the Whig Revolution of 1688, after which it was gradually done away with by the mid-nineteenth century. It was precisely because of this law that Queen Anne found it necessary to pass a special Act of Parliament naturalising all alien-born potential royal heirs under her Act of Settlement of the throne. But of course, from the Jacobite point of view, no new statute could be passed after 1688, and the old law remained static until the death of the Cardinal York in 1807. At that time, his nearest heir in blood by the old (and therefore continuing Jacobite) law was not—as is sometimes supposed—the King of Sardinia, for the royal Sardine had not the legal capacity to be an heir in Scotland, unless naturalised (e.g. by marriage to the Sovereign) which he was not. The nearest lawful heir of the Cardinal York in 1807 was, in fact, curiously enough, King George III himself, who had been born in England (and therefore in the technical liegeance of James VIII). It is ironic that poor good King George, who has recently been proved not to have been mad at all, but to have suffered from an unusually acute form of a rare physical (and not at all mental) malady called porphyria that was unknowingly maltreated beyond the human breaking-point by his doctors, appears (according to even more recent research) to have inherited that disability from his Stuart ancestors, who fortunately suffered from this painful bodily toxin in a much milder form. However, his descendant, our present Queen, is the lawful Jacobite sovereign of this realm: as was Queen Victoria (who made her favourite home in Scotland) and King George IV before her.

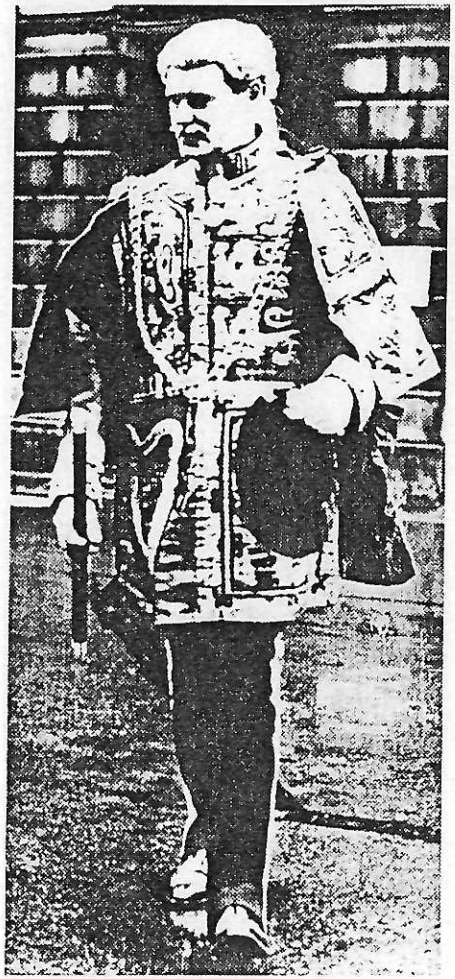
The former bitterness of the old feuds became a 'joking relationship', and the revived War Gatherings became colourful Games. They were neither ignored nor suppressed, but simply changed from backwardness and bitterness into pageantry and fun. Those who seek to detribalise Africans in the beneficial interests of modernising their standard of living, might perhaps also consider their pride and, as Sir Walter did for us, adapt rather than abolish 'quaint' customs. Men will die for the Colours, but not for an extra ten bob a day. Nobody is burnt alive any more at the pagan fire festival still celebrated on All Hallow E'en, but the English get a lot of fun out of burning the effigy of poor Guy Fawkes (who shared the present writer's views about the value of Parliament) on the nearest available date. No longer is it an issue whether a job should go to a Macdonald or a Campbell, but each clan still enjoys its historic identity and cultivates its own roots. The annual Argyllshire Gathering at Oban makes no distant clan tremble lest the Campbells are Coming, but is instead an opportunity of visiting the Campbells and their former Maclean foes in surroundings of gaiety and colour.

The characteristic form of Scott's novels—the historical background, the straightforward hero, the kindly folk who help him, the lack of sex, the girl whose hand is eventually won like a school cup—has been continued by a series of Scottish writers through R. L. Stevenson, S. R. Crockett, Neil Munro (so closely related, we are told, to the ducal house of Argyll), D. K. Broster, John Buchan, Compton Mackenzie, and so to Nigel Tranter. Throughout their works, honour and decency are preferred to slickness and cynicism: and the Spirit of Caledonia is never debunked merely in order to lend the emphasis of shock to some ephemeral point. These are not, of course, ordinary portrayals of real everyday life: but stones on the cairn which represents so many many honourable Scotsmen, Highlanders and Lowlanders alike.

Sir Iain Moncreiffe of that Ilk, as Albany Herald and an Advocate, leaving the Parliament House in Edinburgh after attending a special sitting of Lyon Court.



By the second half of the nineteenth century, the clan as a method of social organisation had disappeared from Scotland. Opinionated judges, confronted with the simple question whether somebody inheriting a particular estate was a member of the Clan Chattan—a question as easily to be solved by any qualified expert as whether somebody belongs to the Transport & General Workers Union—waffled for a long time about clan warfare (as if 'children', which is what clan means, didn't equally exist in time of peace) and then held that the whole clan concept was no longer known to the law. But there was life in the old clans yet. Indeed, Lyon Court regards anyone who takes a clan surname as being as it were 'naturalised' into that clan, so that if he is granted Arms (the symbols of the Name) they will always allude to the basic coat borne by its chief. Clansmen at home sometimes tend to take their history for granted. But clansmen far afield in Glasgow or Birmingham, Toronto or Brisbane, Chicago or Wellington, can find in their history those roots that give them identity and distinguish them from being merely numbered ants in some enormous, though enormously useful, urban ant-hill.

In England and on the Continent, the feeling of belonging to a great historic family is too often confined to a limited aristocracy. Not so in Scotland. As the Countess of Erroll, hereditary Lord High Constable of Scotland and Chief of the Hays, wrote in 1964: 'In too many countries the great historic families are separated from the mass of the people, but in Scotland we have been fortunate in that pride of Name has never depended on wealth and rank, and in that the clan tradition has always prevented class barriers from arising to divide our proud nation. The fact that the Grahams have a ritual head in the Duke of Montrose and that Lords Huntly and Aberdeen are Gordons, in no way makes a Graham or a Gordon superior in class to their fellow Scots. In the same way, all the bearers of great Scottish Names share alike in their ancient traditions. It is this brotherhood within clan or Name which links all Scots together and is so marked a feature of our countrymen wherever they may be. We are all one family of Scots, the branches of that family being the clans and Names, and the Chief of Chiefs our Queen.' And Dame Flora MacLeod of MacLeod wrote in the Clan MacLeod Magazine that 'her dear clan family' is 'beyond and outside and above divisions between nations, countries and continents. . . . it takes no note of age or sex, rank or wealth, success or failure. The spiritual link of clanship embraces them all'.

The effective expression of this continuing clan sentiment was the establishment of the Clan Societies and the Clan Associations, a world-wide list of which many will be found in the World Directory of Scottish Associations (Johnson & Bacon, London, 1979). At the apex of this vast clan pyramid there is the Standing Council of Scottish Chiefs, which meets annually in the capital, and with whom the Queen, as Chief of Chiefs, had luncheon during a Royal Visit to Edinburgh some years ago. There are today about 1,700 Scottish Societies and Associations, with many branches at home, in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States—indeed all over the World. An Comunn Gaidhealach keeps our Gaelic poetry and song alive in its Mod. The Scottish Tartans Society, with their Tartans Museum at Comrie in Perthshire, seek to gather under one roof all authoritative information about tartan; and the Lord Lyon King of Arms has an official Register of Tartans recorded by the various chiefs and chieftains. The 1745 Association keeps alive the memory of the gallant Jacobites who lost all for what they believed to be the rightful Cause. While overseas Scotsmen in general tend to join the local Caledonian Society or St. Andrews Society, those of Highland descent also belong to their own Clan Society—and recollect wherever they are the proud traditions of sea-wrack or heather, peat-fire or droving, feud or massacre, that gave their very names to the hills and glens where their forefathers made Highland history. In this way, the clan society fulfils a social and indeed emotional function. For it transcends religion and politics, class and status, success and failure, bringing as their natural right to all clansmen everywhere all the regal pride and historic colour that so justly surround the tartan.

It is engraved with the coat-of-arms of Struan Robertson, Chief of the Clan Donnachaidh. His supporters, the Serpent and Dove, allude to the clan's belonging to the Kindred of St. Columba, through their descent in the direct male line from King Duncan [slain by Macbeth], son of Crinan, hereditary Abbot of Dunkeld.

-oc (later -og and -ag). This was commonly used in Old Irish in forming diminutives and the custom was followed in Scots Gaelic, but the surviving examples are few in number. (See under -an.) -oc was masculine originally but now -ag, its descendant, is feminine only. From the Old Irish period -oc, borrowed at an early stage from Welsh -awc, is common in the affectionate forms of names of saints, especially in reduced forms, e.g. MoChoemoc from Coemgin. Final -oc in early mss. has sometimes been misread -ot.

ou. In Gaelic border names ou is for English w, as Macouat for Macwatt.

s. Initial s in Gaelic names is eclipsed by t of the definite article, as in Mac an t-saoir "Macintyre," Mac an t-sagairt "Mactaggart."

th. In Gaelic names th is often a mere phonetic device for dividing syllables, as cathag "jackdaw," pronounced ca-ag. Latharn or Latharna, Lorne.

The Surnames of Scotland
Their Origin, Meaning, and History

By George F. Black, Ph. D.

AASIE, AASSIE, diminutives of Oswald and Asmund, are now represented in Shetland by Hosea in the surname HOSEASON, q.v., pronounced Osieson or Ozieson.

ABBIE. A surname derived from the office or title of lay-abbot of a monastery. In the early Middle Ages the abbot of a monastery usually belonged to a leading family of the district, and in that family the office was hereditary. "In course of time this system gave rise to great abuses; the monastery grew rich in lands, and the energies of the abbot, or some other leading officer, were directed to temporal rather than spiritual management. In fact, latterly, he became a mere layman, holding the abbacy in his family by direct descent, and, delegating his clerical duties to a monk, he himself took to rearing a family in which the monastic lands were hereditary" (Macbain, Scoto-Celtic studies, p. 69). That these 'abbots' were considered as merely laymen is shown, e.g., in the charter by Turpin, bishop of Brechin, referred to below, in which the prior, Bricius, at the time really a clerk, has precedence over Douenaldus (Donald) Abbe. This Douenaldus Abbe de Brechin witnessed a charter by Turpin, bishop of Brechin, c. 1178–1180 (RAA., I, p. 134), and sometime between 1204 and 1211 he gifted the 'Dauach qui vocatur Balegillegrand' to the Abbey of Arbroath, which grant was confirmed by William the Lion (ibid., p. 49, 50). Maurice Abbe of Abireloth or Abereloth appears as witness in charters by Gilchrist, earl of Angus and of John de Mountfort between 1201 and 1214 (ibid., p. 29–32, 47). The family of this Maurice must have taken its origin from the lay abbots of a Celtic monastic foundation near by, "probably established by St. Drostan, with whose name the primitive Christianity of the district is associated" (PSAS., LXV, p. 118). Between 1211 and 1214 Johannes Abbe with the advice and consent of his son Morgund granted to the monks of Abirebroth (Arbroath) permission to take charcoal from 'nemore meo de Edale,' now Edzell (ibid., p. 48). Among the witnesses are 'Morgundo filio meo, Malcolmo fratre, Johanne filio meo.' The same John Abbe and Morgund his son were present at the perambulation of the boundaries of the lands of the Abbey of Arbroath and the barony of Kynblathmond in 1219 (ibid., p. 163). Nicholas Abbe appears as juror on an inquest in 1250 (ibid., p. 190), Simon del Abbeye, Scottish merchant, complained in 1370 of being plundered by English wreckers (Bain, IV, 164), and Arthur Abbay, shipmaster of Carrail in 1613, was probably the father of John Abay, skipper of Carrail in 1635 (Wedd., p. 237; RPC., 2. ser. VI, p. 572).

ABBOT. Alexander Abbot is in record as a witness in Glasgow c. 1290 (REG., p. 200). In the year 1306 Sir John Abbot, dean of Fife and Fothyrrife, was ordered by the bishop to sequestrate the fruits of the provostry of Aberdeen (Bain, II, 1822). Alexander Abbot witnessed an instrument of sasine in Leith in 1548 (Soltre, p. 113), and another Alexander Abbot signed the Band of Dumfries in 1570 (RPC., XIV, p. 66). It is probable that in some instances this name is a shortened translation of MACNAB, which in Gaelic means "son of the abbot" (Mac an aba).

Bardsley says that in England Abbot and Abbott are from Abb, diminutive of Abraham with additional diminutive suffix -ot, and that "it is all but certain that the majority of our Abbotts, although bearing a conventual title, are thus descended." As a diminutive of Abraham the name is found in Ireland at least as early as beginning of fourteenth century (Woulfe), but I have found no instance of such use in Scotland.

ABBOTSON. A sept said to be connected with the clan Macnab. If so the name is merely a translation of MACNAB, q.v.

ABBOTTOUN. Gilbert Abbottoun in Tippartie, parish of Fordoune, in 1619 (St. Andrews), doubtless derived his surname from the lands of Abbottoun (1625) in Kincardineshire.

ABE. Diminutive of Ebenezer, in Roxburghshire pronounced Ebé.

ABEL, ABLE. This was a not uncommon personal name in the Middle Ages, derived from the Biblical Abel, Hebrew Hebhel, a name of uncertain meaning, but usually interpreted "breath." Master Abell, clericus regis, was one of the members of a mission sent to England to ask restoration of the earl-

1- "By tradition [this family] originated in Wales. The name is Cornish-British, which is a dialect of the Celtic, Belgic or Cambrian formerly spoken throughout Cornwall." (a)

2- "In the roll of early New England settlers occurs in 1640 the name of David Selleck. It is claimed that the first provision for a free school in the western world, by direct tax, was made in Dorchester, Mass, in 1639. David Selleck... was one of the subscribers to a petition to that effect. David and Susanna Selleck, his wife, were members of the 1644 First Church of Boston, and the births of their children are recorded in that ancient town. Among the antiquities of Boston is found the 'David Selleck home lot description.' Mr. Selleck was engaged in trade between the Colonies and the Barbadoes. He died while on an expedition, in 1654, to Virginia." (a) "When he died in 1654, he left 'a fair estate in sum, yet very little beyond debts.'" (b)

3- "Went to the Barbadoes" (a) "Probably continued [his father's] Caribbean trade, for there is a record of his being in Barbados in 1663." (b)

4- "He became a wealthy ship owner and captain, and was extensively known in early days. He was taken prisoner by the French [on one of his ocean trips [to England (b)]] in May, 1689, but his estate, which was large, was not settled until 1708." (a)

(a) Norwalk, Rev. Charles M. Selleck, 1896, Doc. Se 39-Leg 407

1- "Isaac Selleck 2nd, father of the present (Selleck Brothers) was a man of exceptional physical power. In his younger days he assisted Henry Selleck in laying the still seen foundation walls — lane and house — of the latter's East Avenue (now Osborn) brick dwelling, and made no point of coming from and returning to New Canaan before and after his day's work. He industriously served his generation and earned his enjoyed later life rest. With his cousin Henry he was of strong New England stock, and lived to a good age. Both Westchester men chose Norwalk for their home, where they left families" (a)

2- of Blair, Nebraska. Had a child who died young and a daughter Gertrude. (a)

3- Sarah Waterbury Selleck "was the grandmother of the recent (Selleck Brothers) (Isaac, Geo. W., Henry S., a firm of Norwalk business repute) and Frank, and great-grandmother of the late young Clarence (son of Geo. W.) Selleck, whose art sketches and published letters while abroad were indicative of present attainment, and argued much of promise for the future." (a)

1 - "Clarence ... was a young man of high promise. He was fond of foreign travel, and his published correspondence, as well as clever art reproductions of scenery abroad, stamp him as having been a youth of rare tastes and accomplishments. His early demise was greatly lamented, but his noble character is a grateful remembrance."

1- Entered Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1613; received A.B. in 1616 and A.M. in 1620. He soon thereafter received orders and became chaplain in a family that was connected with the Bacons and Townsends of Norfolk and continued in that position three years. He was afterward settled as a colleague with Mr. Price at King's Lynn in the same county. He remained three years at Lynn, but complaints being made to the Bishop of Norwich of his nonconformity in administering the services of the Church, he removed to the Rectory of Skirbeck, near Boston. Here his nonconformity was also complained of, and this led to his emigration to the American colonies. He arrived in Boston, Mass., on May 26, 1636, and in the following November went to Lynn, Mass., where he was the minister until his death there.(c)

2- William Whiting says: "By his first wife he had two sons and one daughter. His wife and sons died in England, his daughter was subsequently married to Mr. Thomas Welde, son of Rev. Thomas Welde of Roxbury [Conn.]." (d)

1- John Whiting, esq., mayor of Boston in England and brother of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn [the immigrant], advanced £50 in aid of the Massachusetts colony. In return, the General Court granted him 500 acres of land, which he transferred to his American brother, who gave it to his son, the Billerica pastor [Rev. Samuel Whiting]. The grant was located in Salmon brook in Dunstable, and passed into the possession of [this Samuel Whiting], who became one of the first settlers of Dunstable and a leading man of that town. He was taken prisoner by the Indians in 1704 and carried to Canada, but escaped; and in 1713 received £10 from the colony for his wounds and sufferings." (a) His house was a garrison in 1710. (a)(c) He was one of the Selectmen in 1704. (c)

2- Was in Lovewell's fated expedition in 1725. (a) [See account in (d), pp. 44-49.] He received his father's farm in Dunstable; was living there in 1747 and probably died there. He had a son Joseph, town clerk in Dunstable, 1774, who had 10 children, perhaps James of Hollis and others. (a)

3- "out of the province" in 1718 when father's estate was settled. (a)

Dear Dave,

Your letter came to Port Ludlow, WA, via Minneapolis as planned yesterday. As usual, I couldn't wait to see if I had anything. I really didn't think I would have anything, especially here. Most of my other genealogists' lines are in Minneapolis. However, I looked at what I had and found nothing. I haven't worked on my Whiting line for some time and couldn't remember any Josephs. Well, I was really amazed to find a Joseph who just might turn out to belong to Virginia!!! Wouldn't that be a thrill - for me too!!

Virginia Selleck

I am sending you pages from my book, History of Billerica, Massachusetts, by the Rev. Henry A. Hazen, A.M., 1883. Although nothing is conclusive, I think you will agree that this Joseph Whiting is a distinct possibility. First of all, his birth date corresponds to the "guessed" date for him. Then the insert that he was out of the province in 1718 when his father's estate was settled, makes it possible for him to be living in Conn. Another hopeful sign is that there is a William Haile (Hail, Hale, Haill, all used in same book). That name could have ended up Halley. Unfortunately, William died without issue, but he might have had relatives around. He married Anna Case in Charleston, MA. Might look for Hailes there.

I am sending you other materials, including the pertinent sheets that Josie Cobb sent me when she was able to connect my Ziba Whiting, b. 25 May 1764, clear back to Samuel[1] and his father, John. Please note: In the book, Samuel[1] is actually Samuel[2] in my pages. As you see, the book calls my Samuel[1], Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn. It is also confusing about John Whiting, esq., mayor of Boston, in England, and brother of..., since the Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn had both a father and a brother who served as mayors of Boston, Eng. I hope I am not confusing you. I think this entire paragraph of the book is misleading and takes some real sorting out.

There is nothing more in the book about Joseph, just as there was nothing more about my Ziba. Luckily, I already had Ziba's complete birth date, and the anme was so unusual that I had a positive link. But it does give you a new place to search the records. A marriage record would certainly be nice, wouldn't it? I will send all the pages in the Geneal. Register from the book, in case I am missing something. I am not going to copy concerning the coming of the Rev. Samuel Whiting to be the pastor of Billerica, etc., unless you find this is the correct Joseph or unless you want it. The book is in the Minn. Historical Society Library(and at the university library too, I believe). The reprint, which I have, is available. It is 590 pages, large print, $55 plus $1.00 postage. 10 weeks allowed for deliver, as book is hard-covered bound at time of ordering. HIGGINSON GENEALOGICAL BOOKS, 14 Derby Square, Salem, MA 01970. MC & Visa, if interested. I will be happy to xerox, but if things work out, this is an intriguing book.

Virginia will be extremely ofrtunate if this is her line. There is much material on Samuel[1], b. 20 Nov 1597 as he was a prominent minister.

If you find you want what I have, let me know. It is his wife, Elizabeth St. John, whose line is proven back past Charlemagne and William the Conqueror. I have that book at home also. The title is something like Sixty Colonists. It is only in the last edition that the line was absolutely proven when they followed a different ancestry. I also have the lines for Dorcas Chester, further than Leonard Chester, I think.

Anyway, David, I thought I should send you what I had available now. We have two sets of company coming, and I am going back to Minneapolis for a friend's wedding in between. So I need to stop everything to get ready. My trip will be hurried to Mineapolis, and I don't think Iwill have time for anything extra. But, be assured that I will find what I can for you as soon as possible. At least I have given you something to search for - a new area. Incidently, Josie Cobb has given me all she has on the Whitings, so I can see that you get all you need without bothering her.

Good luck on the genealogy. Let me know if you find anything, and I will see how I can help.

Best regards,

Sue (Lucile A. Slocum)

Lucile Adamson Slocum

(I'm still Sue as far as you are concerned, but I thought I would sign off as I do with other genealogists. They would have a hard time finding Sue Slocum in any genealogy, and I don't want to confuse anyone.)

My line is: John Whiting, Mayor, Boston, Eng.
Samuel[1] Whiting Sr.
Samuel[2] Whiting Jr.
Oliver[1]
Oliver[2]
Jonathan
Ziba
Samuel Bowers Whiting
Frederick Shearer " Fred Shearer "
Helen Hope Whiting (Adamson)
Lucile Adamson (Slocum)

By the way, I enjoyed getting Virginia's full line. My least complete line is Ziba. I have some dates, the name of his wife, Anna Bowers, but have no names of children except for Samuel Bowers. I did finally find a census record for Maine and Pennsylvania, so I know something about the size of their family. But I am not complaining. I feel very lucky.

Maybe estate records of Samuel[3], b. 19 Jan 1662-3, could give some more information on Joseph???

Dear Sue,

That was a most exciting and prompt letter you wrote, and I must respond right away, even though I haven't absorbed it all and analyzed everything carefully. I really think you are right and that the Joseph you discovered is the one we're looking for. But, of course, that will have to be confirmed with other records.

In my first reading of the Diary of Cillenia Rogers I note that the Whitings did have Connecticut connections. Duncan Chester was born in Wethersfield. At any rate, as you said, I have some new directions to go in my research. I'll keep you informed of my discoveries I make.

That's all I have time for now, but I wanted to thank you and let you know the material arrived safely.

Yours sincerely,

Dave

Dear Sue,

I thought you might be interested in the enclosed item about Slocumb. I came across in the Devon Family Historian. No doubt some of Stanley's relatives are in her records.

I'm also enclosing some U.K. stamps, in case you don't have any to send to Mrs. Beard.

Hope all is going well with you and Stan this summer. We're looking forward to a visit from Tom and Virginia and their 1-yr. old daughter Rebecca over the Labor-Day weekend.

Sincerely,
Dave Witheridge

Tree Talks Vol.23 No.3 September 1983 CNYGS 35

During the summer of 1982 a survey was made of some libraries and historical agencies which were noted as having special genealogical collections. This survey was limited, in the main, to central and western New York counties. All replies received will be reported in Tree Talks. Absence of a report from an individual or institution does not mean that a reply was withheld; it may indicate an oversight of the surveyor. Additions are welcome and will be reported in future issues of Tree Talks.

Questions in the survey letter were: what kinds of records can researchers use if they come to your facility; what services, if any, can they write for; and what are charges for services, if any.

NIAGARA COUNTY

County Historian's Office, Civil Defense Building, Niagara Street, Lockport, NY 14094. Richard Reed, county historian.

Records: inventory of county cemeteries; poorhouse account books; almshouse inmates; town tax records; school district records 1817- ; state and federal censuses 1790-1892; voluminous indexing including some 55,000 vital records taken from newspapers, diaries, letters, church records, etc.

These census records have been transcribed and indexed in the historian's office: federal 1810, 1820, 1830, 1840, 1850, 1860, and state 1855, 1865, 1875 and index to 1892.

Niagara County Genealogical Society, 2650 Hess Rd., Appleton, NY 14008.

An active group founded in 1979, it publishes Niagara County Genealogical News, $5.00 per year. Cannot research for non-members but will help members with genealogical problems. Printed a resume, "Information Available in Niagara County." Now indexing Glenwood Cemetery (1982).

ONONDAGA COUNTY

Local History and Genealogy Department, Onondaga County Public Library, 335 Montgomery St., Syracuse, NY 13202. Gerald J. Parson, head.

Records:
State census: 1825 Cortland (on cards), Jefferson (typed ms.); 1855 Broome, Cayuga, Delaware, Jefferson, Madison (index), Tioga, Yates; (incomplete: Chautauqua, Chemung, Chenango, Franklin, Niagara, Steuben, Washington); 1865 Chenango, Onondaga (part missing -- Camillus through DeWitt); 1875; 1892; 1905; 1915 (part missing); 1925 Onondaga Federal census: 1800-1880 Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont; 1830-1880 New Jersey; 1790-1880; 1890 special census of Civil War veterans and widows; 1900; Soundex for 1880 New York

Revolutionary War pension records: National Archives selected records — Pioneer index of over 30,000 persons in Onondaga County before 1850
— Cemetery records, almost complete for Onondaga County and Cayuga County Directories: Syracuse 1851 to date; Onondaga County 1868, 1878, 1881, 1887, 1891, 1896, 1899, 1917 (business and/or farm directories)
A few towns, mostly 20th century
Various church records
Index to magazine articles, mostly genealogical Vermont vital records to 1870
30,000 cataloged books and manuscripts
9,600 local New York state histories
Mortality schedules for New York State 1850, 1860, 1870 (on microfilm) — Index in preparation to all cemetery inscriptions appearing in books, magazines and the department's manuscript collection.

Services: open 8:30-4:30, Monday through Saturday. Visiting researchers have first priority. Genealogical research cannot be done, but certain indexes will be checked. Mail is very heavy and there is always a backlog.

Mr. Parson, long-time head of the department, is a Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists and revised the chapter on research in upstate New York for its new edition of Research Methods and Sources I.

George Arents Research Library, Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY 13210. Ms. Carolyn A. Davis, manuscripts librarian.

The purpose of the Manuscripts Division is to "process materials and make them available to graduate students and professional researchers."

Records: Methodist Manuscript Collection covers Methodism in central New York State 1808 to 1916. It includes records of six conferences: Black River, Central New York, East Genesee, Oneida, Wyoming and immorality trials of Oneida Conference ministers 1830-1870. Fifty-three manuscript volumes contain records of individual churches and clergymen, e.g., James Erwin's Circuit Book 1855-1865, Owasco Methodist Church Register Book 1840-1881.

Some records from other denominations are held, notably: First Dutch Reformed Church of West Glenville 1814-1953; First Presbyterian Church of Auburn 1802-1912; First Baptist Society, Groton, no dates.

Inventory of collection runs to many pages of which the above are merely samples. Inclusive dates of the collection are 1799 to 1947.

Services: open 8:30 - 5:00, weekdays. You are urged to call ahead for appointments (315-423-2093). If you wish to write, the staff does no genealogical researching, but if you send a name or the name and location of a church, a quick check of the main files will be made. No check of all inventories can be made. There is no complete index to church registers.

Charges: no charge for a "quick yes or no answer."

Onondaga Historical Association, 311 Montgomery St., Syracuse, NY 13202.

Records: extensive holdings of records of county towns, churches, schools, cemeteries, businesses, etc. Indexing of printed and manuscript material. Now handicapped by lack of staff and space. In the process of moving part of its collection. Researchers hope that the Association will find a way to make its rich resources again available.

ONTARIO COUNTY

Ontario County Historical Society, 55 North Main St., Canandaigua, NY 14424. Mrs. Jessie Terwilliger, genealogy researcher.

Records: marriages and deaths from local newspapers 1790-1880; many collections of family papers, business and association records, governmental records such as justices' dockets, tax lists, Civil War records; school militia records; and much more.

Services: open 1-5, Tuesday through Saturday. At present (1982) Mrs. Terwilliger will research without charge in various indexes: wills, deeds, immigration records; census if town is known for 1850 through 1892; marriages and deaths noted above; cemeteries, if town is known; files of biographies, correspondence and miscellaneous records.

OSWEGO COUNTY

No records or services from county historian in 1982.

SENECA COUNTY

Waterloo Library and Historical Society, Waterloo NY, 13165.

The correspondent says that they will research for you as "[o]ur material is scattered and housed in several different areas." They must insist on postage and reimbursement for any copying, and a donation is always appreciated. Located at county seat.

Seneca Falls Historical Society, 55 Cayuga St., Seneca Falls, NY 13148.

Records: material pertaining to families, over 300 surnames; local newspaper, with partial surname index to marriages and deaths; papers of Diedrich Willers, local historian, which contain correspondence with local families to gather genealogical backgrounds.

Services: open 9-12 and 1-4, weekdays except Wednesday. Call before you visit to be sure someone is on hand (315-568-8412). The museum welcomes researchers.

Editor's note:
This was used to help plan an Ash family reunion in the Pittsburgh area, most likely in summer 1979 (based on my presence with Virginia Selleck; we weren't married yet. Also see Virginia Holland, who had a "baby due 7/79").

He and Mrs. Church are members of the M. E. Church, and he is associated with the following benevolent orders: I. O. O. F., K. G. E. and K. P. Jan. 1, 1855, Mr. Church married Mrs. Annie Rogers, who died in 1867, leaving five children, of whom four are now living: Annie L., wife of David Gilchrist, of McKeesport; Charles R., of Turtle Creek; Emma L., wife of John McKeever, of Reynoldton; Harry, Turtle Creek, and Carrie, who died at four years of age. In 1868 Mr. Church married Mrs. Hannah Dempsey, who bore him two children—Jacob O. (died when three years old) and Susan Melinda—and died June 5, 1873. Mr. Church next married Maggie Vaughn, and they have one son living—William Alexander McIntosh.

SAMUEL MCGOGNEY, M. D., Castle Shannon, was born Feb. 20, 1856. His grandfather, John McGogney, came to Jefferson township, this county, in an early day, and attained the age of one hundred and three years and three months. His son, David, the father of Dr. McGogney, was born in 1800, and died in 1871. He married Margaret Bradshaw, who survived him, and they became the parents of twelve children. Of these Samuel, the youngest, was educated in this county and at Washington and Jefferson College. He read medicine with Dr. C. H. Black, of McKeesport, attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, and graduated in the class of 1879. He located in Castle Shannon, where he has built up a good practice. The doctor married Nannie C., daughter of William Young, and they have three children: Jessie May, William H. and Paul R. Dr. McGogney is a member of the I. O. O. F. and K. of M; he is a republican.

THOMAS B. BRIDGES, contractor, Homestead, was born Nov. 25, 1853, in Pittsburgh, Pa., a son of Robert Bridges, a native of Ohio. Robert was an engineer on the Ohio river, a popular and highly esteemed man, was considered one of the most skillful engineers of his day, and regarded as an authority. Thomas B. was educated in Pittsburgh, and at the age of nineteen engaged in teaming, dealing in building material, and contracting, in Braddock, which he has followed successfully to the present time. He came to Homestead in 1881, and entered upon the same business here. In Braddock he married Lena Eisenberger, and they have five children: Oliver, Rosa, Adda, Helen and Florence. He is a member of the R. A., and is a republican.

WILLIAM GRAPER, itinerant merchant, postoffice Carrick, was born in October, 1836, in Uchte, Hanover, Germany, a son of John Graper. He came to America in July, 1860, and for a time worked at whatever he could find to do, draying for a time in Pittsburgh. In 1864 he turned his attention to huckstering in this county, and during the last twenty years has lived in Baldwin township, where he has a property of thirty-six acres, upon which he has built a very pretty home. Mr. Graper here married Dorothea Yoshert, a native of Germany, and they have four children: Elizabeth (wife of Emil Schultz), Minnie (wife of Walter Hays), John H. and Harry F. Mr. and Mrs. Graper are members of the Lutheran Church. He is a republican, and has been a successful man.

CHRISTIAN H. GASS, farmer, postoffice Perrysville, was born July 18, 1843, in Allegheny City. His grandfather, Jacob Gass, a native of Switzerland, and a gardener, immigrated to America in 1812 with his wife, Elizabeth, and seven children: Jacob, John, Fred, Sebastian, Elizabeth, Anna and Sally. He was a member of the Smithfield Street G. L. Church. Jacob Gass, Jr., was a farmer, a carpet and coverlet weaver, and farmed and gardened where the P. & Ft. W. R. R. depot in now located in Allegheny. He married Amelia Bittenbring, and became the father of eight children: John, Jacob, Christian H., Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth, Sarah and Caroline. Of these Christian H. was educated in Allegheny, learned gardening and farming, and now owns a farm of fifty-six acres. He married Rachel E. Huch, and has four children: Henry, Amelia, Edward V. and Oliver. Mr. and Mrs. Gass are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is trustee. Politically he is a republican.

CHARLES JEFFERSON SELLECK, gardener, postoffice Hulton, was born Jan. 1, 1838, in Erie, Pa., a son of Joseph Whiting and Mary Ann (Casper) Selleck. His father was born in Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 14, 1799, and died in 1858; he was one of the old pioneers of Erie, and for many years was a teacher of music, day school and penmanship, in his last days following gardening. His mother was born in December, 1812, and died in 1876. They were members of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Selleck was educated in the Erie Academy and the west ward school. At the age of twenty-one he enlisted in the U. S. navy, on the ship Conestoga, carrying six guns. He served one year, and the next year enlisted on the Silver Lake, and participated in the battle of Nashville; he was discharged Aug. 19, 1865. Returning to Erie county, he learned the cooper's trade, which he followed twelve years at Erie, Oil City, Titusville and Pittsburgh. Since then he has been engaged in the garden business in Verona. He was married, in 1868, to Mary R. Shade, of Coleman, this county. They have seven children, named as follows: Charles Francis, Harry Vincent, George Whiting, Emma Blanche, Milley, Willis and Ralph, all at home. The family are members of the M. E. Church; politically Mr. Selleck is a republican.

MRS. MARY E. KINKAID, farmer, postoffice Elizabeth, is a daughter of E. E. and E. E. (McKnight) Barter, and was born in Iowa. She removed with her parents to

Dear Sir or Madame:

A relative of mine, Joseph W. Sellack (a gardener and later a teacher) and his wife, Mary Ann (Casper) Sellack, lived in Erie in the 1800's. We are not sure, but we think they both died in Erie. The death of Mr. Sellack is given in one record as Jan. 3, 1868, and in another as 1858. The death of Mrs. Sellack is given as Jan. 14, 1876.

If you have copies of Erie newspapers from that period, I should greatly appreciate your checking to see if there are obituaries for either or both of these persons. Enclosed is a $2.00 check to pay for copies if you find them. I am also enclosing a stamped, self-addressed reply envelope. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

be obtained in the district school where he resided and from select schools in the village of Holland, which he attended in the autumn, between the terms of the summer and winter district school. May 11, 1874, he commenced clerking in the store of Morey & Stickney, where he worked three months for his board, after which he received $10 per month for some time, and by strict attention to business he received promotion. Mr. Morey retired in two years and Mr. Jackson borrowed $1,000 and formed a partnership with Mr. Stickney, under the firm name of Stickney & Jackson, which partnership continued for seven years, when Mr. Stickney became superintendent of the Erie Penitentiary, selling his entire interest in their two stores, one at Holland, the other at Protection, N. Y., to Mr. Jackson. In 1888 Mr. Jackson suffered the loss of his Holland store by fire, but nothing daunted, he immediately opened up business in the large dining room of the Lowry House, closing out the stock rescued from the fire and continuing there until his large store was completed and ready for occupancy. Since then, by his energy and thrift, he has helped to inaugurate a sound system of water works in Holland, by taking about one-third of the capital stock of $10,000. He is now president of the company and largely through his efforts the Bank of Holland was established, he having been president since its organization in 1893. He was postmaster four years under Harrison's administration. In 1895 was elected to the office of supervisor for two years and re-elected in March, 1897. Mr. Jackson is a prominent Mason, Odd Fellow, Maccabee and a member of the Order of the Iroquois. He is largely interested in real estate, owning property in Holland, Colden, pine lands in Mississippi and a large farm in South Dakota. He is also interested in the Rochester Loan and Savings Association. January 12, 1881, he married M. Zina Vaughan, step-daughter of John O'Riley, and they have three daughters, Mabel, Isabel and Annabel.

Kimball, Delos W., Holland, son of James and Esther (Wheelock) Kimball, was born in Holland, N. Y., May 13, 1831. James Kimball, father of Delos W., was a native of Vermont and was one of the early settlers of Erie county, coming to Holland in 1816, when there were no roads and the country was an unbroken wilderness. Delos Kimball received his education in Holland, after which he was married, in 1853, to Lucretia Davis. In the spring of 1854 he, with his young wife, moved to Illinois, where he was in the employ of his uncle, Mr. Wheelock, who was the proprietor of a large paper mill, and remained there two and a half years. September 9, 1855, a son, Frank, was born to them, and Mrs. Kimball died in the November following. In the fall of 1866 Mr. Kimball returned to Holland and settled on the farm he now owns, and in 1865 he married Mrs. Hall, a widow lady living in Holland. Mr. Kimball is the owner of 340 acres of well improved land and makes a specialty of dairying; he is also a large grain grower, and one of the most progressive farmers in Holland. Mr. Kimball has served six years as assessor of the town of Holland; he was elected first in 1887; his first three years as assessor must have been satisfactory to the taxable inhabitants of Holland or he would not have been liable to have gained his re-election in the year 1890.

Selleck, Horace E., Holland.—The paternal grandfather of Mr. Selleck was Thaddeus Selleck, and the maternal grandfather was Moses Randell, born in Massachusetts, and died in Holland, N. Y., in 1871, aged eighty-one years. The father of Mr. Selleck was Jonas Selleck, born in Warren county, N. Y., and died in Holland in 1886, aged seventy-four years. His wife was Annie E. Randell, born in Warren county, N. Y., in 1832, by whom he had three children: Achsah A., born in 1849 and died in 1872; Horace E., born May 2, 1851, and Randell J., born in 1883. Mr. Selleck received his education in the common schools of Queensbury, Warren county. He moved to Holland in March, 1868, and commenced business for himself, purchasing a part of the Humphrey farm of sixty acres, where he resided for three years; he then purchased a lot containing a planing mill, built a house and manufactured garden rakes, hoes, forks, planing and matching lumber, etc. He is a member of Holland Lodge No. 631, I. O. O. F. For his first wife he married Delilah Hunt, born in Holland in 1853 and died in 1889, by whom he had two children, Belle and Frank. Belle married William W. Spalding. Mr. Selleck married for his second wife Catharine Losell, who was born in 1864. Mr. Selleck represents the following fire insurance companies: the Ætna, Orient and Phœnix of Hartford, and the Niagara of New York.

Stanton, B. M., Holland.—The Stantons trace their genealogy back to Thomas Stanton, the first one in America, in 1635; the progenitors were from England. B. M. Stanton's grandfather, Samuel Stanton, was a native of Mt. Vernon, Pa., and his father, Abel Morse Stanton, was born June 30, 1805, at Mt. Pleasant, Pa., and died March 24, 1852, at Hamlinton, McKear county, Pa. Abel Stanton married Sarah Scott (born in September, 1819) in 1837, and they had six children: Wilbur Fisk, born in 1839, died in 1841; Alpha Seaver, born October 6, 1840, died August 5, 1891; Beverly Milton (the subject), born July 9, 1842; Almond Fletcher, born in 1844, and died in 1846; Clarence Welborne, born April 25, 1846, and Helena Calista, born August 16, 1851. B. M. Stanton was reared on a farm and at the age of nineteen, May, 1861, enlisted in Co. F, 35th Regt. N. Y. Vols., and served two years, being discharged June 5, 1863. After the war was over he worked in Steuben county, N. Y., and Blossburg, Pa., until 1876, when he moved to Holland, N. Y., where he is now engaged as engineer for A. Rumsey & Co., and the U. S. Leather Company. He is a member of six secret societies, having held prominent offices in several. January 1, 1864, he married Adeline Monroe of Rathbonville, Steuben county, N. Y., and they had one daughter, Carrie M. Stanton, born September 19, 1866, and died January 11, 1879, in Holland, N. Y.

Savage, Dexter, Holland, is the son of John and Sarah Savage, who were natives of New Hampshire, and came to Erie county in 1838, settling in Holland. Mr. Savage received his education from the district schools, and at the close of his school life engaged in moving buildings, which he followed for a number of years. In 1847 he married Ruth Colby, and they had fourteen children, ten of whom are now living. Mr. Savage manages his large farm of 180 acres and is engaged principally in dairying. In political choice he is a free silver Democrat.

Riley, Philip D., Holland, was born in Litchfield, Conn., April 24, 1810, and was the youngest but one of a family of six sons, three of whom are still living. His father, James Riley, was born in New Jersey, his mother, Anna Osborn, in Connecticut, and were both of New England Puritan stock. The family while living in Litchfield was a regular attendant, and the mother a member, of Dr. Lyman Beecher's church. In 1818 the family moved to the town of Sheldon, then a part of Genesee which he now owns and where he resides. He married Mary, daughter of William Nellis of Palatine, by whom he had five children: Laurence, Eli, Elijah, William, and Irving. Three of the sons are at home with their father.

Smith, James A., was born in Middlefield, Otsego county, N.Y., January 25, 1827, and settled in Cameron with his parents in 1836. He is a son of Richard and Sarah (Bristol) Smith and the oldest of eleven children: James A., Ceylon, Margaret, Eliza, Mary, Richard, Marcia, all living, and Hannah, Doane, Amanda, and Jane, deceased. James A. married Maria Hallett in 1851, who died December 12, 1890, leaving five children: Mary Burrett, John R., Rogene, James A., jr., and Frank H. James A. enlisted in the Construction Corps, under E. L. Wintz, in 1864 and went to Chattanooga on railroad work. September 19, 1864, he enlisted in Co. F, 189th N. Y. Vols., and was promoted at Washington to regimental quartermaster and served until the end of the war. He was at Appomattox Court House when Lee surrendered. Mr. Smith has been justice of sessions for five years, justice of the peace for a number of years, deputy sheriff, collector, and constable. He is the oldest Mason in the town and belongs to Cameron Mills F. & A. M., Lodge No. 542, and has held every office in the lodge except master.

Selleck, Zeno C., is a son of Zeno C. Selleck, who came to this county in 1822 and married Weltha, a daughter of Capt. Samuel Baker, who settled in Howard in 1812. Capt. Samuel Baker was in the war of 1812 and also in the Revolutionary war and was taken prisoner and carried to Montreal, where he was exchanged. He had a family of six children: Daniel, Arbane, Phebe, Travis, Weltha Selleck, Cynthia McDuffy, and Eveline Miles. Mr. and Mrs. Selleck, sr., had twelve children: Noah, Phebe, Cole, Samuel D., Margaret Loid, Cynthia, Weltha, Zeno C., John, Weltha Jane, Pembleton, Milton, and another. Zeno C. married Marinda, daughter of Willard and Elizabeth (Eddy) Bailey, by whom he had four children: Edwin, Aurilla Harrison, Zeno, and Emma J. Rowen. He is a farmer and owns a farm of 157 acres. Mr. Selleck and family are members of the Baptist church. He is a Mason and belongs to Cameron Mills Lodge No. 547.

Smith, Warden, was born in Campbell, August 17, 1838. Avra Smith, his father, was a native of Chenango county, and came to the town of Campbell in 1825, and settled near what is known as Cooper's Plains. He married Clarice White of Chenango county, N. Y., by whom he had eight children: Amos, Austin, Lucinda, Jane, Warden, Isaiah, who was killed in the late war; Clarice, Almetia. Warden Smith is a manufacturer of chairs, and makes a specialty of office and hotel chairs, and also conducts a farm of seventy-one acres. He married Jennie, daughter of Mary Richards, by whom he had two children: Freddie and Chester, who are at home with their parents. He is a member of the K. of H., also a member of the Baptist church, and in politics is a Democrat.

Switzer, Mary A.—Jacob Switzer was born in the town of Bradford, January 16, 1820, son of William Switzer, who was a farmer. Jacob Switzer was also a farmer, and in 1847 he settled on a farm now occupied by his widow, Mary Switzer. He died October 25, 1874, aged fifty-four years. He married Mary A., daughter of Daniel Clark of Campbell, by whom he had six children: Byron, Wallace, Melvin, Ella, Clara, and Emma. In politics Mr. Switzer was a Republican.

Sherwood, Henry F., was born in Tioga county, Pa., in 1849. Orrin Sherwood, father of Henry F., was born in Cameron, Steuben county in 1822, and is one of five children born to Benjamin Sherwood, who was also a native of Cameron, born in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and was a farmer and preacher of the Freewill Baptist doctrine, and would often walk ten miles through the woods to preach on Sundays. He died in Pennsylvania, at the home of his son, Orrin. His wife was Hannah Rice, who died in June, 1895, aged ninety-eight years. At twenty-one years of age Orrin Sherwood went to Tioga county, Pa., where he purchased 130 acres of timber land, which he cleared. He later added seventy acres, the homestead of his wife's parents, where she was born, where they now reside. He married Lucy, daughter of Harvey and Fannie Seeley, by whom he had five children: William H., of Hornellsville; Camelia; Henry; George; and Cassie. Henry F. Sherwood remained with his parents until he was twenty-one years of years, when he engaged in the meat business in Bath, and two years later he embarked in the hotel business which he followed two years. In 1875 he removed to Pulteney and purchased his farm of eighty acres, where he has since resided, doing a general farming business. He is a member of the K. O. T. M., Pulteney Lodge, of which he is chaplain. In 1874 he married Mary, daughter of Nathaniel and Lydia (Brush) Rice, of Pulteney.

Sullivan, John W., was born in Pulteney, N. Y., February 11, 1860. His grandfather, John Sullivan, was a native of Ireland, who came to the United States with his brother Peter about 1820, coming direct to Pulteney, where he located on wild timber land and lived under a bridge the first month while he built his log cabin. He cleared two lage farms, raised and dealt in stock, and became wealthy, and lived to be over eighty years old. His brother Peter was 101 years old when he died. Henry Sullivan, father of John W., was born in Pulteney, N. Y., in 1824. He began life as a farmer, but later owned and operated a flour and grist mill in Prattsburg for ten years, after which he removed to Pulteney and engaged in grape culture, in which business he spent his remaining days. He married Laura J. Cole, by whom he had four children: Laura, wife of William H. Taylor, of Pulteney; Sarah, wife of Frank Miller, of Pulteney; John W.; and Fred M. His wife died in 1864, and he died in 1888. John W. Sullivan, when fourteen years of age, engaged in the flour and grist mill with his uncle, with whom he remained until he learned the trade. In 1881 he returned to Pulteney and engaged in farming for a year, and from 1882 to 1885 was interested in the grape culture. In 1885 he purchased his present farm of 160 acres, with four acres of vineyard, which he has successfully operated since. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Pulteney Lodge, No. 573, and has filled several of the offices. In 1881 he married Alice, daughter of Ira Brownell, by whom he had two children: Floyd and Jennie.

Selleck, John H., was born in Rathbone, N. Y., son of Zeno C. and Wealthy (Baker) Selleck, both natives of New York. The maternal grandfather, Samuel Baker, fought in the Revolution. He spent his last days in Cameron. Zeno Selleck was a farmer and lumberman. John H. Selleck is engaged in farming and lumbering and owns a farm of 350 acres, eighty acres of which is known as "Rathbone Flats." He began life poor but is now the second largest tax payer in the town. In 1855 he married Martha, daughter of Jonathan Pierce, of Westfield, Pa., by whom he had three children: Silva, wife of Moses Allen, of Cameron, and mother of four children, John Benedict.

36. Capt. BENJAMIN[5] (Caleb,[4] John,[3] John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Oct. 21, 1755, New Canaan, Ct.; m. Mar. 27, 1775, Elizabeth, dau. Abijah Gilbert, who d. Nov. 25, 1838. "Capt. Benedict removed to So. Salem before 1776, and finally settled at Patterson, near the close of the last century. Here he became a member of the Presb. church, and held the office of Deacon for many years. During the Revolutionary War he performed considerable service in the American army. He served at least one enlistment in the Continental army, in the campaign of 1777, on the northern frontier; but the most of his service was rendered in the county of his residence (Westchester). Living near what was then called the 'lines,' or 'neutral ground' between the British army in N. Y. city, and the American armies in the interior, they were constantly in danger from the raids of the British army, and the depredations of 'Cow-boys,' as they were called. He belonged to a company of organized militia, called 'minute-men,' who were obliged to be in readiness to march at a moment's notice, and in this capacity did much service. He was a member of the guard over Major Andrè, during a portion of the time of his confinement, trial and execution." He was appointed Ensign, May 4, 1780; Lieut., June 24, 1786, and Captain, March 8, 1791. He d. Patterson, Oct. 17, 1832. His ch. all b. So. Salem.

Recently I learned that there is a town named Selleck in Washington (King Co.) and wrote to the postmaster asking for information on the age of the town and how it got its name. Mr. Cecil Hunter was kind enough to answer my inquiry and he gave me the following t hree names in order that I may get answers to my questions:

Bob D. Selleck 7742 31st N.W.
Clyde E. Selleck 4723 NE 55th
E. K. Selleck 2415 42d E.

My husband's grandfather, Charles Jefferson Selleck, was born in Erie, Pa. and after serving in the navy during the Civil War located in Oakmont, Pa. and died there approximately 1927 at the age of 88 leaving six sons and two daughters. His father's name was Joseph.

Mr. Hunter informed me that the town was named for a man who had a saw mill some 70 - 80 years ago and he thought the man's name was Frank Selleck. Would you be able to tell me more about the man for whom the town was named and where he had come from? The name Selleck is uncommon both here and in Pa. I would be most grateful for any information you can supply me. Thanking you, I am

Sincerely yours

To Mr. Hunter I wrote: Thank you for writing and giving the information I asked for. It was certainly kind of you and I do appreciate it. I am writing to the three persons whose names you gave me to see if they will answer.

Sincerely you

The town of Selleck was named after a Mr Selleck who had the first saw mill here. I believe the first name was Frank but of that I am not sure. He had a small saw mill located in what is now part of the Seattle water shed.

About the age of Selleck I am not sure but it must be 70 or 80 years old. There is not much left of the original town The sawmill which belonged to Pacific States Lumber Co. was built here quite a while after Mr Selleck was forced to close his mill by the City of Seattle. The Pacific States mill was closed by bankruptcy and has been torn down.

If it would interest you, there are a number of families in Seattle by the name of Selleck. I will give you their names and addresses.

Dear Mrs. Selleck:

Please excuse my delay in answering your letter of May 24th. I have been attempting to get more information regarding Frank Selleck. My father recently returned from a business trip in the East and was able to give me some sketchy information.

My grandfather, Willard Franklin Selleck, was born in 1887 and died in 1962. He was one of six children of Willard Franklin and Celia Selleck. Only one of these six children survive -- Marion Goodman. Aunt Marion would be much more qualified to fill you in on the details of the family. I have given her your name and address.

To the best of my knowledge, my great-grandfather was born during the Civil War in upstate New York, his father being killed in the War. Great-grandfather Selleck was a teacher and moved to Minnesota where he had several teaching jobs before moving to Yakima, Washington in 1904 with his family. The family made their home there for the remainder of their years, although the children moved about and scattered about the country. My grandfather, Willard Franklin Selleck, Jr. married Irene Palmer, also of Yakima, and my father is their only son, born 1921.

My father, Willard Palmer Selleck, spent most of his childhood in Yakima until the early 1930's when his parents moved to Wenatchee, where he has resided ever since and where I was born.

To the best of my father's knowledge, the Frank Selleck you mentioned in your letter was a uncle or cousin of my grandfather's. We are not certain of the exact lineage of the family. To the best of our knowledge the other two Selleck's you mentioned in your letter who reside in Western Washington are no relation, except maybe very distantly.

Marion Goodman's address is as follows:

11701 - 16th N.E.
Seattle, Washington 98125

I would suggest writing to her for further information. I only wish I could be of more help.

I am very interested in following family geneologies. My grandmother, Irene Selleck, did a very comprehensive study of her side of the family a number of years ago and did some investigation into the Selleck side of the family also. It appears that this branch of the family is pre-Revolutionary, as was my grandmother's family (Palmer). I would be very interested in hearing from you any information you gather that might connect our families. It seems to be the plague of the Selleck family that they are very non-communicative, and as a consequence, I know very few members of the family or really anything about them.

Wishing you success in your inquiry --

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Kaye Selleck

Dear Miss Selleck:

Thank you for ~~XXXXXX~~ your interesting and informative letter. Mr. Clyde E. Selleck also wrote to me and we were surprised to learn that your family was not connected. He gave me quite a lot of information and it seems that his family were longtime residents of Illinois, his grandfather having settled there in 1859 after he left his birth place in Vermont.

Because your great-grandfather was born in upstate New York, this will be of interest to you and I quote from Mr. Selleck's letter: "There is a Selleck Corner - a small town in New York State. Also there is a David D. Selleck, 19 Sligo Rd., Yarmouth, Me. whose father Henry Selleck was born in Buffalo, NY and who is deceased and buried at Arlington".

Some day I hope to do some searching and find the origin of this branch of the family but at present this is all I know. Joseph W. Selleck, a music teacher (born 1799), married ___?___ and lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, raising two daughters and one son, Charles Jefferson (1838-1926) who married Mary Rebecca Shade (1850-19 36) after his discharge from the ~~MAY~~navy following the Civil War. They lived in Oakmont, Penn and raised Charles Francis (1868), Harry Vincent (1870), George Whiting (1872), Emma Blanche (1874), Mary Mildred (1876), Willard Gilbert (1880), Ralph (1884) and Raymond (1889). They are all deceased and there are only three surviving males; one in Florida, one in Ohio and my husband here in Illinois, and combined those three have four sons, two of which are our boys 19 and 21, and two of the Florida resident ø(Clayton Selleck) with whom we have no contact and cannot say where his sons live. That last sentence bears out your statment that the family is non-communicative, ~~xxxxx~~ a trait evident in this branch also.

You may be interested to know that one Silas Selleck is mentioned as a "photographic artist" in San Francisco in "The American West" a book published by Dutton and authored by Beebe and Clegg.

If I ever find anything which would be interest to you I will certainly send it along.

Jean Selleck (Mrs. J.R.)

Dear Mrs. Selleck:

This will acknowledge your letter of May 24th which I found most interesting, as had not been aware that there were Sellecks at Mattoon, Ill. or knowledge of this Penn. branch of the Selleck family.

My branch of the family are long timeresidents of Illinois, my grandfather who was born in Brandon, Vt. in 1841 came to Ill. in 1859 and purchased land from the IC Railroad near Buckley where I was born and raised. My sister Mrs. Clement Ikins (Alice Joyce Selleck) lives in Onarga, Ill. also my aunt, Mrs. M. L. Wright (Alice Selleck) who is 86 and the last member of my father's family. He is the Cecil shown on the genealogy sheet enclosed. There were 6 children in my family - 4 boys & 2 girls. None of we boys have male children.

I am enclosing copies of the materials I have been able to collect over the years on the Selleck family. The 2 books mentioned in the Prefaces to the Selleck & Peck Genealogy are in the permenant library of The Union League Club, Chicago/ I was permitted to read them but not not purchase as I had desired. Wm. E. Selleck the author was one ofthe founders of The Union League Club. The Selleck Crest - copy enclosed was taken from this book.

We moved to Seattle 3 years ago from the Chicago Area and also have been interested in the history of Selleck Washington. When my sister Mrs. Ikins and her husband visited us this past February, we drove out to Selleck and talked to Mr. Hunter and some of the other residents. However, were unable to secure much information. The copy of the News story enclosed is all the local library had to offer.

There is a Selleck Corner - a small town in New York state. Also there is a David D. Selleck, 19 Sligo Rd., Yarmouth, Me. whose father Henry Selleck was born in Buffalo, NY and who is deceased and buried at Arlington.

If you have any other information that would fit into the picture I would appreciate having it.

Sincerely,

Clyde E. Selleck

Dear Mr. Selleck:

Please excuse my delay in answering your most informative and interesting envelope of material. We were vacationing. I can't begin to tell you how much we appreciated your letter and the various copies received. I only wish we had something interesting to add but, unfortunately, we do not.

Recently a Miss Elizabeth K. Selleck (2415 - 42d Avenue East) wrote saying that the Frank L. Selleck for whom the t own is named was a relative of her grandfather. We were surprised to learn that you r family was not connected inasmuch as the name is rarely heard and of course we did not know you were originally from Illinois.

Joseph W. Selleck (bor n 1799) married ? and lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, raising two daughters and one son, Charles Jefferson (1838-1926) who married Mary Rebecca Shade (1850-1936). They lived in Oakmont, Penn. and raised Charles Francis (1868), Harry Vincent (1870), George Whiting (1872), Emma Blanche (1874), Mary Mildred (1876), Willard Gilbert (1880), Ralph (1884) and Raymond (1889). You may be interested to know that one Silas Selleck is mentioned as a "photographic artist" in San Francisco, in The American West, a book published by Dutton and authored by Beebe and Clegg.

Some day I hope to search the archives in Erie and find, if possible, the origin of this branch of the family.

Thank you for writing me and if I ever find anything which would be of interest to you I will send it along.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. J. R. Selleck

Drove to Watertown in July, and stayed several weeks with Jo Anne while she made preparations to move to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. We came home via West Point where we had a very pleasant visit with the new Superintendant, General Lampert, whose father was a 1910 classmate.

To the Selleck Family

ABOUT three years since, I published a book of eighty pages, with the view of establishing the lineage of the Selleck and Peck families. I succeeded in tracing both lines to 1633 and 1637, respectively, and found some very important direct ancestors, of which I gave biographical sketches. The book was well received and was purchased by a number of Public Libraries and Historical Societies

No question but what David Selleck was the originator of the name in this country, and it is almost certain that all of that name now here came from him.

Since then I have made a search of collateral ancestors, and was surprised at the result. No question but what any Selleck can show a relationship with some, if not all of the following.

George Washington
Henry W. Longfellow
John Dryden
Percy Bysshee Shelley
Aaron Burr
Commodore Oliver Hazzard Perry
Anne Hutchinson
John Alden
Priscilla Mullins
Rev. Jonathan Edwards
Arch. Edwin Sandys
Maj. Nathan Gold
Rich Law
Benjamin Silliman

With these facts before you there are strong grounds for you to become familiar with your pedigree and learn just where you come in. If you have not the time, or the reference books at your command a genealogist assisted me in my search and is familiar with it. He is in a position to easily complete the line of almost any Selleck, and his charges are very reasonable. His familiarity with the subject enables him to make an estimate of the cost, on receipt of what information one has of his ancestry during the past five generations and during the Colonial period.

His card will be sent on request.

The book has 85 pages, well bound, and printed in the best manner. Has 26 illustrations, 12 coats of arms and 28 charts.

There are a few of the "Selleck and Peck Genealogy" left will furnish either or both books at three dollars ($3.00) each, which is about one-half the cost of publication.

The Selleck family have too strong a lineage to ignore its existence, and should learn the position they hold.

Respectfully,
Wm. E. Selleck.

Union League Club
Chicago, Ill.

To the Selleck Family:—

About a year ago I published the Selleck and Peck Genealogy.

The fact that it has been ordered, and received favorable comment by a number of Public Libraries and Historical Societies is evidence that it has more than ordinary merit.

The Selleck family have a Historical Record from "early settlers" through the Colonial and Revolutionary times, that any member can be proud of.

David Selleck came here from England in 1633, and nearly, if not quite all of the name, can trace their ancestry to him. He was a prominent man in his day, and was one of the number that established the first Public School in this country.

The marriage connections with other families add materially to the record. Rev. Chas. M. Selleck in his History of Norwalk, Connecticut, says: "The Hooker, Law and Gold is one of the strongest family combinations in New England," add to this the Sands, Kilborne, Silliman and Peck and the strength is materially increased. All these families are shown to be inter-married with the Sellecks, and the prominent ones, some of world renown, came from Selleck blood.

There never was any expectation of profit when the book was published. If the entire edition had been sold, when it was decided to offer the same at $3.00 each, the proceeds would not have covered the actual printer's cost, say nothing of time expended in collecting what is shown, and in offering what few copies that are left, it is more with the hope of stimulating the members to take the proper interest in their lineage than to sell the books.

D. H. Van Hoosear, of Wilton, Connecticut, Genealogist Searcher and Genealogical Editor of the Norwalk Weekly Hour, has been able to connect several with the line, thus making them entitled to the use of the Selleck Coat of Arms. Each examination he makes serves to help future ones, and a letter addressed to him will meet with proper consideration.

The book contains thirteen illustrations, is printed in the best manner and worthy of a place in any library.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, in referring to the book in their January number, says: " * * * A line of descend from David Selleck, who, arrived probably from Bristol, England. The record is well prepared, and the illustrations are well selected and printed. Other families who have a place in the book are Kibby, Law, Gold, Sands and Silliman. General Gold Selleck Silliman, son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Selleck) Silliman, was Brigadier General of Militia in the Revolution and served throughout the war, taking efficient part in the battles of Long Island, Harlem, White Plains, Danbury and elsewhere. * * *"

To any one who feels interested the book will be sent on receipt of $3.00 as long as they last.

Dear David:

We were very pleased to receive the family info and thank you for it. Please keep track of the expense you are incurring and we will reimburse you. I know we can never pay you for your time.

Sorry to say I cannot furnish you with a copy of the Ash family sheet as the only one I have has so many notes added, front and back, that I am scarcely able to decipher it my self. If my sister Marge wasn't in Florida she could probably furnish us with another copy but she won't be home again until Easter. However, we will try to get another to you somehow.

The parents of my grandfather (Charles H. Ash) were Thomas Ash Jr. (b. 1804 Ireland -d. 1847 Alleg.Co.Pa.) and Mary Cullen (b. ? Pgh.Pa. -D. 1886 Alleg.Co.as Mary McNeal). According to a letter of attorney dated May 5, 1827 in Ireland Thomas Ash Jr. was sent to Pittsburgh(along with a cousin Daniel Dogherty of Seacash, Antrim Co.,Ireland) in connection with the estate of Ellen Loughry deceased. His parents were Thomas Ash and Mary Loughry Ash "of the Cross, County of Antrim, Kingdom of Ireland".

I have no information further back concerning the Ash family and I do not have all the recent data and corrections necessary to bring this up to date.

Virginia reports that they enjoyed your visit very much. Sounds like you folks have been having a lot more winter than we've received, but it is fine with Jack and me.

Thanks again for all your efforts and I will try to furnish you with the Ash record. Give our best to Elizabeth.

Cordially,

Jean and Jack

Syracuse, N.Y. 13202

Dear Sir or Madame:

A relative of mine, Joseph Whiting Callick, was born in Syracuse on Dec. 14, 1799. I do not know the names of his parents. In his obituary he was said to have been an Episcopalian.

Do you have any birth records of Syracuse or Onondaga County for that period; and, if so, is his birth listed? I should be very grateful to receive a copy of the entry.

If these birth records are not in your possession, could you give me the name and address of the Episcopal church that would have been in Syracuse at that date, so I could write to them about their baptismal records?

If the Callick family is mentioned in any early history of Onondaga County, I should like to have a photocopy of any pertinent references.

Enclosed is a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a check for $2.00 to cover the cost of copying any information you may find. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Whittridge

Joseph W. Selleck, cause of death "dropsy of the heart"

See enlargement on next page

Erie, Pa., newspaper, Jan. 7, 1858

Mrs. Senator Douglas Dancing Documents.—"I called on Senator Douglas last evening for a short time, and found him busy in his study franking copies of his speech all over the Union. Diligently engaged in directing the speeches as they were franked was Mrs. Douglas, radiant and beautiful in her elegant evening attire. She wrote rapidly a bold, free hand which evinced energy and decision of character, while she carried on a part of the conversation at the same time. She is truly a very beautiful lady in form and figure, with a countenance expressive not only of intellect and energy, but affection and pure womanly sympathies. She has evidently the mind to investigate and comprehend questions of politics, for some of her remarks exhibited considerable feeling concerning the position of Kansas affairs. A gentleman had just brought in some three hundred names of citizens of Cincinnati, and she proceeded at once to direct each a copy of her husband's speech, while Mr. Douglas added his frank. Those who receive the speeches will, therefore, have a specimen of the chirography of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas."—Wash. cor. of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Who is Commodore Paulding?—Hiram Paulding comes honestly by his skill in arresting unlawful expeditions. His father was that celebrated John Paulding, the Peekskill farmer, who was one of the three captors of Major André. Hiram was born in Westchester county and early in life entered the navy, and passed through the grades of Midshipman, Lieutenant, Commander and Captain. He has ever been one of the most efficient and valued officers in the service; and government a short time since showed its appreciation of the fact, by appointing him to the command of the Home Squadron, which he now holds.

We observe the Mail intimates that the Commodore "exceeded his instructions" in so promptly capturing Walker. The same complaint was made by Arnold's friends against John Paulding. Nevertheless, history and public opinion justified the one and will justify the other.—Albany Evening Journal, 1858.

Charles Fenno Hoffman.—We observe a notice going the "rounds" of the Press that Charles Fenno Hoffman, the celebrated Poet, who has for some time been an inmate of the Pennsylvania Hospital near our city, is lying dangerously ill.—We are requested to state by Dr. Darwin, the efficient superintendent of the above named institution, that the report is without foundation. Mr. Hoffman, so far from being ill, is in the enjoyment of most excellent health, and hopes are entertained that at no very distant day, with the treatment now observed, the distinguished gentleman may be restored to that position in society of which he was

PETER C. BORSARI

"My privacy and Tom's were invaded," complains Robert Selleck (with wife Martha and son at the Golden Globes).

TOM SELLECK AND HIS DAD APPLY MAGNUM FORCE IN A LEGAL WAR AGAINST THE TABLOIDS

His alter ego on Magnum, P.I. usually takes matters of justice into his own hands, but Tom Selleck has deferred to a higher authority in his latest dustup. On Feb. 3 in Los Angeles Superior Court, Selleck, 38, slammed the National Enquirer with a $36 million lawsuit for libel. In a statement released through his agent, Selleck accused the tabloid of "contriving entire articles where there is absolutely no factual basis." The Enquirer vowed to "defend this lawsuit vigorously."

Under dispute are three 1982 articles that outraged Selleck. The first charged that the notoriously sedate actor was a secret swinger "complete with flashy clothes, beautiful women and a furious lifestyle." The second described his "blockbuster" romance with Dallas star Victoria Principal. According to Selleck, who was divorced last October from model-actress Jacquelyn Ray, his wife of 11 years, he had never met the purported object of his passion until last month's Golden Globe Awards, and at the time of the alleged romance he was in Yugoslavia filming High Road to China. Principal says she was in Hawaii, and adds, "I would be happy to go to court on his behalf." The third alleged that the TV star threatened the creator of an unauthorized poster featuring a drawing of a half-naked Selleck.

The Enquirer suit isn't the Selleck family's only action against a saucy tabloid. Tom's father, Robert, 60, a San Fernando Valley real estate executive, has filed a $6 million libel suit against the weekly Globe in response to a Dec. 14, 1982 article, "Tom Selleck's Love Secrets—by His Father." "I don't even know what a 'love secret' is," snorts the elder Selleck, who found the headline particularly offensive. He also claims that the article resulted from a telephone interview with a woman who said she worked for a London paper. "She asked that I fill her in on some interesting things that happened while Tom was being raised, like Little League and so on," he recalls. "It looks like I wrote it. It was humiliating to think that people who didn't know how close my son and I are would think I'd rat on him." The Globe's legal counsel declines to comment.

Selleck's action is not the first celebrity complaint against the Enquirer, and even though his case could drag on for years, he has a winning precedent on his side. Carol Burnett's 1976 libel action against the tabloid ended in 1981 with an $800,000 judgment in her favor. DAVID WALLACE

Dear Rev. Witheridge:

Births, deaths and marriages were not officially recorded in New York State until the late 1880's.

The only Sellecks in our 1800-1840 Onondaga County census index are Henry Sellick in 1820 and '40, Marcellus, and James H. Sellick in 1830, Manlius. No Selleck (various spellings) is listed in the New York State census index for 1800 in Onondaga County.

The name Syracuse was first used in 1819 and until 1848, when the village became a city, census listings are Town of Salina.

We do not have a staff for family research at this time. Enclosed is the card of a genealogist for your convenience.

We return your check herewith.

Sincerely yours,

Violet A. Hosler

Editor's Note

The photo on the next page depicts (L to R) Charles Jefferson Selleck (b. 1838), Williard Gilbert Selleck (b. 1880), John (Jack) Robert Selleck (b. 1918) (leaning against his father), and Mary Rebecca Shade (b. 1850). The location and date of the photo are unknown, but based on Charles's death and burial year of 1925, and judging Jack's age to be approximately 6-7, it might have been taken by an unknown photographer ca. 1924-25.

The source for the photo is John W. Selleck (b. 1951), who sent it to me as an email attachment on November 5, 2022. Notice John's reflected face in the gap between Charles and Williard.

all this the caller at the house to-day will discover the chimney, from the crane of which hung the kettle of always ready "steeping" water.

A portion of what is, in 1896, known as the Selleck house, on West Avenue, is of ante-revolutionary date. It was originally Belden property, and belonged to the fourteen acre homestead of John and Rebecca (Bartlett) Belden. After the parents' day, it fell to the ownership of their children, four of whom, Mary Esther, Sarah, Amos and Henry, sold on March 18, 1796, their share in the estate (two-thirds) to their brothers Isaac and John, who divided the fourteen acres between themselves, Isaac taking the south half and John the north portion. Isaac married the daughter of one of Norwalk's principal men of those earlier and more simple days, Matthew Reed, and lived in what is now known as the DeKlyn house. John was unmarried and resided in what is to-day the Selleck house. After John Belden's use of the premises, his brother Henry occupied the same for a time, and he, at the instigation of his wife, erected the milk-house addition which is to-day observed on the north side. The back roof at that time ran almost to the ground, and under its west section, floored with stone, was kept the wood for winter, but the space was reserved in summer for a "cooling" place in a hot day. The Beldens' rights in the property were finally bought out by Frederick St. John, son of William St. John and brother of Mrs. Col. Buckingham Lockwood. He had married Harriet, daughter of John Cannon, but had no children. He there lived and died, when the house and lot became the purchase of the widow of Zalmon Selleck, the mother of the present owner of the property, Mrs. Wm. K. James.[1] Mr. Selleck died in the South, leaving a widow and two children, one of whom, Henry, also died away from home, and the fine old place fell, consequently, to the mother and daughter, who there resided in great comfort. The building was set on fire by Garth's wing of Tryon's army, but as the men were hastening to cross the stream-rocks (site of iron bridge on Cross Street 1896) to join Tryon's forces, the house was probably left as soon as the torch had been applied, and was on that account, partially saved. After the conflagation a small building that stood on the Westport road was moved and made to become a part of the original Belden building.

Another existing ante-revolutionary home is that of the lower Main Street Hoyt sisters and brothers. On May 15, 1764, Goold Hoyt, Sr., paid Capt. Josiah Thatcher, who then owned the old Whitney mill, £47-15s. for a lot of one-half acre and fifteen poles area and situated on "mill plain," now Main Street. Here Mr. Hoyt was to build the homey worked great destruction. The afternoon had been dark, and a few minutes before sundown it became evident that a terrible visitation of wind and rain was at hand. The storm is said to have commenced at Norfolk, Va., an hour or so before noon. It reached Norwalk at about 6 o'clock in the evening, and it spent itself on the Massachusetts coast at midnight. It overtook the Norwalk packet, THE SLOW AND EASY, Uriah Selleck[1] owner, and sank it. It leveled between one and two hundred large chestnut trees standing on some four acres a few miles out of Norwalk, and unroofed houses in every direction. The Norwalk shore was in its direct path, and Half-Mile Island and other marine sections were particularly exposed. The storm of 1833 shifted much of the sand of this same island from the east side to the west side, and on Dec. 17, 1833, the tide rose to such an extreme height that it made three distinct islands of the one. On Feb. 5, 1845, the island is said to have been surrounded by banks of snow six or seven feet high.

After the farm use of Half-Mile Island by the St. John's, Raymond's and Fitch's, the frame of a dwelling[2] which formerly stood on the path to the "Ballast," was thither removed, and the beach's orient end became the site of an humble but happy home-hearth. Grandmother Gregory[3] was the head, for many years, of this hearth-stone, and was ever and anon seen standing at her southeast-facing door, looking at the sails in the offing, or listening to the plaintive note of some distant sea bird.[4]

[1]The Norwalk wharf of this sailing vessel adjoined the present coal yard of Charles T. Leonard. Uriah Selleck there had a store, at the rear dock of which the first steamboat put upon the Norwalk route had wharfage. His business partner, at one time, was Samuel St. John of New Canaan, the father of the late Wm. and Prof. Samuel St. John. Mr. Selleck had married, May 18, 1784, Hannah Smith of Darien, and a direct descendant of Mr. Wm. Haynes, of Haynes' Ridge. These had two children, Zalmon and Nancy, the first of whom, born March 31, 1795, was the father of Mrs. Maria (Selleck) James of Wall Street, Norwalk. The Uriah Selleck home became, afterward, that of Matthias Hubbell, in Main Street.

Evart Quintard, born 1798, in South Norwalk, commenced learning his trade (cabinet-maker) in the house, still standing, northwest cor. of North Avenue and Camp Street. Zalmon Hanford was the occupant of the premises, and the rooms in which Chas. R., father of Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, had enjoyed old Samuel Camp's evening musicales, were now appropriated as furniture quarters. During Mr. Quintard's apprenticeship Mr. Hanford removed to the Uriah Selleck house, which he occupied until about the time of its purchase by Matthias Hubbell. Mr. Hanford there built the cabinet shop that was afterward moved and used by Mr. Quintard, on the site to-day known as 152 Main Street.

[2]This dwelling was the home of Abraham Gregory, which stood a short distance below the ancient burying-ground.

[3]She was the widow of John Betts Gregory. Her husband was the son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Betts) Gregory, who lived where the late Henry Marvin resided, on East Avenue, and south of the ancient Beacham Lane. It was the oaken frame of Abraham Gregory's house which was removed in 1831 to Half-Mile Island, and formed the west end of old Mrs. Gregory's cottage at the Point. John Betts Gregory learned his trade (potter) of Absalom Day of "Old Well." After his marriage to Olive, born 1786, daughter of Aaron and Hannah (Weeks) Raymond, and grand-daughter of the soldier, Simeon Raymond of "Old Well," he had a good business offer from Huntington, L. I., which he accepted. He afterward established a pottery in Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., which required a building 140x40 for his operations. He returned in 1831 to Norwalk, and bought from Samuel Hanford Half-Mile Isle, paying for the same $325.00. He there built a kiln for the burning of earthen and stoneware. The kiln was erected during the cholera year (1832) by masons Lewis and George Raymond of "Old Well." The business was here kept up until 1840. Mr. Gregory died July 22, 1842, leaving a widow, who survived him until 1883. His children were Charles E., who lived at the present Langdon west-end entrance, and was drowned; Geo. W., who resides in Saugatuck; John W.; Mary Jane (Mrs. Rev. W. B. Hoyt;) Harriet (Mrs. Rev. Harvey Camp) and Eliza (Mrs. Gay.) respected colonial occupations. Besides this, he was probably the head of the iron-ware establishment of the period. The Holmes' of America may be proud of their Norwalk kinsman. He was a brother of the founders of the Stamford and Bedford[1] Holmes families, and Col. James Holmes of the Revolution was his grand-nephew.[2] He left no male issue.

HOME-LOT V.

EDWARD NASH, who succeeded Joseph Fitch and Mark St. John as proprietor of Lot No. 5, was the fore-parent of the large Norwalk Nash family. He was a son, it is claimed, of Edward Nash 1st, who was born in Lancashire, England, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in 1592, and reported to have had two sons, Edward 2d, and John. Edward Nash 2d. came early to Norwalk, and immediately followed Mark St. John as owner of one of the eligible house-sites (directly south of the East Norwalk school of 1896) in the new plantation, and as Jos. Fitch was unmarried while he remained in Norwalk, and Mark St. John was possessed of two additional lots, it seems probable that Mr. Nash was the earliest heartstone occupant of the spot. There appears to be no mention of the first Mrs. Nash. By her was a son John, born 1652, who, so runs the family tradition, was the first English child born in Norwalk. Another child of Edward Nash, by his first wife, was Hannah, who married, Dec. 3, 1678, Deliverance, son of Henry Wakeley of Stratford, and an early Hartford lawyer.[3] Here is a possible hint as to the locality-antecedents of the original Mrs. Nash. The second Mrs. Edward Nash was the wife, first, of Thomas Rumble of (as the record shows) the ancient town of Stratford, and second, of Thomas Barlow of Fairfield.[4] Mrs. Nash had no children, it is probable, by her last marriage. She was

[1]Two Holmes sisters lived in Bedford (south part of town on road leading east) some seventy or so years ago, one of whom, Amy, married as his third wife, Nathan Selleck, and was the mother of Jesse Selleck, late of Norwalk.

[2]John Holmes, nephew perchance of Richard, was killed by the fall of the first church bell that was raised in Stamford. See Huntington's Stamford.

[3]An interesting genealogical fact is divulged through a clause in the inventory, Aug. 2, 1699, of the Norwalk estate of Edward Nash, 2d. Allusion is there made to "Deliverance Wakeley, son-in-law" of said Nash. This establishes the claim that the "Hannah Nash" who married Deliverance, son of Henry Wakeley, the noted colonial lawyer of Hartford, was a daughter of Edward Nash of Norwalk, rather than of Sergt. Joseph Nash of New Haven; and as Nathaniel Ketchum, who married June 12, 1710, Sarah, born Dec. 1, 1683, daughter of Deliverance and Hannah (Nash) Ketchum, was the probable ancestor of Amos and Hiram and Morris Ketchum as well as of Maria Ketchum Averill, wife of Chancellor Reuben Hyde Walworth of Saratoga Springs, it gives to these kinsfolk an additional Norwalk lineage.

[4]Thomas Barlow is believed to have been a near relative of John Barlow, 1st, both early settlers of Fairfield. The six acres granted him in 1653 by the Fairfield fathers are to-day a coveted portion of that handsome and historic town. He appointed in his will the celebrated Thomas Pell, of King Charles I. staff and lord of the Manor of Pelham, overseer of his three children, two of whom, Phœbe and Mary, married in Norwalk. Phœbe (Mrs. James Olmsted) had a son Nathan, born, April 27, 1678, who married, Dec. 17, 1702, Sarah, daughter of Ralph Keeler. By this union there was evidently a son, Nathan 2nd, (afterward of New Fairfield, Conn.,) but this Nathan's half brothers, Samuel and James, and his half sisters, Mercy and Lydia, were the issue, it seems, of his father's second marriage to Mercy, daughter of Christopher Comstock. Mercy Olmsted, daughter of Nathan, married Moses St. John, who is well represented in Norwalk to-day, and Lydia Olmsted, through her marriage to Matthew Fitch, became a fore-as also their daughters Sarah (Mrs. Thomas Rockwell[1]) and Ruth (Mrs. James Abbott) and Mehitable (Mrs. Lieut. Wm. Lees). John Rusco[2d.] died young, and evidently before marriage, as the disposal of his estate (see Fairfield probate records) so indicates. This left his brother, Thomas, to perpetuate the Rusco sire name. Thomas seems to have been interested in the "West Side" lands, and "Rusco Creek," in the rear of the present South Norwalk corset establishment, was probably named for him. Himself and wife, Abigail, had a family of nine children, viz.: Thomas[2d.], John, James, Theophilus, Josiah, Samuel, Mary, Abigail (Mrs. Wendall) and Rebecca (Mrs. Samuel Smith). Thomas[1st.] died in the summer of 1739. His son, Thomas[2d.], the date and order of whose birth are not ascertained, married Elizabeth, daughter of Ebenezer, and a grand-daughter of Matthew[1st.] and Sarah (Treat) Camfield, and had a son, Thomas[3d.], who seems to have been the father of John Rusco of Rusco Ridge.

This parent of a numerous descent was married, on March 9, 1758, to Joanna Arnold of Salem, and his home, on one of the most commanding heights in the lower Oblong, (named for, and possibly first occupied by, the Sachem Winnipauke) lay midway on the north side of the winding road that connects Bald Hill, Conn., with the hamlet of

His sister, Mary, married Samuel, the oldest son of Ralph Isaacs, and their son, Samuel Brown Isaacs, fell heir to a large slice of his uncle James Brown's property.

Rev. James Brown of The Oblong, and of a more modern date than James the barrister, was the grandfather of the present "Selleck Brothers," the great grandmother of whom was eminently patriotic. While Tryon had command of Long Island he sent agents to this side of the Sound to purchase cattle and horses, and The Oblong was a field for such stock transactions. The British employed a middle man, whose duty it was to secure the live stock from the first owner, and see the same driven to the Darien shore, from whence transportation was had to Long Island. Sally Selleck's husband embarked in this enterprise but the wife put an effectual stop to it, and the Salem "Horse Hollow" (near East Woods) was broken up. Mrs. Selleck stood, (once gun in hand,) so eagerly intent upon the performance of loyalty-missions, that the Continental men were accustomed, when they met her, to pass along the line "Hurrah for Sally." She was thoroughly successful in turning her husband from toryism to patriotism.

Eber and Hannah Brown of the same vicinity were heavy land owners and held title to hundreds of Oblong acres. Their daughter married Daniel Stevens and had Daniel[2d.] who was the father of James Stevens, the proprietor for years of the Connecticut Hotel in Norwalk. Eber Brown, the great-grandfather of landlord James Stevens, owned a large portion of the territory about Trinity Lake. He was remarkable for physical strength. It is said that he had been known to cut ten acres of rye in a day. His wife Hannah, was an Arnold, an English woman.

[1]Thomas, son of John and Elizabeth (Weed) Rockwell of Stamford, married, Dec. 9, 1703, Sarah, daughter of John Rusco[1st.] of Norwalk. Thomas and Sarah Rockwell had three sons, Thomas[2d.], John and Jabez. Thomas[2d.], born Dec. 13, 1708, married Ruth, daughter of Dea. James and Sarah (Hyatt) Benedict. These had a son, Lieut. James Rockwell, born June 9, 1750, who married Abigail, daughter of Thomas Hawley (son of Rev. Thomas) of Ridgefield. Their daughter, Anna, became the mother of Capt. D. K. Nash of South Norwalk, and their son, Gould[1st.], born Dec. 18, 1778, married Polly, born July 23, 1779, daughter of Nathan and Mary (Smith) Dauchy, and was the father of the late Gould Rockwell[2d.], born March 6, 1808, who married, first, Mary Caroline Bradley, and second, Mary Louisa Denman. Gould Rockwell[2d.], a man of sterling principle and honor, was, formerly, a Troy, N. Y., citizen and churchman. He spent the latter part of his life in his native Ridgefield, and died, while absent for the winter, in New York City, March 10, 1892.

Thos. Hawley Rockwell, born May 21, 1776, son of Lieut. Jas. and Abigail, and brother of Anna (Mrs. Jacob Nash) and Gould Rockwell[1st.], married Polly Smith of Ridgefield. These were the parents of David Smith Rockwell, a New Canaan resident of enterprise and excellence, and for many years principal of the "Church Hill Institute" of that town. Mr. D. S. Rockwell married Betsey, daughter of Stephen Rusco married, Sept. 29, 1763, Ruth, daughter of Eleazer and Elizabeth Bouton. Mrs. Elizabeth Bouton was a Seymour.

Thos. Rusco, supposed to be son of Thomas 3d., married Anna Dibble, Feb. 26, 1756. Possibly this is the same Thomas who married, a little later, Elizabeth, daughter of Lemuel and Sarah Raymond.

The late Michael Rusco of Norwalk, son of David, and grandson of John and Joanna Rusco of Rusco Ridge, married Mary, daughter of Rev. James Brown of Salem, and sister of Lucy (Mrs. Isaac Selleck). He had Samuel and Joseph. Joseph married Emma, daughter of Lewis and Anna Fancher and had Frank Rusco, the 1896 Business College principal.

John and Rebecca, the Norwalk Rusco fore-father and mother, were honored ancestors. The old house-lot and home, No. 6, continued for about fifty-five years in the family. The father died without having made a will and the estate was court-inventoried on Nov. 20, 1702. On Feb. 19, 1705, the original home was sold by the heirs to Samuel, the youngest son of Rev. Thos. Hanford, to whom fell his late father's adjoining home property. This extended the Hanford acreage. The Hanford front yard and well are shown to-day, but every vestige of the Hanford Rusco-annex has disappeared by the Consolidated road's changes.

HOME-LOT VII.

RALPH KEELER, SR., of Home-Lot No. 7, was born in 1613. He was one of the settlers, in 1639, of Hartford, and appeared in Fairfield in 1645, from whence we find him in Norwalk in 1655. He was twice married. His second wife was Sarah, widow of Henry Whelpley of Fairfield, who had at least two Whelpley children. He had assigned to him the four-and-a-half acre home-lot, the south-west corner of which is occupied to-day by W. S. Hanford of East Norwalk. He retained his original premises until Oct. 21, 1662, when he parted with them, and Richard Raymond became their proprietor. On Sept. 1, 1665, was executed a deed whereby was made over to him the dwelling house, barn and lot that had belonged (see page 39) to Thos. Ward, now the garden land of Wm. H. Earle. Ralph Keeler, Sr., who died in 1672, left four sons, viz.,

RALPH 2d.; SAMUEL;
JOHN; JONAS; died unmarried.

Mr. Keeler had, also, four daughters, one of whom married, Nov. 16, 1671, Benj. Turney of Fairfield; another, Rebecca, who married, July 17, 1673, James Pickett; and another, Isabel, who married Thos. Morehouse of Fairfield.

Norwalk and Ridgefield are widely Keeler-spread, and the family's lineal and collateral branches are numerous. The discovery, if ever made, of the first Keeler mother that day, "Court" vicinity (Bleecker St.) of the city. Leonard Kip was a neighbor and his son, the future California prelate, Wm. Ingraham Kip, was the Ray children's young companion. Mrs. George Warner Nichols, loyal to the memory of her sister (Mr. Richards H. Schell,) caused to be erected, in 1894, a rare "In Memorian" in the Chapel of Our Holy Saviour, in central Norwalk. Her husband also, at the same time, made valuable donation to said Chapel's crystal embellishment.

Matthew Keeler 2d, son of Matthew 1st and brother of Rebecca (Mrs. James Seymour 1st.) married, Dec. 1769, Anna, daughter of Daniel Benedict, (son of Samuel, and grandson of Thos. Benedict 3d) and had Samuel, born June 4, 1778, who married, July 29, 1798, Lydia, daughter of Azariah Waterbury of Stamford. This Samuel Keeler was the army officer who, in the war of 1812, marched his command (see foot note, page 42) from New London, Conn., to Detroit, Mich. Samuel and Lydia Keeler's children were Sally Esther, born Feb. 24, 1799, (Mrs. Jonathan Selleck of Troy, N. Y.); Mary Ann, born May 7, 1802, (Mrs. Henry Selleck of Norwalk) and James Stevens Keeler, born May 7, 1804, of Troy, N. Y.

(SECOND OCCUPANT.)

RICHARD RAYMOND of Salem, in the Jurisdiction of Massachusetts Bay, bought, on Oct. 21, 1662, of Ralph Keeler, "my housings contained at present within my home-lot and cow yard, together with all the conveniences and appointments thereunto belonging, as videlicet, the house-floors, doors, glass windows, shelves or ought else that may properly be said to belong to the same, . . . and to frame and erect a new building adjoining the same, clapboarding the sides and ends as high as the upper ways;" for all of which Mr. Raymond was to pay Mr. Keeler the sum of £42. This introduces Capt. Richard Raymond, (who was in Massachusetts as early as 1634,) at Norwalk. He evidently came hither as soon as the reconstructed Keeler house was ready for occupancy. He was of the lane-way leading, in 1896, from Belden Avenue to the Union Co. office. Here were brought up Mr. Stephenson's four children, David, (formerly proprietor of the Norwalk Hotel,) Morris (latterly of Danbury,) Matilda (Mrs. James H. Keeler) and Antionette (Mrs. Samuel Pennoyer.) Mrs. James H. Keeler was the mother of James, who died unmarried, and Frances E., who married the late Samuel R. P. Camp, and Antionette, who married Edwin, son of Charles Mallory. The Keeler, afterward Lockwood and St. John mill, was burned down about 1727-8. The fire occurred late in the season and some time elapsed before the building was replaced. Upon its restoration by "Governor" Platt of Silver Mine, it was turned into a cotton mill, with a "run of stone" for grist purposes, the original deed of the town to the Keeler's demanding such a use of the establishment. After the replacement of the structure two Englishmen rented the industry, and one Florence was its manager. Florence occupied the old St. John house that stood in the street (Main Street) somewhere near the present marble works. The "Norwalk Scales" of that day were directly opposite this house on the west side of the street, the mode of weighing by which (sometimes hoisting into the air) was somewhat peculiar. The Keeler-Lockwood mill, afterward "run" by John Arnold, was for years an important local industry. The "Factory Bell," before the advent of steam whistles, was a faithful Norwalk morning monitor, and, like the Anson Quintard noonday horn, a familiar Norwalk memory.

[1]Some of the original "lots" soon changed owners.

Samuel and Rebecca Platt, evidently survived him but a few months as her estate was inventoried March 26, 1790. The heirs of Jabez and Rebecca Raymond were their son Josiah and the children of their deceased daughter Ann, (wife of Samuel, son of John Platt 3d.) They appear to have lost an unmarried daughter, Hannah, in 1770.

Josiah 1st. son of Jabez and Rebecca Raymond, married, Nov. 5, 1765, Molly Merwine. She was from Greenfield Hill and belonged originally, it seems, to the New Haven family of that name. She, albeit but eighteen years of age, brought with her to her Norwalk married home (later the Geo. A. Raymond property in the rear of the Eli B. Bennett East avenue home) several of the Greenfield slaves who worked in and out doors and were a domestic power. It sometimes happened, not unnaturally, that the Raymond children, after having been sent to early bed, would indulge in a little before sleep "fun," but "Chloe" was depended upon to see that the "up stairs" peace was preserved. Of the boys, Thomas, Platt, Merwine, Josiah Jr. and Jabez, were born in the old pre-Tryon house which stood a little south of the yet standing Geo. A. Raymond home and which was close by (opposite side of street) the house of Capt. Samuel Jarvis, in which was born the second bishop of Connecticut, Rt. Rev. Abraham Jarvis. Geo. A., the youngest son of Josiah 1st. and Molly Raymond, and whose old time methods are unforgotten, was not born until six years after the town's conflagration. He married Pamelia Banks, of Greens Farms (a sister of a true Norwalk mother, Mrs. John L. Smith) and the two lived in the rebuilt house which is still in existence. Thomas, the oldest son of Josiah 1st., took his bride (Eunice Meeker) from his mother's Greenfield vicinity, and was the father of William Raymond, one of whose sons, Thomas I, now resides in West Street, South Norwalk.[1] godfather for one of old Commodore Christopher Raymond Perry's grand-children, Capt. Geo. W. Rogers, U. S. N., who was killed in the Civil War. Commodore McDonough's sons were educated in Norwalk. The Norwalk affinity to the Sands-Raymond-Perry connection (an honorable relationship) is thus traced. Capt. John Sands, son of Capt. James and Ann (Palmer) Sands of Block Island (1660), married Sybil, daughter of Simon Ray of Block Island. In 1696 Capt. John removed to Long Island and established himself at the famous neck, named for him, Sands Point. One of Capt. John's daughters, Abigail, married Hon. John Thomas, the first Judge of Westchester county, and Capt. John's nephew, Samuel Sands, married Mary Pell, of the Manor of Pelham. Capt. John Sands had a brother Samuel, and the two brothers (sons of Captain James) married two Ray sisters. Mary Sands, daughter of Capt. John, married, Dec. 1710, at Jamaica, L. I., as his second wife, Nathan Selleck, son of Jonathan and Abigail (Gold) Selleck of Stamford. Nathan Selleck was named for his grandfather, Hon. Nathan Gold, of Fairfield, the purchaser of the splendid Roger Ludlow American estate. The first wife of Nathan Selleck was Susanna, only child of William Hooker, of Farmington, Conn. She was married to Mr. Selleck on Aug. 12, 1708, at only eighteen years of age. She died Oct. 5, 1709, leaving one child, Susanna, born Sep. 3, 1709. This child grew to become the wife of Joseph St. John and hence the ancestress of the Norwalk Buckingham St. John, Buckingham Lockwood and Isaac Scudder Isaacs children's blood.

Her father, married second, Mary Sands, who, as was the case with Mr. Selleck's first wife (Susanna Hooker) lived only a short time. She died July 13, 1712, and her husband married her cousin Sarah Sands, (daughter of Samuel Sands). There were nine children by this union. (See Selleck lineage).

[1]The present West street in South Norwalk may with propriety be designated AN HONOR-WAY. As early as 1641 Andrew Ward and Francis Bell picked out their way over it en route to and from Stamford and New Haven. A portion of the aclivity was first called "Campfield's Hill" from the fact that Samuel, son of Matthew Campfield (King Charles 1662 charter nominee), and a grandson of Sarah, sister of Gov. Robert Treat, planted one (probably the first) of its hearthstones. Madam Knight, in her memorable trip parenthesis, born 1721, died May, 2, 1812, inherited Samuel, his father's, homestead (S. W. corner East Avenue and Fort Point Street, 1896.) Samuel Hanford was the son of Rev. Thomas, and succeeded to his parents' occupancy of the original Hanford homelot. Hezekiah was one of the chief men of his day and served in the American Revolution. He lived in comfort and died on his reverend grandfather's home property. He located his son, Daniel 1st, on the Strawberry Hill estate, which was so long the home of the son of Daniel 1st, the late Joseph P. Hanford 1st.

Susanna; married Josiah Rusco.

Daniel 1st.

Note that the only two sons of Matthew 1st. and Sarah Seymour who remained in Norwalk were Thomas Seymour 2d. and Daniel 1st.

John 2d., son of Thomas 1st. and Hannah Seymour, married Sarah, daughter of Jachin and grand-daughter of John Gregory, Sr., and had:

John 3d.

Mary; married Thomas Hanford.

Sarah; married Daniel Trowbridge.

Abigail; married, Nov. 5, 1729, John Selleck of Stamford.

Rebecca; married first July 6, 1734, Elijah Whitney; married second John Bouton of Danbury.

Martha; married Samuel Jarvis.[1]

John Seymour 3d., son of John 2d. and Sarah (Gregory) Seymour, married Ruth, daughter of William and Margaret Belden. This Seymour-Belden alliance was not only the mingling of strong New England blood, but on account of the Belden sufferings and sacrifices in King William's French, Indian and American troubles, entitles every descendant to "Colonial Wars" recognition.

William Belden, born 1671, (nephew of the first John and Samuel Belden of Norwalk) was the son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Foote) Belden of Deerfield, Mass. Daniel and Elizabeth were married Nov. 10, 1660. Mrs. Belden's father was Nathaniel Foote 2d., son of Nathaniel Foote 1st. who had married, in 1615, in England, Elizabeth Deming, sister of John Deming, Sr., one of the fathers of Wethersfield, Conn. Nathaniel Foote 1st. died in this country, in 1646, and his widow married Gov. Thomas Wells. She died, July 28, 1683. Her grand-daughter, Mrs. Daniel Belden 1st., bequeathed Deming-Foote (a notable union) blood to a large number of Norwalk citizens to-day.

[1] On Sept. 16, 1696, a company of "French Mohawks" made an attack upon Daniel and Elizabeth Belden's Deerfield homestead. It was "lecture day," and the people, in from Stamford to Norwalk some twenty-six and one-half acres of land occupied at present in part by the Norwalk Armory and also the now vacant lot on West Avenue southeast of the Armory. A barn and the frame of a dwelling house stood upon the land at the time of its purchase by Mr. White, who there erected his home and also a shop for the manufacture of silverware. The shop stood where now is built the Connecticut turnpike. The year of said Seymour's sale to said White was the year of the latter's marriage to Elizabeth Jarvis. The oldest child by this union was Samuel, born July 13, 1740. This son married Nov. 1769, Huldah Sanford and had two sons (Samuel 2d., born Feb. 6, 1772; and Stephen, born May 13, 1775). He had three daughters (Elizabeth, b. Dec. 12, 1772; Sarah, born Jan. 27, 1784; Huldah, born July 6. 1785.) James was born Jan. 21, 1790. After the birth of the two sons and daughter first named, the senior Mrs. Samuel White died, on June 1, 1778, and Mr. White married, second, in Jan. 1781, Rebecca Pickett. To the three daughters of Samuel White, their grandfather, Peter, bequeathed on April 9, 1802, the twelve front acres of his purchase of March 13, 1738. His oldest grand-daughter, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel, had married Noah, son of Hezekiah and Mary Jarvis.

[1] Samuel Jarvis 2d., who married Martha Seymour, and three daughters. His oldest son, Samuel Cooke Silliman, did not quit the town with himself, but remained upon the family site. He was twice married, first to Elizabeth Stratton and second to Dinah Comstock, whose home was in the more remote portion of the Canaan parish. He died Feb. 14, 1798. His brothers removed with the parents from New Canaan, but Joseph 1st, the youngest, a lad of fifteen at going away, came back, now a physician, to New Canaan, where he was afterward a continuous recipient of public honors. He married, Nov. 23, 1785, Martha Leeds[1] of the Stamford family of that name. These had seven children, viz: Joseph 2d.,[2] who married Martha, daughter of Sherman and Hannah (Fitch) Mitchell and grand-daughter of Rev. Justus Mitchell; William, who married a daughter of Esquire Eliphalet St. John, whose boys' seminary crowned Canoe Hill; Elizabeth, who married Hon. Minot, second son of Rev. Justus Mitchell, and was the head of the White Plains Mitchell family; Samuel C. 2d., who married a daughter of Uriah Reed[3] of Canaan Ridge (grand-daughter of Timothy, a grandson of John Reed of Crom-

[2]He occupied the Silliman mansion still standing near where stood William Haynes' boundary "oak tree," at the south-eastern limit of Haynes' Ridge. He was a man of affairs during the busy six-day week and on Sunday the Silliman pew (south-west corner of the old Church Hill Meeting House) was regularly and reputably filled.

There have been three Congregational Church edifices in New Canaan and the sites of the first two so closely adjoined as to almost, if not quite, lap each other. The site of the present church is a few score feet from that of the second, upon which latter spot for one to stand is for one to be well nigh history-inspired. Here, in 1732, the first meeting house was built. Permission to organize an ecclesiastical society had already been granted, but the "objective point" was not reached for two years. The central figure in the portraiture which one at this spot mind-draws is that of a bright young man of 30 years, well related, who stood first in his college class and was New Canaan's earliest pastor. He was accompanied by a young bride, Anna Beard, and John and Anna Eells established themselves with one son and two daughters on that lovely spine, perhaps a mile eastward of their spiritual home, and known, very properly, to-day, as Carter Street. Mr. Eells' congregation at that time was a small but an earnest body of men and women. Nearest the pastor and immediately under his pulpit in that first church, sat John Bouton. He was then in years, but he was a good man and founded a line of worthies. Matthew Fitch also sat there and his short lived St. John wife, who became members just before the society experienced its first bereavement by the decease, May 8, 1736, of the pastor's first wife. Ebenezer and Hannah Carter, the progenitors of an excellent descent, also sat there. Mr. Eells' constituency was a growing one and a second edifice was demanded. This was built in 1752 and continued in use ninety years one of the most beautiful pictures of its last days, being the stately walk through its aisles on the way to the pulpit, of the benignant-faced, and benevolent-natured Rev. Theophilus Smith, as well as the entrance, at the west door, of his dignified mother-in-law, Mrs. Samuel St. John, leaning upon the arm of one of her sons, and followed, in summer, by her home-visiting children and grand-children, the party filling the St. John pew in the north-west corner of the sanctuary and constituting a noticeable group. The St. John children were much admired as was the case with Col. Enoch St. John's Alabamian charge, the two Pope lads, who also went to the same Church. These boys were masterly handlers of the gun, and having been asked how they acquired their skill chivalrously replied, "Our mother taught us." The bravery of Henry, the older brother, was put to a further test when sudden sickness or death having occurred, in the night, in the family, the courageous young southerner breasted a New England snow storm, and trudged, through deep darkness, over the New Canaan Ridge, in quest of assistance. This same Henry Pope wrote, in 1895, a graphic letter descriptive of his New Canaan life and sent it north. He died in Mobile, June 7, 1895.

[3]Uriah and Hannah Reed lived at the upper end of Haynes' Ridge, Canaan Parish, and their home, writes one, was "quite the picture of the birth-place of Whittier." Here were born three children, two of whom, Sally and Clara, lived to become of age. Sally, born May 2, 1791, married Joseph Fitch 2d., (son of Joseph 1st.,) who lived on the east side of Smith's Ridge, in the house now standing next south of the residence of Mrs. Stephen Keeler. Joseph and Sally Fitch had five children. This family eventually removed from New Canaan, and is to-day represented well's army) whose son, Samuel C. 3d, is to-day a resident of Stamford; Elisha, who married first, Harriet, daughter of Capt. Stephen Betts of the Continental army, and second, Amelia Cooke of New Haven; Annie who died young and John who married Catharine Lockwood.

Joseph F. Silliman of 1896, is a son of Joseph 2d. and Martha (Mitchell) Silliman. He married Carrie, daughter of Capt. Stephen Hoyt, the founder of Hoyt's New Canaan Nursery, and lives on the fine old Silliman place in that town, and while the willow[1] that waved over his great-grandfather's (Rev. Justus Mitchell) grave is missed, still it is a gratify-by a daughter, Julia, Mrs. Dr. Gould of Lockport, N. Y. Clara, daughter of Uriah and Hannah Reed, married Samuel Cooke Silliman, grandson of Rev. Robert Silliman of New Canaan, who had two children, one of whom, Samuel Cooke 3d. survives to-day, and is a druggist in Stamford.

In the township of Stamford was born "about break of ye day," Feb. 4, 1734, to David and Mercy Selleck, an infant to whom was given the name of Samuel, and between whose brothers, sisters and self a handsome patrimony for that period, was, before the lad quit his teens, apportioned. The infant had grown up and married when the Revolutionary War broke out. His patriotic soul was stirred and he joined the army only to be captured in the vicinity of the present Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and taken on one of the last days of the summer of 1776, to the prison ship, in New York waters, where he died, leaving a boy who, baptized the day after his birth, had been named David; which son, being only fifteen at the date of his father's decease, yet resolved to avenge that parent's fate, and consequently joined the Continentals who, the next spring, April 27, 1777, repulsed Tryon at Ridgefield upon his retreat from Danbury to Compo. The brave lad there fell, and his comrades, cutting the buttons from his coat, bore them to his widowed parent, than whom "never was the memory of a mother kept more sacred." This mother's next child to her heroic David was a daughter, Hannah, who married Uriah Reed (son of Timothy, who was son of Samuel, who was son of John 2d., son of John 1st.) and who was a quiet, independent farmer of New Canaan. He was a man who kept things snugly and his day's work was done when the sun was yet an hour high. He was a cousin of Matthew Reed of Norwalk (the father of Mrs. Isaac Belden.) Mrs. Reed was remarkable through life for sweetness of disposition and beauty of person. Her nephew and niece (Ebenezer, Jr. and Miss Rebecca Selleck) the children of her only brother Ebenezer Selleck of Westchester County, were among the closest personal friends of the late General James A. Garfield, U. S. A.

Before the future President Garfield entered college and while he taught for a season at Poetenskill, a centre at that time in the fast growing territory east of Troy, N. Y., he made the intimate acquaintance of New England and Oblong contributors to the settlement of Renssalaer County.

Samuel Selleck, the patriot, was an older brother of Jacob Selleck, born 1744, who became the well known land owner on Clapboard Hill, and he was a younger brother of the Gershom, "born ye 10th of July 1730 at 9 of ye clock," whose daughter Charlotte, baptized by Dr. Ebenezer Dibble, (tentatively of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk,) on May 2, 1763, and married on June 3, 1784, to Stephen, born April 12, 1767,* son of Bushnell Fitch, was the mother of Hon. Benjamin Fitch, founder of the Fitch Soldiers' home, Noroton.

[1]Said treelet indicating, topographically, "the homeward end of Haynes Ridge" also dropped gracefully over the mound† beneath which lay one of the principal dwellers upon that salubrious height. Rev. Justus Mitchell of Woodbury, had married at about the age of twenty-five, Martha, daughter of Rev. Josiah Sherman, also of Woodbury. Mrs. Mitchell's brother, Hon. Roger Minot Sherman, resided with his wife and two children in Norwalk, living at one time in France Street, (Edward Merrill place) and at another upon the East Avenue (Stevens place) of 1896. Like her Norwalk brother, Mrs. Mitchell was an individual of rare attainments, and ranked, among ladies, with Mrs. Stephen Buckingham of Norwalk. (See Chapman's Buckingham family, page 144.) Her husband, a man of calibre and character, had been called to New Canaan and attached to Haynes Ridge, bought, on Aug. 8, 1783, of Stephen Hanford, son of Samuel and Isabel Hanford, and grandson of William Haynes, a solid slice of twenty acres out of the fairest portion of the elegant patrimony, paying for the same the generous sum in that day, of 165 English pounds. This was the year in which Mr. Mitchell was ordained and commenced his active twenty-three

*Documentary, but a numerical mistake, probably. In the multiplicity of ancient record-dates this could occur.

†The grave of Rev. Justus Mitchell. On Jan. 26, 1773, William Bolt and Jonathan Husted sold to the proprietors of Canaan parish one half acre in front of the meeting house "for public benefit of whole community." This plot became in time neglected and the citizens in later years resolved to reduce the uneven hillside to a grade-slope. The dust of the dead was undisturbed, but the grave stones were removed to the parade ground burial acre. The sites, in the Church Hill burial ground, of Rev. Mr. Mitchell's tomb and that of the patriotic Hannah Benedict (Carter) of Carter Street, are to-day marked.

ing antiquarian fact that two ancient Haynes Ridge homes have been so long and well preserved. Modern taste has not so essentially changed the "Mitchell house" (now Bond) as that the foundation and framing plot-and-plan by the grandson-in-law of the Ridge's founder[1] have been entirely obliterated, while the layout of the surrounding grounds yet makes it possible to mind-follow through the "lane" and "orchard," down to the river's "path," her girlhood rambles, whom several foreign lords to-day remember as grandmother[2]; and a clause in a last century testamentary injunction of the Silliman elder brother, whereby "Phillis" is remembered, suggests the scrupulous neatness, outdoors and indoors, of the Silliman "out kitchen," burnished by its rows of dairy-tin and all kept swept and shining by the family's old fashioned clever "colored help."[3]

The Norwalk-Canaan Cooke-Leete blood ceases with the Silliman and Mitchell descent. Rev. Samuel Cooke's first wife dying Aug. 11, 1721, he married, second, Esther, daughter of Nathaniel Burr of Fairfield. The Burr homestead which Esther Burr at her marriage to Mr. Cooke left, was one of the choice home-spots of New England. It embraced the level tract at the west end of Bridgeport to-day, near to the intersection by the Consolidated road of the Fairfield Street. She was separated from it, however, but a few months as she died, without issue, in less than a year after marriage. The good minister came to Norwalk for his third wife, and found her in Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Platt, years ministry, a ministry spent entirely in New Canaan. The home was an intellectual home. The parents had been about four years married, and Elizabeth and Sherman Mitchell were respectively three and one years old, when William Haynes' meadow property was Mitchell-possessed. These children's uncle, Roger M. Sherman, was only seven years older than his niece Elizabeth, and had not at that time, by six years, entered college. After graduation and marriage, and settling himself in Norwalk, he visited his Haynes Ridge sister and found, doubtless, in her family, now augmented by her two remaining sons, Minot and Chauncey, something of an antidote for the bereavement underwent in Norwalk when he lost his two only children, laid, first, in Town Hill Cemetery, and now sleeping beside their parents in Fairfield.

[1]The 1896 Bond house on Haynes' Ridge, is believed to have been framed by Ebenezer Smith, who married Elizabeth, daughter of John Bartlett, and grand-daughter of William Haynes. Ebenezer Smith, son of Killiab and grandson of Lieut. Samuel Smith, of Hadley, Mass., was brother of Ephraim Smith who married another daughter (Isabel) of John Bartlett. These were the ancestors of Susanna Smith, who married Isaac Bell. See note, page 94.

[2]Lucy, daughter of Rev. William Bonney, incumbent of the New Canaan Congregational parish from 1808 to 1831. Mr. Bonney kept a boarding school on Haynes' Ridge, at which were educated a number of young men of future reputation. Mrs. Bonney was filled with the spirit of missions, and was wont to make house to house appeals in aid of the cause. Upon such occasions she carried with her a little heathen God, which object-lesson proved to be not without account. Lucy Bonney married a young man, Wm. B. Sherwood, who was a near relative of Rev. Wm. Bonney. These had a daughter, who married Lord Esslemont of Aberdeen, Scotland. Rev. Mr. Bonney had one only son, Samuel, (afterwards a missionary) whose village school companions were delightfully entertained by Mrs. Bonney upon their Saturday afternoon visits to her son, in later life, an intimate friend of Dr. Bayard Taylor.

The boys were dismissed from the Haynes Ridge (now Bond) home in time to allow for the beginning, when the sun went down, of Sunday. This "Saturday night keeping" marked life in ancient Canaan, the peaceful after-supper hush of its primitive households (amid which quiet the family bible on the stand was opened and reverently read from and the simple evening prayer offered) being a blessed prelude to the duties of the succeeding day, and involving a practice-principle which was, individual, community and nation wise, beyond value-estimate. The keeping of Saturday night was general throughout New England.

[3]Indian women in some cases were of service. After the victory over the Pequots at Fairfield, there seems to have been an influx, in South-western Connecticut, of such help-element.

elder. He said that he had heard his wife say that the owner of the land went to America, but that they never heard of him after, and that his name was John Burwell.

"Lambert soon returned to London, and with Mr. Junius Smith again applied to the Office of the Steward of the Lord of the Manor of Hemel Hempstead, but every obstacle was put in the way of their investigation. They made another call at the same office, and were informed that Mr. Briggs had gone to France, and would not return in a number of weeks. They explained the business to the clerk left in the office; he said the old Court Rolls of the Manor were at the office, but were locked up, and could not be got at until Mr. Briggs returned. Lambert called there a number of times afterwards, but Mr. Briggs had not returned when he left London. He made arrangements with Junius Smith, Esq., before leaving London to carry forward the investigation of the claim, but was unable to make any progress in the affair."

Burwell, born Apr. 14, 1715, second son of John and Hannah (Burwell) Betts, married, Nov. 1, 1740, Thankful, born Oct. 24, 1719, daughter of Thos. and Sarah Raymond and grand-daughter of John[1st] and Mary (Betts) Raymond. These had four children. The wife died Dec. 3, 1749, and Mr. Betts married, second, Sarah, daughter of Nathan Burwell, and had a daughter, Molly, born April 4, 1757, who married Oct. 21, 1780, Hezekiah Whitlock,[1] whose daughter Fanny, born Aug. 4, 1799, married, April 4, 1821, James Stevens,[2] of Norwalk. Betsy, born July 3, 1772, sister of Molly Betts, married, as his

[1] A son of Hezekiah and Molly (Betts) Whitlock, viz., Lewis, kept, for many years, the Norwalk lighthouse on the old "Smith's," later, "Norwalk" Island. "Uncle Lewis" maintained a sort of bachelor's quarters on the island, but his home was a hospitable retreat to parties who were storm-surprised and storm-stayed. He lived in the whitewashed stone cottage which was erected at the foot of the lighthouse, and picturesquely stood beneath the willow. Mr. Whitlock's island life was rather monotonous, but a small slate which hung on the inside of his living room door and upon which he recorded the passing of vessels up and down the Sound, evidenced that the tedium of his office was thus, in a measure, relieved.

[2] James Stevens, son of Daniel,[2d.] who was son of Daniel[1st.] and Sally (Brown) Stevens, of the Oblong, was, with Henry Selleck, engaged, in early life, in the large manufacturing establishment of the patriarch Caleb Benedict, Sr., of Benedict's Hill, subsequently Brushy Ridge, New Canaan. Both young men came afterwards to Norwalk, and here established families. Mr. Stevens was long the proprietor of the "Connecticut Hotel," corner of Main and Wall Streets, (site of present Boston Store) and Mr. Selleck, for years, the first selectman of Norwalk. The children of James Stevens were Georgianna (Mrs. S. Henry Bailey), Mary (Mrs. Eli S. Quintard) and Susan (Mrs. Frederick T. Betts). The parents and sisters are dead, the grand-children being the late Samuel and James S. Bailey, and the present Mrs. Rev. Frederick R. Sanford, Mrs. Charles Dell. Brower, Mr. LeGrand C. Betts and Mr. Frederick Quintard. Mr. Stevens' son-in-law, S. H. Bailey (son of Noah Bailey of Norwalk), was a St. Louis, Mo., merchant, Mr. F. T. Betts (son of Hon. Thaddeus Betts of Norwalk) is a Norwalk farmer, and Mr. Eli S. Quintard is a New Haven and Derby R. R. official. Mr. Quintard is a son of Anson and Polly (Sanford) Quintard, who resided in the Joseph Keeler homestead, at present the tenement quarters opposite the coal office of C. T. Leonard. Eli S. Quintard was a New York and New Haven railroad official during the early period of said company's existence and his mention summons up primitive memories of that, to-day, colossal corporation. Among Mr. Quintard's contemporary and somewhat-later conductor-brethren were the well-remembered Upson, Dennis, William Comstock, William Lineburgh, Ward Nichols, John Bradley, George Cornwall, William Bauch, Frederick Lockwood, "Jack" Stock, William H. Wallace, Joseph Franklin, and Strickland. Messrs. Upson and Dennis were among the earliest conductors. Mr. Comstock, who commanded the 8 A. M. "Boston Express" out of New York on the morning (May 1853) of the fatal plunge of a large portion of the train into the Norwalk river, now resides in the West. Mr. Lineburgh, of Norwalk birth, has since been an enterprising citizen of Bridgeport. Ward wrote from Schenectady, N. Y., to Norwalk, inquiring as to his brother's children. The reply resulted in a visit of one of his Norwalk or Wilton nephews (David Betts[1]) to him in Schenectady. He had been married and had one child, but both mother and child were dead, and the father (Jared) married, last (see page 142) the mother of Major-General John E. Wool, U. S. A., of Troy, N. Y.

THOMAS AND DEBORAH BETTS LINEAGE.

Thomas[2d.] and Sarah (Marvin) Betts, son and daughter-in-law of Thos. Betts,[1st.] had a grandson Thos. (son of Thos.[3d.] and Deborah Betts), who married May 22, 1748, Elizabeth Benedict. These last, Thos. and Elizabeth Betts, had two sons, Thos. and Hezekiah. Between the two brothers there was seven years age-difference. They were born in the house in lower France Street, which the existing Miss Juliette Betts home supplanted. Thomas, born March 14, 1753, married, March 19, 1782, Elizabeth Smith, of Smithtown, L. I., and had George W., born June 6, 1800, who married Julia, daughter of Dr. William Miner, an old physician of East Broadway, New York City. Geo. W. Betts was a large Pearl Street, N. Y., carpet dealer. He purchased the Lewis Mallory estate on East Avenue, Norwalk, and in 1846 enlarged the same, founding a country home thereat. Here the family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Betts and their sons and daughters, Elizabeth (Mrs. Jas. Selleck), Wm. M., Julia, Sarah (Mrs. Henry Banks), Geo., Chas. and Hattie, enjoyed a delightful residence for several years. Mr. Betts was a man of fine presence and of liberal spirit and one who took an intelligent and active interest in Norwalk. Upon the completion of the building and furnishing of his handsome Norwalk home a brilliant function therein occurred on the evening of Jan. 3, 1848, the occasion being the wedding of his oldest daughter. The family has now entirely disappeared from Norwalk. The parents sleep within the town's confines, and the children are living elsewhere. Of the two sons William M. married into the Stamford Sanford family, George is connected with the Devoe Paint establishment of Fulton St., N. Y., and Charles lives in Evansville, Ind.

Hezekiah, second son of Thos. and Elizebeth Betts, was the Capt. Hezekiah Betts of Revolutionary fame. With his brother Thos. he was brought up on the Juliette Betts France Street premises of 1896. He married, Oct. 1, 1785, Grace, born Oct. 5, 1765, daughter of Hezekiah[1st.] and Deborah (Hoyt) Hanford. Hezekiah Hanford was son of Samuel who was son of Rev. Thomas Hanford. He inherited his father Samuel's homestead, which was that of Rev. Thos., southwest corner East Avenue and Fort Point St. of 1896. He was a prominent Norwalker and served in Capt. Eliphalet Lockwood's company of "Coast Guards" during the Revolutionary War. His wife was a daughter of Caleb (son of Zerubbabel, son of Walter, the settler,) Hoyt, to whom he was mar-

Maj. Jonathan Selleck, son of David and Susannah Selleck, the settlers, came to Stamford in 1660. He married, May 11, 1663, Abigail, daughter of Hon. Richard Law, of Stamford, "the first gentleman of the colony," and had Jonathan, born July 11, 1664, who married Jan. 5, 1685, Abigail, daughter of Maj. Nathan Gold, of Fairfield, and had Nathan, born Sept. 12, 1686, who married, Aug. 12, 1708, Susannah, daughter of William

[1]Miss Phœbe, born Sept. 26, 1763, and her sister, Sarah, left, finally, the Ferris Hill home and established themselves on the old Moses Comstock[1st.] (their grandfather) estate on Comstock Hill. They were maiden ladies who kept the ancient place until it was accidently set on fire by their slave, Onesimus. The old building having burned down, the sisters removed a few rods further down the hill (south) where they passed the remainder of their days. "Miss Phœbe's" reminiscences are found in "Hall's Norwalk," page 173. Their uncle, Abijah,[1st.] (son of Moses[1st.]) lived, first, in what is now the "Wardwell house" in Silvermine. It seems highly probable that he built the same. He surrendered it, however, to his son, Thomas, who there resided and there received the fleeing sufferers at the time of Tryon's fiery raid in 1779. When Abijah Comstock gave up his Silvermine home to his son, Thomas, he established the large farm in Vista, which his great grand-children to-day enjoy, and which is with grace presided over by his grand-daughter-in-law, the widow of Samuel Comstock[2d.] herself the daughter of David Comstock (son of David), of Comstock Hill.

The slave, Onesimus, before mentioned, was a character in his way. Older Norwalkers still remember him as seated upon one of the Comstock Hill horses, he rode, the attendant of Miss Phœbe, to and from Norwalk. "O'ne" was a Long Islander, born before the Revolution. He was Norwalk-purchased by Sarah and Phœbe Comstock, the aunts of "Miss Phœbe." The lad's original bill of sale, of which a copy is here presented, is in the possession of Hon. A. H. Byington, of Norwalk. "O'ne" is said to have been the last slave owned in Connecticut.

Hooker.[1] Mrs. Nathan Hooker Selleck died Oct. 5, 1709, leaving a daughter, Susannah, who married Joseph St. John, the father of Hooker, William and Buckingham St. John, of Norwalk. Nathan Selleck married, (see note page 126) second, Dec. 1710, Mary Sands, of Jamaica, L. I., who died July 15, 1712. He married, third, Jan. 1, 1713, Sarah Sands, cousin of his second wife, and had Nathan, born Sept. 15, 1726, who married, Sept. 17, 1745, Katherine, daughter of John Clock, of Stamford, who had Phœbe, who married, Feb. 1, 1776, as his second wife, Thos., son of Abijah, and Deborah Comstock, of New Canaan. Thomas[2] and Phœbe lived in the Wardwell house in Silvermine, which house three years after their marriage was crowded, at the time of Tryon's incendiarism, with Norwalk refugees. Their son, Nathan Selleck Comstock, married Betty, daughter of Ezra Seymour,[3] of White Oak Shade, and had Seymour, born 1804, who married Matilda, daugh-

[1]William Hooker was the third son of Rev. Samuel and Mary (Willetts) Hooker, of Farmington, Conn. His father was a son of Rev. Thomas Hooker, founder of Hartford, and his mother was a daughter of Capt. Thos. Willetts, of Plymouth, Mass., and the first Mayor of New York City. He was a brother of Mrs. Rev. Stephen Buckingham of Norwalk.

[2]On the afternoon before Norwalk was burned Thomas Comstock, born Jan. 26, 1747, was dwelling in peaceful security in the house now standing in Silvermine, west side of the road and second house above the "Crofoot corner" (See note page 115). The alarmed Norwalkers, however, soon put in an appearance, as hastening out of the doomed town they sought shelter in the suburbs. Mr. Comstock opened wide his doors to receive them and the refugees were made welcome. The times were stringent and it was difficult, at that date, to money-pay Mr. Comstock for the unexpected expense he had incurred. Two well-known benefitted Norwalk men, Simeon Raymond and Goold Hoyt, who themselves had suffered by the foreign incendiaries, generously proposed to surrender to Mr. Comstock any damage-claims which might ultimately stand in their favor. These claims were afterward satisfied by the Ohio "Firelands," apportionment, and as Messrs. Raymond and Hoyt's shares were put to Mr. Comstock's credit, the latter became proprietor of a Western estate. Time rolled along and it was not until 1806 that Mr. Comstock's son, Nathan S., determined, with some others, to journey to Ohio and look up land matters. The companions reached their destination, but the land was unmarked, and local information could not easily be obtained and the company returned from a bootless errand. Three years passed and Nathan S. Comstock, hoping for better things, arranged for a second investigation trip. He now took with him Darius Ferris, of Ferris Hill, not a half mile north of the Thos. Comstock place, and Elijah Hoyt. There is a record that the three men took a span of horses which, attached to a wagon, drew the necessary implements for clearing up wild lands. After a long and wearisome journey they finally reached the mouth of Huron River, where they found a Moravian Mission house for the Indians. The Norwalkers were hospitably greeted and offered the use of the Mission quarters until they could complete a lodge further inland for their protection. The trio of men set themselves to work and it was not long before they asked the few white men in that part of the country to assist them in raising and putting up the new building, which was the very first house erected in the present township of Norwalk, Ohio, and which was built and owned by Nathan Selleck Comstock, grandfather of Stephen Comstock, of Morgan Avenue (1896), of Norwalk. The next year, Abijah, brother of Nathan S. Comstock, removed from this town to Ohio, and was the second settler of our namesake town in that Western State. He there remained and lived until 1857.

[3]The Seymour (Ezra) into whose family Nathan S. Comstock married, lived on the property now occupied by Selleck Y. St. John, on the Stamford road, New Canaan. Ezra Seymour's children were Ezra,[2d.] Holly, Henry, Betty (Mrs. Nathan S. Comstock), Abigail, Nancy, Hannah, Rebecca, Lavinia, Sybil.

Ezra[2d.] was a farmer, who beyond carrying his produce to market, seldom left home. He was once in Silvermine, at a sister's funeral, but was never probably east of said locality, and he had been west as far as North Stamford and north as far as Ridgefield. He was unmarried, lived in primitive simplicity with his sister, Abigail, and gave his goods to St. Mark's Church, New Canaan. His sister, Betty, Mrs. Nathan S. Comstock, had a daughter, Betty, (sister of Seymour Comstock) born 1812, and baptized in Silvermine on the day of her mother's funeral and within a week of her father's decease, who married March 18, 1833, David S., son of Thomas H. Rockwell, of Ridgefield (See note page 114).

David S. Rockwell purchased the Davenport School property on Church Hill, New Canaan, (see was the daughter of Nathan and Susanna (Hooker) Selleck. Nathan Selleck, born Sept. 12, 1786, was the oldest child of Jonathan and Abigail (Gold) Selleck, and his wife, Susanna, baptized June 8, 1690, was the only child of William Hooker, of Farmington, Conn. As William Hooker was the son (third) of Rev. Samuel (and Mary Swanzey) Hooker, who was the son of Rev. Thomas Hooker, the founder of Hartford, it follows that all of Eliphalet and Susanna Lockwood's descendants are of Thomas Hooker blood. These same Lockwood descendants are also of the blood of Major Nathan Gold, of Fairfield, and of Hon. Richard Law, of Stamford. Hooker, Law and Gold is one of the strongest family combinations in New England.

William, the oldest son of Eliphalet and Susanna Lockwood, married, Dec. 31, 1796, Hannah, born June 26, 1776, daughter of James and Sarah (Weed) Selleck, of Norwalk. James Selleck, born 1742, was the eighth son of David and Mercie (Waterbury) Selleck. David Selleck, born Dec. 23, 1700, was the oldest child of Nathaniel and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, of Stamford. He was married, Jan. 3, 1723, to Mercie, born Jan. 27, 1706, daughter of Lieut. David and Sarah (Weed) Waterbury, which David and Sarah were married (Lieutenant Waterbury's second marriage) Aug. 11, 1698. David Selleck's mother is supposed to have been the daughter of Jonathan Lockwood, of Stamford, which Jonathan was a brother of Ephraim Lockwood,[1st] of Norwalk. The children of William and Hannah Lockwood were:

William Selleck, born Oct. 1, 1797.
Hooker, born April 2, 1801, died July 5, 1801.
Susanna, born May 31, 1803, (Mrs. George St. John).
Charlotte S., born Dec. 29, 1805, (Mrs. Leonard Bradley).

William Lockwood died Jan. 17, 1843. His son, William S., one of Norwalk's staunchest and most excellent sons, married Oct. 26, 1831, Catherine, born Dec. 17, 1807, daughter of William and Catherine (King) Hawley, of Ridgefield, and had:

Jane Elizabeth, born July 20, 1839.[1]
(Mrs. Henry E. Hawley, married Feb. 12, 1862.)
William Augustus, (M.D.) born March 26, 1841.[2]

[1]Jane Elizabeth, daughter of Wm. S. and Catherine (Hawley) Lockwood, married February 12, 1862, Henry E., son of Irad and Sarah (Holmes) Hawley, and had:

Elizabeth, born Jan. 25, 1865, (died young).

Edith Judson, born September 7, 1866, (Mrs. Coleman Williams).

Sarah, born October 15, 1868, (Mrs. T. Halsted Myers).

Henrietta Eugenia, born May 19, 1881.

Edith Judson, daughter of Henry E. and Jane Elizabeth Hawley, was married Jan. 24, 1894, to Coleman Williams, and had Sarah, born Feb. 5, 1895; Edith, born May 4, 1897, and Coleman Hawley, born March 31, 1898.

Sarah, daughter of Henry E. and Jane Elizabeth Hawley, married October 6, 1897, T. Halsted Myers. Her sister, Henrietta Eugenia, is unmarried.

[2]William Augustus, M.D., son of William S. and Catherine (Hawley) Lockwood, married Nov. 12th, 1868, Frances Isaacs, born July 18, 1846, daughter of Frederick and Ann Terrell (Isaacs) St. John, and had Arthur, who died young, and Frederick St. John, born October 30, 1869, who married, June 26, 1897, Minnie Apell, of New York. Mrs. Dr. Wm. Augustus Lockwood died March 8, 1882.

trips between the two places named, their city berth being adjacent to Catharine, James and Peck Slips and the annual "corporation wharfage" at each berth averaging about ten dollars for each vessel. The receipts for pierage, still preserved, are in olden form, being signed, from 1795 to 1803, by John Bingham, Charles Smith and Moses and Daniel Coe.

Some few years subsequently, 1812-15, Long Island Sound commerce was almost annihilated by the British Commodore Hardy and the "Liverpool packet." Sad work was made with Connecticut schooners and sloops. Our North shore sailors, however, notably Capt. Dan'l. Merritt (ancestor of the 1896 Norwalk Merritts), sometimes eluded the enemy and made their way through the East River into the city. From 1815 to the beginning of local steam navigation, in 1824, there were several Norwalk coasting proprietors. Uriah Selleck,[1] one of whose vessels (see page 51) was lost in the memorable autumn gale of 1821, was one of these. Eben. D. Hoyt was a shipmaster at that time. In the summer

Warren, son of Joseph, was well known in this community. He married Lydia, daughter of Hezekiah Raymond, and a sister of Mrs. Capt. Daniel K. Nash. Their residence was on Flax Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Warren were blessed with nine children, the oldest son being the heroic Dr. Hezekiah B. Warren. This physician of character "too valuable to die so young" (see page 111) was a grandson of Hezekiah Raymond, whose wife Lydia, was a daughter of Rev. James and Mary Lockwood, said Mrs. Mary Lockwood having been a daughter of Rev. Moses Dickinson, third pastor of the First Congregational Church, Norwalk.

The Warren incumbency of the Norwalk sail vessel route was at a time of interesting metropolitan history. John Jacob Astor had just established himself in Water Street and made the second of his nearly three hundred property purchases. Alexander Hamilton had recently become the proprietor of the twenty-acre "Grange," a splendid tract in the upper part of the island. Aaron Burr, who in 1804 mortally wounded Hamilton, had bought his handsome Richmond Hill, now Varick Street. The Rosevelts' lucrative plate glass plant had been established and their elegant home (Broadway and Fourteenth Street) opened; and High Constable Hayes, who dared to name his son after Aaron Burr, which son held for a half-century the office of cashier of the North River Bank, was then an influential citizen.

[1]Uriah Selleck's dwelling was on the N. W. corner of the present Main Street and Union Avenue. His store and dock were (see note page 51) near the Leonard coal wharf of to-day and opposite the Joseph Keeler, afterward Anson Quintard, home. Joseph Keeler was a son of Capt. Samuel Keeler, whose "horse lot land" was the southern boundary of Ralph Isaacs' 1750 purchase, covered in 1894 by the Norwalk Opera House, Post-Office, Railway station, Masonic building, Club house, Isaacs Street and Hanford's Floral Hall. Mrs. Joseph Keeler was Hannah, daughter of Isaac Hoyt, of South Norwalk, and a sister of Charles Hoyt, formerly of North Avenue. At the decease, in 1822, of Uriah Selleck, his dock and store property fell to the widow of his son Zalmon, Mrs. Eliza Selleck, mother of Mrs. Wm. K. James, whose husband afterward bought the property. The next store above Uriah Selleck's was that of Joseph Keeler, the premises to the extreme north of whom on Harbour Avenue, now Water Street, was owned by Ebenezer D. Hoyt.

Uriah Selleck's grand-daughter, Maria Philips Selleck, the now venerable (Mrs. William K. James) has, from childhood, been the intimate friend of the Peter Lockwood descendants through his grandson Buckingham St. John Lockwood. The daughters of the latter, Elizabeth, Mary Esther and Julia Abigail, and also such well recalled Norwalk daughters as Elizabeth, Ann and Sophia Isaacs, and Mary Esther, Susan Virginia, Sarah Louisa and Julia Belden St. John, and Margaret and Amelia Belden, and Mary and Harriet Hoyt, and Mary and Margaret Newkirk, and Elizabeth Jarvis, Harriet Betts, Augusta Gregory, Elizabeth St. John and Charlotte Camp were acquaintances and companions in days agone. Mrs. James is of the same Hon. Richard Law blood as are the descendants, Lockwoods and others, of Captain Joseph St. John.2d. Her father Zalmon, born March 31, 1795, was son of Uriah, baptized Oct. 31, 1762-3, who was son of Nathaniel, born Oct. 29, 1725, who was son of David, born Dec. 23, 1700, who was son of Nathaniel, born April 7, 1678, who was son of John and Sarah (Law) Selleck. John Selleck married Sarah, daughter of Hon. Richard Law, October 25, 1669. He was born in Boston, Feb. 21, 1643, and baptized two days afterward. Mrs. James has been a benefactor of St. Paul's Parish, Norwalk, and has generously erected the Ludlow monument in the East Norwalk of 1896 to the memory of Roger Ludlow, the founder of Norwalk.

of 1814 he built on Uriah Selleck's dock the sloop Teaser. Afterward the firm name was "E. D. Hoyt & Son" (Edwin), the line consisting of the Union, Captain Jedediah Brown; the Mechanic, Captains Samuel Daskam and Alden Brothwell; the Citizen, Captains Samuel Pennoyer and Sherman T. Morehouse, and Sabina, (Capt. Francis Hoyt was an officer in this line) made tri-weekly trips, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, to New York.

Noah Selleck having bought out the Hoyts, sailed from the Hoyt dock close to the "bridge." His line embraced the sloops, Mary Ann Selleck, Domestic and Surplus as an extra. Captains Joseph Byxbee, Isaac Demmon and Isaac Selleck commanded the boats. At this time Captain Willis J. Merritt built and ran the sloop Mary Willis upon the Norwalk route. Noah Selleck afterward associated with him his brother Isaac. The two were succeeded by the latter's son Capt. Isaac Selleck, Jr. Charles T. Leonard now became temporary proprietor, and finally Capt. Isaac Demmon controlled the line. This was the end (barring a sort of desultory occupancy of the route by the sloop John I. Perry belonging to A. J. Meeker & Brother) of Norwalk packet history, which end was tragic. The last vessel of the last regular line, the Domestic, was burned to the water's edge off Shippan Point, and her last commander, Capt. Isaac Demmon, died in the arms of Captain Isaac Selleck, Jr., on West Avenue, Norwalk.

The passage by sail to the metropolis, sometimes accomplished in twenty-four hours and often requiring a considerably longer time for its performance, was an event in gone days. At first the greater part of the "hull" was "berthed off" as the passenger list ran at times to over fifty, but as the Captains Selleck and Merritt era neared, more space was appropriated to freight. Market day was a busy one at the "bridge," and there was a stir when the "wagoners" arrived. James Wilkes drove from New Fairfield, Nathan Benedict from Ridgebury, John Knowles from New Milford, Benedict Dunning from Brookfield, Hull from Danbury, Myram Dikeman from Redding, Samuel Seymour from North Wilton, Russel Mead from Ridgefield, and Nathaniel Close from North Salem. The produce was stored below deck, excepting the crates of live fowl and barrels of vegetables and fruit which stood in the front of the "quarter deck." The cabin, divided into two parts by sliding doors, was appropriated to the captain and passengers. There were no "state rooms" but "curtained berths" (on the Orion "five lengths") lined both sides of both cabins. In a Hudson River cabin Alexander Hamilton, in 1787, penned the opening chapter of The Federalist, "undoubtedly the most profound treatise on government that has ever been written." No Norwalk sloop cabin, it is true, was ever thus distinguished, nevertheless it may well be believed that the time there spent by our merchant and professional men of the same era was not entirely misimproved. Our business men of more recent years, such as George Bishop, Charles Isaacs and Thomas Warner, patronized the route, the latter of whom when intending to make the trip was wont after bank hours to go to the dock and interrogate the captain as to "the prospect." If the reply came "fine weather and fair wind," the cashier was sure to be aboard at the hour of sailing, and almost as certain to find himself at James Slip in the morning. Upon the down passage the boat was considered well under way when "Sheffield Island" was cleared, between which and "Sand's Point" lay the long Sound stretch, the route leading from thence through the Lower Sound, East River, "the Gate," the east and west channels (Blackwell Island), and round the "Hook" to the finish. Capt. Jacob Nash, born in Ridgefield in 1772, but a resident afterward of Norwalk, was a master mariner, and so was his son Capt. Daniel K. Nash. The latter and his neighbor Capt. William H. Ferris are to-day well-remembered Norwalk sea and sailing masters, and their business was large.

Sloop and schooner passsenger traffic gradually fell off when steam superceded the wind as a motive power. John Fitch's great-grandfather resided for a short time (1652) in Norwalk, but the great inventor himself launched the original steam-propelled vessel in the world on "Collect Pond," Smith's Valley, now Center Street, New York. Some thirty-six years after Fulton's CLERMONT, Henry Betts of Norwalk, assisted by two or three citizens of means, constructed a small engine, and planting it in a modest craft, prepared for the "trial." The start upon the maiden trip was made and "Oyster Shell Point" arrived at when the vessel was blown up, thus putting a period to Norwalk river steam navigation until the appearance in the harbor, in the spring of 1824, of the pioneer steamboat GEN. LAFAYETTE, which plied between Norwalk and New York until supplemented later in the season by the JOHN MARSHALL, Capt. Pennoyer, afterward Capt. John Brooks, an enterprise for which Henry Belden, first president of the Fairfield County Bank, stood responsible. The MARSHALL made three trips each way every week, and lay, in Norwalk, at Uriah Selleck's dock (neighborhood of Charles T. Leonard's present coal yard), whatever shore "office" the boat had being in the same Selleck's country store on the dock. In the spring of 1829 the BALTIMORE was put upon the route by Cornelius Vanderbilt[1] as an "opposition boat." This gave place in 1830-1 to the CITIZEN, which succeeded in "running off" the JOHN MARSHALL. The Flushing Peck's now appeared upon the scene, who being associated with Charles Hoyt and having purchased the CITIZEN from Vanderbilt, ran the same while the FAIRFIELD was building by Lawrence & Smeeden near Eighth Street, New York. When the FAIRFIELD was completed and had proven a success the NIMROD[2] was started, and when finished, put in commission in about 1836. Previous to the latter's arrival the WESTCHESTER[3] ran for a brief period, in opposition. The NIMROD being ready, the two distinguished Sound commanders,

[1]Called at that time "the proprietor of Long Island Sound."

[2]The NIMROD was at first a disappointment. The boat's stern lines had been imperfectly drawn and the vessel "dragged water." A false stern was added which remedied the trouble.

[3]This boat was put upon the route during the cholera season. As so many fled the city at that time the fare to and from Norwalk had been raised to seventy-five cents. The Vanderbilt owner of the WESTCHESTER lowered the fare to twelve and one-half cents, which created fierce opposition and aroused an intense interest. The first boats came to "the bridge" and their arrival was the signal for the discharge of a cannon from Town House Hill and the gathering of multitudes at that point and at Bessey's Hill.

The WESTCHESTER was withdrawn from the Norwalk route to be placed on the Hudson river as one of Joseph St. John[1st.] made his will Sept. 24, 1731, and dying two days afterward, the same was probated Jan. 12, 1731-2. In this document mention is made of his wife Sarah, his son Joseph[2d.] and his daughters Mary Eversley and Elizabeth. His wife survived him until Aug. 27, 1735. His son, Joseph[2d.], like his father before him, was an only son, who, by his marriage to Susannah, born Sept. 3, 1709, daughter of Nathan and Susannah (Hooker) Selleck, conveyed to his children and their descendants the staunchest of Colonial blood (see page 293). The children of Joseph[2d.] and Susannah St. John were :

Susannah. (Mrs. Eliphalet Lockwood[2d.])
Sarah, born Dec. 6, 1734; died Apr. 18, 1741.
Stephen, (Col.) born 1736.
Hooker, born 1742; died March 10, 1782, (unmarried.)[1]
William, born 1744; died Feb. 1, 1800.
Buckingham, born 1745; died May 5, 1771, (unmarried).
———— (son) died ten years old.

Joseph St John[2d.] died Sept. 1753, his wife having preceded him to the tomb on Dec. 4, 1749. His will was drawn Oct. 1, 1751, and admitted to court Oct. 5, 1756. He bequeathed to his oldest son (Col. Stephen) the handsome amount, in that day, of £1000, albeit Stephen was not yet of age. He testamentarily enjoined that his "son William and son Buckingham be brought up to learning in ye college at New Haven". William, for some reason, did not take up a collegiate course, but Buckingham was Yale connected in 1770, and was drowned in Long Island Sound whilst on a passage from New Haven to Norwalk, May 4, 1771.

who was son of Thomas Scudder[1st.] of L. I., the father of the Scudder family of America. Thomas.[1st.], great-grandfather of Isaac Scudder[1st.], is believed to have been the son of Dr. Henry Scudder who presided at the (1643) convention appointed by order of the King, at Westminister Abbey (see Munsell's History of Suffolk County, L. I.) Thomas Scudder[2d.] died in 1690, leaving sons and daughters. Benj.[1st.] was one of his two only sons. Benj.[1st.] died in 1736 leaving eight sons, two of whom, Isaac[1st.] and Ezekiel, settled in Norwalk. Isaac Scudder married Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph[1st.] and Sarah (Betts) St. John, and had :

Isaac.
Sarah. (Mrs. Benjamin Isaacs).
Elizabeth. (Married Aug. 27, 1776, Job Bartram).

Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Scudder, was the third wife of Job Bartram. Mr. Bartram married, first, Nov. 18, 1762, Jerusha Thompson, who died Nov. 23, 1773. The widower married, second, Nov. 7, 1774, Abigail Starr, and had Daniel Starr Bartram, born 1775, who was the father, among other children, of Helen, the late Mrs. Dr. Augustus Sammis of South Norwalk and New Haven. Mrs. Abigail Bartram died Jan. 14, 1776 and her husband married, third, Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac[1st.] and Elizabeth Scudder. The children of Job and Elizabeth (Scudder) Bartram were Isaac, born March 27, 1777, died next day; John, born Dec. 27, 1778, died Feb. 17, next; Isaac Scudder, born July 2, 1780, died Feb. 27, 1783; Eulalia, born Dec. 22, 1782 and Betsy, born July 10, 1785. Betsy died unmarried.

Eulalia, daughter of Job and Elizabeth Bartram married Rev. Henry Whitlock, Rector 1800-1811, of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk.

Dr. Henry Scudder, the eminent India Missionary descended from another branch of the same family from whence sprang the Norwalk Scudders.

[1]Hooker St. John's complete estate was distributed April 17, 1792, among his two surviving brothers, Stephen and William, and his sister Susannah (Mrs. Eliphalet Lockwood), each receiving an equal share. The value of the whole estate was nearly £2,000. He owned the wharf lot, still held in the Lockwood family, just east of Norwalk Bridge, which lot was valued in 1792, at £50.

In the burying ground at the head of the Ridgefield Street stands a tombstone bearing the following inscription:

"HERE LIES INTERRED
JAMES BENEDICT."

The tomb's tenant was born in, it is probable, the new John Benedict home of 1675, a few furlongs to the north of the Norwalk St. Paul's Church of 1896. This home at that day was in the Norwalk suburbs, a long distance from church and school, which may account for the lad's spending a goodly portion of his earlier days with his grandparent, the widow of Thomas Benedict, Sr., who lived close by both church and school. He had enjoyed, evidently, the tuition of an old Norwalk and Greenwich master, Thomas, son of Rev. Thomas Hanford, Sr., and at the age of twenty-three united with several of his grandparents Norwalk neighbors in purchasing from the Indian Catonah, the magnificent tract now known as Ridgefield. A twelve-month after this purchase he married into the family of one of the Norwalk braves who gallantly defended the colony against the red men, Sarah, daughter of Thomas Hyatt, and husband and bride at once identified themselves with the now Lenox of Connecticut, Ridgefield in this County, within the soil of which their ashes are urned.

The grandson of this worthy Norwalk-Ridgefield pair, Joel, a Nassau Hall man, afterward Rev. Joel Benedict, D. D., "a great man in Israel", was the father of Mrs. President Eliphalet Nott of Union College, N. Y., and the grandfather of the second wife of Rt. Rev. Dr. Alonzo Potter, Bishop of Pennsylvania. This estimable lady, Sarah, daughter of Esquire Robert Benedict of Richfield Springs, N. Y., was the step-mother of Rt. Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, and of his brother, Rev. Dr. Eliphalet N. Potter, late President of Hobart College, N. Y., (see page 133).

PRO PATRIA.

A little east of the outlet of the stream which spends itself in the salt water inlet heading where the Norwalk Tramway Co. finds, in 1896, its Stamford terminus at the foot of Noroton Hill, stood, on the highway, one hundred and sixteen years agone, the home of sufferers in the cause of American liberty. Phineas Waterbury and Elizabeth Lounsbury,[1] his wife, with a brave boy, Nathan, just out of his teens, and three or four younger brothers, and two or so sisters, made up the family. Norwalk had been burned, Rev. Moses Mather was captivity-doomed, the enemy well understood how to harass the shore dwellers, and the liberty and loyalty loving Waterbury's were in danger. The father was prisoner-destined, and the oldest boy, Nathan, served in the coast-guard. Night shrouded Shippan and settled over Noroton when the ear within caught the sound of discharging musketry and heard footstep-pattering along the King's road-way. Elizabeth's Nathan had fallen and was brought home dead. Thought may rank speech but feeling, elsewhere than in art, ranks both. In Elizabeth Waterbury's bleeding home honors at that awful hour were indeed laid low and hope had well nigh flown, but still "over against" her martyr-hearthstone Time's iron pen has deterringly written "Ichabod".

[1] Elizabeth Lounsbury (Mrs. Phineas Waterbury), daughter of Monmouth[2d] and Jemima Lounsbury, was of tall figure, very erect even in age, and although sprightly and cheerful, was of quiet, almost Quaker-like taste. Her home (north side of Connecticut turnpike, 1896, a short distance east of the Noroton cove and stream mentioned in the text), was the fond visiting spot of her daughter Mary (Mrs. Thos. Benedict[6th]), while her daughter Sarah (mother of the late Isaac Selleck, Sr. of East Norwalk) graphically told of its maternal head. Phineas, born Feb. 18, 1773, a younger brother of Mary and Sarah, was for a time connected with a New York ship-yard; while Noah, born Aug. 2, 1775, and a lad of some six or seven when his brother Nathan was killed, was first a Southern sailing-master, and afterwards became a man of means, and a founder of families of distinction to-day. He married a widow lady, whose son, Wm. McKin-

Mary, the fifteen summer's child when Nathan was shot, lived to tell of her mother's daring during said Mary's long age-tarry with her daughter, the faithful Catharine Benedict, of the old Benedict home which was planted on the West Avenue of 1896. The sister of Mary—Sarah—was the grandmother of the recent "Selleck Brothers" (Isaac, Geo. W., Henry S., a firm of Norwalk business repute) and Frank, and great-grandmother of the late young Clarence (son of Geo. W.) Selleck, whose art sketches and published letters while abroad were indicative of present attainment, and argued much of promise for the future.

Noah, a younger child of Elizabeth, and brother of Nathan Waterbury, has descendants, in 1896, who are commercially, civilly and socially metropolis-prominent; while Mrs. Rev. Henry S. Barnum,[1] a grand-niece whose life is nobly spent among the Constantinople Christians, and the legal Theodore and S. H. Fitch of Broadway, N. Y., as well as Hon. Phineas C. Lounsbury[2] and his brother George E., of unimpeachable integrity, and the 1898 Connecticut Commonwealth Governor-elect, are of the same Lounsbury progenitor's blood.

ney, was a midshipman with Commodore Lawrence when the hero bade, in death, his men to stand by The Chesapeake. Lawrence Waterbury, son of Noah, started the great Long Island Cordage Establishment, which is headed to-day by his son, James M. Waterbury, whose home is at one of the choicest East River and Long Island Sound residential sites—Throgg's Neck.

Among the noticable Norwalk-kept war and other relics are the parchment commission executed by Gov. Thomas Fitch to Lieut. David Waterbury, born Feb. 12, 1722, son of John and Susanna (Newkirk) Waterbury, and which, singular to say, was accidentally found in a small trunk of papers belonging to a West Avenue, 1896, Benedict descendant; and also a musket (Damascus barrel) which was the property of midshipman William McKinney (step-son to Noah, son of Phineas and Elizabeth (Lounsbury) Waterbury), which said midshipman (afterward U. S. Navy officer) McKinney presented to Thomas Benedict7th., and which has now fallen to Thomas Benedict9th., of the New York Sub-Treasury. So highly was this piece valued by its first Benedict owner that he had a small closet made, over the fire-place, in his welcome home-seat at the ancient "Tide Mill" (now architect Randall's East Norwalk water-side residence) as a receptacle for the rare piece, which is known as "Old Algerine".

[1]Elizabeth Lounsbury, born Sept. 6, 1746, or perhaps more correctly June 2, 1745, had a brother Monmouth2d., born July 31, 1748, who married, April 8, 1770, Sarah Davenport. Monmouth2d. and Sarah Lounsbury had John Davenport Lounsbury, born May 5, 1792, who was of the old-time Winnipauk Mills firm of Lounsbury, Bissell & Co.

[2]Nathan Lounsbury2d. (father of ex-Governor Phineas C. and Governor-elect (1898) George E. Lounsbury, and also of their three sisters, Matilda (Mrs. Francis E. Quintard), Sarah, and Ann Eliza (Mrs. Joel Rockwell of Ridgefield), and brother Wil-

JARVIS KELLOGG LINEAGE.

Gen. I.—Daniel[1st.] and Bridget (Bouton) Kellogg.
" II.—Daniel[2d.].
" III.—Daniel[3d.] and Eunice Kellogg.
" IV.—Jarvis Kellogg[1st.], born 1731.

Jarvis[1st.] (son of Daniel[3d.] and Eunice Kellogg), married, first, June 10, 1760, Elizabeth Smith, and is supposed to have built the ancient house, still standing, on the northeast corner of upper Main Street and the Winnipauk road. He is thought to have twice married. His children, however, by his first wife, were Sarah and Jarvis[2d.]. Jarvis[2d.], born April 20, 1767; married, Feb. 19, 1792, Mercie,[1] born June 12, 1770, daughter of James and Sarah (Weed) Selleck, and had James Selleck, born Nov. 19, 1792; Sally, born Dec. 3, 1794, died young; Sarah, born July 19, 1796 (Mrs. Joseph Scribner[1st.]); Charles, born June 17, 1800; Lucia, born May 28, 1803 (Mrs. Stephen Stanley); Martin, born July 3, 1808; Charlotte, born Feb. 15, 1811 (Mrs. Linus St. J. Benedict). Some of these children were, it is probable, born in the 1896 John Henry Aiken Main Street home, which was built and occupied by Jarvis Kellogg[2d.]. Of the sons, Charles established his home, still in the family, near the "New Canaan Bridge", and Martin resided a little west of the present northwest corner of Main Street and Center Avenue.

A KELLOGG-JAMES DESCENT.

Hard by where serpentine-wound the Canaan Indian way, denominated from of old, "Ponasses-path", and some two miles northwest of the ancient Whitney Mill (corner of Main and Wall Street, 1896), stood the old-time home of Epenetus Kellogg[2d.] (son of Epenetus[1st.] and Jemima (Rogers) Kellogg). The domicile remained, browned, bent and bowed by very age. Here was born the owner's little daughter Anna, who first saw the light during the autumn before the Norwalk Tryon invasion (Nov. 28, 1778). Anna Kellogg had recently passed her twentieth birthday when her hand in matrimony was sought by a captain in the Southern marine service, Daniel, born Sept. 10, 1773, the third son of Peter and Mercy James. On Jan. 18, 1798, Daniel and Anna were married, and established a home near the commercial center, at that time, of Norwalk.[2] This home, on [1] Mrs. Jarvis Kellogg[2d.] (Mercie Selleck) was the daughter of James Selleck, born 1742, who was son of David and Mercie (Waterbury) Selleck. Her father, David Selleck, born Dec. 23, 1700, was son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck. Nathaniel Selleck, born April 7, 1678, was son of John and Sarah (Law) Selleck, which John Selleck, born Feb. 21, 1643, was son of David and Susannah Selleck the settlers. Hannah, born June 26, 1776, sister of Mrs. Jarvis Kellogg[2d.], married William, son of Eliphalet and Susanna Lockwood, and father of the late William S. Lockwood of North Avenue, Norwalk.

James Selleck, father of Mrs. Jarvis Kellogg[2d.], married Sarah, born 1746, daughter of David, Jr. and Mary (Waterbury) Weed.

[2] Ruth, born 1762, older sister of Captain Daniel James, married Stephen, born 1761, son of John[3d.] and Elizabeth (St. John) Abbott. These had two daughters, Elizabeth, born 1787, who married Matthew Middlebrook of Wilton, and Cynthia, who married David Comstock of Norwalk, whose daughter Sarah is the present widow of Samuel Comstock[2d.] of the Comstock New Canaan farm (see page 346). John Abbott[3d.] was son of John[2d.] and Emma (Judd) Abbott.

On Christmas day, 1760, Isaac, son of David and Ruth (Lockwood) Hoyt, and grandson of Caleb and and had James[3rd], Polly (Mrs. Hale), Sarah (Mrs. Anthony Delaney), William, and Rebecca (Mrs. Horace Taylor).[1]

James Quintard[2nd] married, second, Sally Hilliard of Redding and had Charles Morris, Jane, Henry Harrison, Maria, and, as it seems, Morris.

James Quintard[3rd], born October 12, 1786, married, May 28, 1807, Sally, born February 12, 1787, daughter of Henry and Deborah (Hoyt) Chichester, and had:

Margaret, born May 4, 1813, died unmarried;
James A., born December 18, 1814;
Walter C., born January 14, 1816;
Lucretia, died unmarried;
Francis E.;
Mary Amelia, Mrs. Samuel D. Smith;[3]
Sarah Deborah, Mrs. George Selleck;[4]
Harriett E., died young.

James A., son of James Quintard[3rd], married, November 16, 1834, Eunice B. Hoyt.[5]

Walter C., son of James Quintard[3rd], married, March 19, 1857, Sarah C. Smith of Ridgefield, and had:

Theodore Francis, died unmarried;
Emma Louise, Mrs. Robert Baxter.

that time in "Old Well." Its sign, which was suspended from a bracket over the front door, enjoined:

Since man to man is so unjust,
You cannot tell what man to trust.
I've trusted many to my sorrow,
So pay to-day and trust to-morrow.

There was a broad open space in Mr. Quintard's day on the south side of Marshall Street. Absalom Day built a pottery not far from the east end of said street, and just south of the present Consolidated tracks. James Quintard[3rd] son of James[2nd], resided where now stands the residence of E. A. Woodward, and his dwelling was one of the fine modelled homes of that day. Opposite this house (Pardee residence of 1896) lived the father of the late Gould Benedict, for so many years the faithful South Norwalk station agent of the Consolidated road. James Quintard[3rd] was engaged in the pottery business on the site of the 1896 Hatch, Bailey & Co. establishment, having Henry Chichester[1st] as a partner.

[1]Horace, son of John Taylor of Ridgebury, Conn., married Rebecca, daughter of James Quintard[2nd], and had:

Adeline Sabra, Mrs. George W. Merrian;
Frances Louise, died in infancy;
William Starr, born May 28, 1829, of Utica, New York;
Sarah Louisa, died young;
James Najah;
Julia Augusta, born 1835, died young;
Julia Bellamy, Mrs. Sylvester Van Hooscar;
Georgiana W., unmarried;
Rebecca W., unmarried.

James Najah Taylor married Nannie Hobbie. After Mr. Taylor's decease the widow married, as his second wife, Charles Olmstead, formerly postmaster of Norwalk. Sylvester Van Hooscar was a recent active merchant of Norwalk (firm of Van Hooscar & Ambler). He was the son of David and Parmelia (Grumman) Van Hooscar of Wilton, Conn. He died October 29, 1884, leaving no children.

[2]Orestes P. Quintard married April 20, 1840, Jane M. Bennett, and removed from Norwalk.

[3]The children of Samuel D. Smith were Howard D. and Mary Quintard.

[4]The children of George and Sarah D. Selleck were Lottie Virginia, born June 5, 1854 (Mrs. William Moore), and Elizabeth Lucretia (unmarried).

[5]The children of James A. and Eunice B. Quintard were Harriet Virginia, born May 19, 1836 (Mrs. George Mead), Oliver Perry, born October 26, 1838 (died young), Vannetta, born June 26, 1852 (unmarried).

THE SMITH RIDGE AND RIDGEFIELD SMITHS.

Samuel Smith[1st], who married Rachel, daughter of Matthew Marvin[1st], (see pages 150 and 177) had Rachel (Mrs. Thomas Benedict), Lydia (Mrs. James Lockwood), Sarah, Hannah, Samuel[2nd] and Nehemiah[1st]. Samuel Smith[1st] was brother of Joseph (page 431).

Samuel Smith[2nd] married, June 13, 1711, Sarah, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Whitney and had Samuel[3rd], Sarah (Mrs. Nathan Olmsted), Rachel (Mrs. James Northrop), and Patience (Mrs. Benjamin Hoyt), all of Ridgefield.

Nehemiah Smith[1st], brother of Samuel[2nd], married Elizabeth, daughter of Peter Clapham and had Nehemiah[2nd], (not found excepting that his daughter Mary married Thaddeus Seymour), Peter[1st], Matthew[1st], Daniel[1st], Elizabeth[1st], (Mrs. Lieutenant Samuel Street), Rachel[2nd] (Mrs. Ebenezer Street), Rebeccah (Mrs. John Hanford), Lydia Ann (Mrs. Josiah Burr), and Joseph.

Mrs. Nehemiah Smith[1st] (Elizabeth Clapham), married, second, Thomas Talmadge of Stamford.

The mother of Mrs. Nehemiah Smith[1st], was Isabella, daughter of John and Ann Barlow of Fairfield.

The children of Peter and Isabella Clapham were Elizabeth (Mrs. Nehemiah Smith), Rebeccah (Mrs. Nathan Adams, Jr.), Mary (Mrs. Thomas Marvin).

"Smith Hills" was a district near "Bear Swamp" in Poplar Plains. Bear Swamp is traversed by the Newtown Turnpike.

The descent of Peter[1st], son of Nehemiah[1st], is traced on page 178. Matthew Smith[1st], son of Nemiah[1st], owned the fine old style H. M. Prowitt beautifully kept house and grounds in East Norwalk (1895). He left these to his nephew Matthew (son of his brother Peter Smith[1st],) which nephew parted with the property or a portion of it, to Josiah Hanford Fitch, the father of the late Mrs. Samuel Daskam of East Norwalk.

From Samuel Smith[1st], descended the Smith families of Smith's Ridge and Ridgefield.

SELLECK.

This Stamford-Norwalk family is of ancient pedigree. By tradition it originated in Wales. The name is Cornish-British, which is a dialect of the Celtic, Belgic or Cambrian formerly spoken throughout Cornwall. The etymology of the proper noun Selleck is "in open view," conspicuous, and its mention is found as early as A. D. 1086.

Along the seventeenth century are records of Sellecks in positions of influence. John Selyocke about that period "declined knighthood." In the deed of Galdon Manor Robert Selleck is mentioned as a "trustie and well beloved friend," and John Selioke, father and son, were Mayors of St. Albans 1681 1700, while "Selleck on the Wye" is a beautiful village.

In the roll of early New England settlers occurs in 1640 the name of David Selleck. It is claimed that the first provision for a free school in the western world, by direct tax, was made in Dorchester, Mass., in 1639. David Selleck, before referred to, was one of the subscribers to a petition to that effect. David and Susannah Selleck, his wife, were members of the 1641 First Church of Boston, and the births of their children are recorded in that ancient town. Among the antiquities of Boston is found the "David Selleck home lot description." Mr. Selleck was engaged in trade between the Colonies and the Barbadoes. He died while on an expedition, in 1654, to Virginia. His two sons, Jonathan and John, came to Stamford in 1660. They there married sisters, daughters of Hon. Richard Law, the first civilian among the Stamford settlers, and one of the "first gentlemen in the Colony." Jonathan Selleck was one of the leading men of the period (see Colonial histories of New York and Connecticut). His son Jonathan[2nd] shared his father's civil and military renown, and his son John was the first Fairfield county graduate of Harvard College.

John Selleck[1st], brother of Jonathan[1st], married a daughter of Hon. Richard Law. He became a wealthy ship owner and captain, and was extensively known in early days. He was taken prisoner by the French (on one of his ocean trips), in May, 1689, but his estate, which was large, was not settled until 1708. He left one only son, Nathaniel, who married Sarah, daughter of Gershom and Anne (Millington) Lockwood of Greenwich. From these two has been a descent "which has been largely characterized by the qualities of honor, courage and loyalty; a God fearing, will making, debt-paying people."

CHILDREN OF DAVID[1st] AND SUSANNAH SELLECK.

David[2nd], born October 11, 1638, went to the Barbadoes;
Jonathan[1st], born March 20, 1641, came to Stamford;
John[1st], born February 2, 1643, came to Stamford;
Nathaniel[1st], born July 18, 1645, no Norwalk descent;
Joanna, born December 11, 1647;
Elizabeth, born February 1, 1651;
A daughter Susannah, died September 10, 1653.
David Selleck[1] died in Virginia in 1654.

Jonathan[1st] and John[1st], sons of David and Susannah Selleck, came as young men to Stamford in about 1660. Jonathan[1st] married Abigail, daughter of Richard Law, and John Selleck[1st] married Sarah Law, a sister of the wife of his brother Jonathan Selleck[1st].

Hon. Richard Law, the father of the Mrs. Jonathan[1st] and John[1st] Selleck is denominated by one historian a most important Colonial personage. He was the Scribe of the Colony, and because of his legal lore the "Counsellor and Adviser of the community." He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Kilbourne[1] of Wethersfield, and removed to Stamford, where their home was one of the most honored of the Colony, and the family furnished names that gave a lustre to the State, whose highest civil and judicial seats its members filled.

[1]Thomas Kilbourne was born in the parish of Wood Ditton in Cambridge, England, A. D. 1578, where he was baptized May 8 of that year. With his wife Frances, and a portion of his family, he embarked April 15, 1635, from London for New England in the ship Increase. He settled at Wethersfield, Conn., and died previous to 1659. His wife's will was made November 3, 1650, and inventoried December 3, 1650.

Margaret (Mrs. Richard Law) daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilbourne, was born in Wood Ditton, England, in A. D. 1607, and baptized September 23rd of that year. She was married to Hon. Richard Law soon after the New England arrival of the Law family.

Mrs. Law died before her husband. He made his will March 12, 1687, in which "he divides lands to his daughters, the two Mrs. Sellecks, so that they may have each a half as much as the son; for which, he says, the word of God is clear and good reason for it, and why any Christian man that loveth righteousness and equity should be against it he sees not."

DESCENT FROM THE SELLECK BROTHERS JONATHAN[1st] AND JOHN[1st].

JONATHAN[1st].

Jonathan[1st], son of David[1st] and Susannah Selleck, married, May 11, 1663, Abigail, daughter of Richard and Margaret (Kilbourne) Law, and had:

Jonathan[2nd], born July 11, 1663;

David, born January 27, 1666, probably died young;

John, died young.

Jonathan[2nd], oldest child of Jonathan[1st] and Abigail (Law) Selleck, married, January 5, 1685, Abigail, daughter of Major Nathan Gold of Fairfield.

Major Nathan Gold[1st] came from St. Edmondsbury, South Britain, to Fairfield. He was an educated, opulent gentleman and a foremost man in the government of the Connecticut Colony. His children were Nathan[2nd], Sarah (Mrs. John Thompson), Deborah (Mrs. George Clark), Abigail (Mrs. Jonathan Selleck[2nd]), Martha (Mrs. John Selleck first, and second, Mrs. Rev. John Davenport). Nathan Gold[1st] died on Sunday, March 4, 1693–4.

CHILDREN OF JONATHAN[2nd] AND ABIGAIL (GOLD) SELLECK.

Nathan[1st], born September 12, 1686;

Abigail born April 3, 1688;

Jonthan[3rd], unmarried;

Theophila, born February 11, 1694, Mrs. Samuel Pennoyer;

John Gold, unmarried;

Abigail, born February 15, 1707, Mrs. Ebenezer Silliman.[1]

As Nathan[1st] was the only son of Jonathan[2nd] and Abigail (Gold) Selleck, who married, it follows that the said Nathan became the ancestor of those of Selleck name who descended from Major Jonathan Selleck[1st], one of the two brothers who came from Boston to Stamford in about 1660.

Nathan Selleck[1st] married, August 12, 1708, Susannah, only child of Mr. William Hooker of Farmington (see page 327), and had:

Susannah, born September 3, 1709, Mrs. Joseph St. John.

Nathan Selleck[1st] married, second, December, 1710, Mary, daughter of Captain John

[1]Hon. Ebenezer Silliman, baptized September 21, 1707, was a son of Robert and Sarah (Hull) Silliman, of Fairfield, and a grandson of Daniel Silliman, the Fairfield pioneer Silliman who, tradition claims, came from Holland. The marriage of this eminent Colonist, Hon. Ebenezer Silliman, to Abigail Selleck, took place October 8, 1728, the fruit of the union being Gold Selleck, born 1732, Ebenezer, Jr., born 1734, Amelia Gold, born 1736, Hezekiah, born 1739, Jonathan, born 1742, Abigail, born 1748, and Deodate, born 1749. These all overlived their parents several years, being interested, the year Norwalk was burned, in the division of the Lieutenant Jonathan Selleck estate made in Stamford April 3, 1779. Gold Selleck Silliman (General), the oldest son, married, January 21, 1754, Martha, daughter of Deodate and Lydia (Woodward) Davenport of East Haven, and granddaughter of Madame Davenport, nee Martha Gold. The first Mrs. General Gold Selleck Silliman died August 1, 1774, and the General married, second, May 24, 1775, Mary, daughter of Rev. Joseph and Rebecca (Peabody) Fish of Stonington, and widow of Rev. John Noyes of New Haven. By this union there was Benjamin Silliman, who became the renowned "Professor Silliman" of Yale College, who died, after more than a half century's illustrious connection with that seat of learning, November 24, 1864, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. (See page 198.) The Sillimans of New Canaan are of the old Fairfield stock.

Sands of Long Island, who died July 13, 1712. Her husband, Nathan Selleck[1st], married, third, Sarah, daughter of Captain Samuel Sands and cousin of Mr. Selleck's second wife. The issue by said Selleck's last wife was:

Sands[1st], born April, 1714;
Silas, born June, 1715;
Mary, born October 1, 1717, Mrs. Jacob Warren;
Jonathan, born October 1, 1720;
Sarah, born August 12, 1723, Mrs. Nathaniel Selleck;
Nathan[2nd], born September 15, 1726;
Samuel, born January 10, 1728, died young;
Gold John, born January 10, 1730;
Silvanus, born September 1, 1734.

Sands[1st], son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, August 10, 1742, Mary Raymond, and had:

Simeon[1st], born August 14, 1743, died an infant;
Simeon[2nd], born September 18, 1744;[1]
Jesse, born January 19, 1746;[2]
Sands[2nd], born May 19, 1751;
Raymond, born June 26, 1752;
Samuel, born July 17, 1755[3];
Anna, born February 28, 1759, Mrs. Benjamin Belden;
Henry, died young;
Stephen, died young.

Silas[1st], son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, January 12, 1738, Elizabeth Ferris, and had:

Silas[2nd], born October 29, 1740;
Sarah, born August 19, 1741.

Silas Selleck[1st] died December, 1772.

Sarah, daughter of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, August 7, 1744, Nathaniel, son of David and Mercy (Waterbury) Selleck, and had:

Uriah[1st], baptized January 21, 1761, died young;
Ray, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Mercy, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Sarah, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Nathaniel, baptized 1761 by Dr. Mather;
Uriah[2nd], baptized October 31, 1762. 3.

[1]Married, February 28, 1771, Mary Belden of Stamford. Had Betsey, Polly, Benjamin and Anne. These children and their parents belonged in Stamford rather than in Norwalk.

[2]Married, January 26, 1786, Elizabeth Howe and had James, born April 22, 1787, Catharine, born December 11, 1789, Eliza, born August 10, 1792, Sands, born January 13, 1796, Henry Raymond, born May 21, 1798.

[3]Married, August 1, 1779, Hannah Smith, and had nine children, the two youngest of whom, Angeline, born September 4, 1796, and Caroline, born March 8, 1802, lived until recently at the Ring's End Landing (Darien) homestead there established by their father.

Nathan[2nd], son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, September 17, 1745, Catharine, daughter of John Clark of Stamford, and had:

Deborah, Mrs. Amos Roberts;

Phebe, Mrs. Thomas Comstock;

Catharine, Mrs. Wyy Seeley, died July 4, 1813;[1]

Edward.

Gold John, son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married Jane and had:

A child, no name found;

Gold John, baptized November, 1772.

Mrs. Gold John Selleck (Jane) married, second, December 23, 1773, Benjamin Betts of Norwalk.

Silvanus, son of Nathan[1st] and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, married, March 2, 1768, Tabitha ——— of Stratford, and had:

Molly, baptized November 17, 1772, Mrs. Captain Stephen Raymond of Norwalk.

Betty, baptized November 17, 1772.

Mrs. Silvanus Selleck married, second, June 21, 1774, Daniel Lockwood.

JOHN SELLECK[1st].

Captain John Selleck[1st], son of David[1st] and Susannah Selleck, married, October 25, 1669, Sarah, daughter of Hon. Richard and Margaret (Kilbourne) Law, and had:

Sarah, born August 22, 1670, Mrs. John Potter;

David born, December 27, 1672, probably unmarried;

Nathaniel[2nd], born April 7, 1678;

John, born June 7, 1681, unmarried;

Susannah, born February 2, 1683, Mrs. John Holly;

Johanna, born May 31, 1686, Mrs. Jonathan Bates.

Nathaniel[2nd], son of Capt. John[1st] and Sarah (Law) Selleck, married, January 25, 1700, Sarah, born 1678, daughter of Jonathan[1st] and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood, and had:

David, born December 23, 1700;

Sarah, born August 14, 1702;

Nathaniel[3rd], born October 9, 1704;

John, born January 3, 1706;

Martha, born April 19, 1710, died young;

Ebenezer, born March 20, 1712, died in infancy.

Nathaniel Selleck died August 14, 1712, and his widow married Deacon Benjamin Hickox (see pages 272, 281, and 318).

David, son of Nathaniel[2nd] and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, married, January 23, 1723, Mercy, daughter of David Waterbury, and had:

[1] Wyy and Catharine (Selleck) Seeley had six children. Their oldest daughter Mary, born November 10, 1791, married Kilbourne Selleck and was the venerable personage, who neatly kept up her Darien home near the Selleck woods through which electric cars now make their way from Norwalk to Stamford.

[No. See p. 437, also Se 63, p. 60]

David, born April 1, 1724;[1]
Nathaniel[4th], born October 29, 1725, see "Uriah Selleck descent," page 446;
Ebenezer, born December 18, 1727;
Gershom, born July 10, 1730;[2]
Ezra, born February 19, 1732;
Samuel, born February 1, 1734;[3]
Thaddeus, born 1736;
James, born 1742;[4]

[1]David, son of David[1st] and Mercy Selleck, married, January 8, 1750, Sarah Bates, and had:
Lydia, born October 23, 1754;
Hannah, born February 18, 1758;
David, baptized March 11, 1762;
Mary, baptized October 10, 1765;
Charles, baptized July 20, 1766.

This youngest son Charles, married Hannah, daughter of Rev. Dr. Moses Mather. The wedding occurred June 2, 1796 and was followed by the birth of eleven children, the oldest of whom, David, baptized by his grandfather, Dr. Mather, June 15, 1797, became the remembered David Selleck of West Norwalk, who died in 1876, leaving a son, David R., born November 14, 1822 and a daughter, Frances Albena, born October 6, 1824. The household was a worthy one.

[2]Gershom Selleck married Pruella Gounn and had Charlotte, who baptized May 29, 1763, married June 3, 1784, Stephen, son of Bushnell and Abigail (Reed) Fitch, and had Abbey, Chauncey, Frank B., William, and Benjamin (Hon.). This last son was the founder of Fitch's Home for Soldiers in Darien. His mother, Mrs. Charlotte (Selleck) Fitch, is described as having been a woman of much personal beauty, and of tried and noble character (page 200).

[3]Samuel, son of David and Mercy Selleck, was born, as per note page 200, and his life was given to his country. He married, March 28, 1758, Hannah, daughter of David and Mary (Waterbury) Weed, and had Samuel, David, Hannah, Mary and Ebenezer, which last child was only two years old when his brave father perished in the prison ship in 1776. The young Ebenezer married Emilea, born 1776, daughter of Benjamin and Martha (Youngs) Cheshire of Long Island, and had Mary W., Hannah, Benjamin, and Ebenezer[2nd], who died in infancy. Mr. Ebenezer Selleck married, second, October 10, 1826, Mary, daughter of Holly and Martha (Pease) Lynes, and had:
Rebecca, born October 22, 1831;
Ebenezer, born June 9, 1834.

Rebecca, daughter of Ebenezer and Mary Selleck, is acquaintance-valued in Norwalk. She has devoted much time to the work of record tracing and has been quite successful. Her only brother, Ebenezer, Jr., resides in the south. The old Ebenezer Selleck home in Westchester County was a coveted site.

[4]James, son of David and Mercy Selleck, married Sarah Weed (page 293), sister of his brother Samuel's wife, and had James, born January 2, 1764, Hezekiah, born January 14, 1766, Sarah, born April 8, 1768, Mercy, born June 12, 1770, William, born July 11, 1773, Hannah, born June 26, 1776, David, born June 1, 1779, Mary, born August 29, 1781, and Charlotte, born April 23, 1784. Of these children Mercy married Jarvis Kellogg (page 375), Hannah married as his first wife William, son of Eliphalet and Susannah (St. John) Lockwood (page 293). William Lockwood's second wife was the widow of Orange Webb, Jr. (page 401), who was a stately lady and of commanding presence. Emerging with her daughter from the Lockwood residence to pay a visit one summer evening to the family of her husband's brother, Colonel Buckingham St. John Lockwood, she was observed by the Colonel's children (the parents were in Greenwich, and the daughters had made an evening party to help pleasantly pass their father's and and mother's absence) approaching the home. The young people, who had converted the parlor into a room for temporary diversion, felt that it was not in proper shape to receive their aunt and friend, and hastened consequently to place-restore the furniture, adornments, etc., ere their courtly relative arrived.

Orange Webb, Jr., the first husband of the second Mrs Wm. Lockwood, was a great grandson of Henry, who was a grandson of Richard Webb., Jr., tentatively, perhaps, of Norwalk. Richard Webb, Sr., was a Norwalk resident whose home lot, after Mr. Webb's day, adjoined that of the Roger's (see page 39) in connection with which fact a Fairfield County Rogers-Watson-Webb mention is interesting. Moses Rogers, grandson of James Rogers of home lot XI, as per page 39, lived at No. 7 State Street, Battery Park, New York. At No. 6 State Street (next door to to Moses Roger's, there being no dwellings opposite) resided James Watson, originally of Wethersfield, Conn., but now a successful city merchant. Mr. Watson was a devoted friend of Moses Roger's son-in-law, Samuel Miles Hopkins, a young man of remarkable power and promise, and the father of the Mercy, baptized July 2, 1750.

1896 Colonel Woolsey R. Hopkins (see page 171) of Shippan Point, Stamford. Another ardent Watson friend was Colonel Samuel Blachley Webb (see page 400). Colonel Webb, who as the Revolution was rising, raised a company in Connecticut, desired to make Watson an officer, but was in some way prevented, and the aspiring Watson went afterward to New York. Mr. Watson had a son, James Watson, Jr., and an adopted daughter who married Judge Williams and had a son, James Watson Williams, a prominent lawyer of Utica, N. Y. James Watson, Jr., a brilliant youth, was drowned at the Battery, New York, on one of the loveliest of winter days, and in the presence of a fashionable throng which, because of the balmy air, was parading in that handsome early park. His father's friend, Colonel Webb, went also to the city after the war, where General Washington, who, it is claimed, was fond of young men, became much attached to Webb. The intimacy between James Watson and Webb and Hopkins was so peculiar that General Webb named a son for the first who became the famous James Watson Webb of the New York Courier and Enquirer (see page 401), while Hopkins exchanged portraits with Mr. Watson. Jonathan Trumbull was the artist employed, and his likeness of Mr. Watson (which now adorns a Fairfield County mansion) is masterful. Mr. Watson had a painting of Mr. Hopkins, but this has been lost.

Both friends of James Watson, General Samuel Blachley Webb and Hon. Samuel Miles Hopkins, were Norwalk family-associated and left remarkable memories. The name of Webb is still Norwalk preserved and an old inmate of the household of the parents of Mrs. Samuel M. Hopkins lives (1899) at the great age of 102 years to tell of the "splendid black team" driven by Mr. Rogers and of the Shippan "niceties" even to the dairy shelves which were of marble. This venerable woman is the mother of Capt. Cyrus Crabbe of the Norwalk and New York Steam Navigation Service.

The letter of Chief Justice Tapping Reeve, head of the Litchfield Law School, introducing the Yale graduate, Samuel M. Hopkins, to the acquaintance of Aaron Burr; the warm reception of the same talented young man into the family of James Watson and his residence at No. 6 State Street; the Hopkins survey of the great Shenandoah tract and the intrusting of the European sale of the same to Hopkins by Watson; the mock Colonels Webb-Livingston duel; the pathetic wiping-out through the ice on the Battery beach of the James Watson blood on the occasion of the tragic life-end of his only son; the Captain Moses Webb granddaughter's bridal in a cottage still standing on Norwalk's ancient Indian trail; the Margery Webb marriage August 10, 1716, to Joseph, nephew of Ephraim Lockwood, the Norwalk settler and the proprietorship of Margery's mother's kin to a hundred acre slice (boundary to-day pointed out) of the Stamford Shippan; the overland Moses Rogers family coach trips to Connecticut from No. 7 State Street at the Battery, starting at early morn, reaching the Jay home at Rye at noon, and driving along the splendid Shippan Avenue as night-fall approached; the double (Rogers-Isaacs) Norwalk connection with the families of the business house of Woolsey & Woolsey—father and son—who had in their employ a young German whose reply to their "good morning, Peter," was a respectful return salutation, and who grew to become the Peter Moller of sugar refinery fame, all these are local mentions the reference to which may be looked upon as in some sort a posterity reminiscence-due.

James Selleck, brother of Hannah (the first Mrs. William Lockwood), married, November 17, 1791, Sally Gilbert of Salem, and had, among five other children, Hannah, born February 28, 1803, the beloved partner (first wife) of Lewis Richards, M. D., of New Canaan. Mrs. Dr. Richards' sister Sarah, born April 8, 1799, was the wife of Peter Smith of Smith's Ridge, New Canaan. The New Canaan Dr. Richards' residence is now the bough shaded Bond home of that town, and the Peter Smith acreage lays a little west of the spreading "Maple Farm" of Mrs. Stephen Keeler of the same town.

[1]Jacob Selleck[1st], son of David and Mercy Selleck, lived on Carter Street, New Canaan. He married, April 10, 1764, Hannah Fitch, and had Sarah. The first Mrs. Jacob Selleck died February 10, 1765, and Mr. Selleck married, second, May 2, 1776, Sarah, daughter of Theophilus Fitch. There were by this union Hannah (Mrs. Daniel Hunt), Jacob[2nd], Anna (Mrs. Drake Pennoyer), Lydia (Mrs. Avery), Polly (Mrs. Samuel Raymond), and Samuel.

Sarah, daughter of Jacob Selleck by his first wife, married Abraham Weed of New Canaan.

Samuel, born May 24, 1791, son of Jacob[1st] and Sarah Selleck, married January 20, 1818. Ann born January 15, 1794, daughter of Isaac DeForest. Mr. Selleck lived at White Oak Shade, New Canaan (Holly Hanford Place) and had Caroline, born October 20,

Nathaniel[3rd], son of Nathaniel[2nd] and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, married, June 30, 1726, Mary De Mill, and had:

Mary;
Peter, born May 2, 1729;
Sarah, born March 12, 1731;
Elizabeth, born January 3, 1733;
Abraham, born December 3, 1735;
Catharine, born March 28, 1739;
Anthony;
Hannah.

John, son of Nathaniel[2nd] and Sarah (Lockwood) Selleck, married, November 5, 1729, Abigail, daughter of John and Sarah (Gregory) Seymour of Norwalk, and had:

John, born August 18, 1730;
Bethel, born March 27, 1732;
Seymour, born March 1, 1734;
Abigail, born May 12, 1736;
Martha, born February 6, 1739;
Mercy, born October 9, 1740.

LOCKWOOD—SELLECK.

Sarah, born 1678, daughter of Jonathan[1st] and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood, and granddaughter of Robert Lockwood the settler, married, January 25, 1700, Nathaniel[2nd], born April 7, 1678, son of John and Sarah (Law) Selleck, and had:

Nathaniel[3rd], born October 9, 1704.

Nathaniel Selleck[2nd] died August 14, 1712, and his widow married, second, Benjamin Hickox, and third, Samuel Kellogg (see pages 272, 273, 317, 318).

Nathaniel Selleck[3rd] married, June 30, 1726, Mary DeMill of Stamford and had Mary, Peter, Sarah, Elizabeth, Abraham[1st], Catharine, Anthony and Hannah. Of these children Abraham[1st], born December 3, 1735, married, first, May 3, 1756, Deborah, born October 24, 1734, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Beachgood) Whiting, and had Abraham[2nd], born December 13, 1750; Nathan, born May 26, 1759, and Charles, born December 9, 1760.

The first Mrs. Abraham Selleck, died April 11, 1761, and her husband married, second, and had Nancy, born April 10, 1763; Edward, born November 19, 1764; Anthony, born May 9, 1766; Isaac[1st], born January 22, 1768; William, born October 6, 1769; Nancy[2nd], born December 19, 1771, and Sarah, born July 3, 1773.

1819, Charlotte born May 24, 1821, Herman born December 11, 1823, George born January 13, 1825, Charles and Julia, twins, born June 25, 1828, Mary born August 9, 1830 and Benjamin born July 26, 1832. The two brothers, Jacob[2nd] and Samuel Selleck, received by inheritance the homestead of their father which at the decease of Jacob[2nd] was divided among the heirs. It was then purchased by Capt. Stephen Hoyt who gave up mercantile business, and established upon the Jacob Selleck property (Shaker Farm) the now far known "Hoyt Nursery" of the town of New Canaan. Capt. Stephen Hoyt and his truly excellent wife are deceased but their enterprising sons Hons. James and Edwin Hoyt carry on a business which has assumed large proportions. Their establishment is on Carter Street.

Nathan, son of Abraham Selleck[1st] by his first wife, married three times. By his first wife he had Jonathan and Sidney. Jonathan married first a Barnes and had seven children.[1] He married, second, Sally Esther, widow of Benjamin Hoyt, and daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Waterbury) Keeler (page 124), and had Frances A. (Mrs. Samuel C. Waterbury),[2] and James K.

James K., son of Jonathan and Sally Selleck, married, first, Semantha, daughter of Peter and Sophia (Thompson) Bontecou of Troy, N. Y., and had Reed B., died young; Frederick D.;[3] Charles B.;[4] James K.; Wilson W.; Clara F. (Mrs. James H. Bailey):[5] Florence T. (Mrs. William Martin); Josephine K., died young; Eugenia, died young; Jonathan H.

Sally E. (Mrs. Benjamin Hoyt) Keeler, afterward Mrs. Jonathan Selleck, had a daughter Elizabeth, who married George Weed of North Stamford and had Mary Esther (Mrs. Harvey Smith of Stamford).

Nathan Selleck had by his second wife George, Henry and Riley. George married, December 1, 1819, Mehitable, who was a daughter of Bouton Hoyt of New Canaan, and had Mehitable H. (Mrs. James H. Marvin first, and, second, Mrs. O. P. Riggs; no children by either marriage). Henry, brother of George, married Mary Ann, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Waterbury) Keeler, and had Henry K. (married, first, Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Uriah and Augusta (Remson) Ambler; married, second, Mary Elizabeth Taylor; no children;) Charles M.; George Ward, (married Mrs. Anna M. Potter, no issue); Theodore D.; Mary E.

Nathan Selleck married, third, Amy Holmes of Bedford, N. Y., and had Charlotte (unmarried) and Jesse.

Jesse married Hannah M., daughter of Jakin and Rhoda (Richards) Bouton of New Canaan and had Andrew and C. Frederick. Andrew married, first, Mary, daughter of William and Fanny (Olmsted) Harrington,[6] and had William A., died unmarried, Lilias M. (Mrs. W.

[1] Among the children of Jonathan Selleck, by his first wife (Barnes) were Edward and Betsey (Mrs. Gould first and, second, Mrs. Curran).

[2] The children of Frances A. Selleck (Mrs. Samuel C. Waterbury) were Anna (Mrs. McClay first and, second, Mrs. Elmer E. Knapp); Josephine S. (Mrs. George H. Roberts); Clarence, died young; Lawrence P., unmarried; Rena S. (Mrs. Eugene Albin) and Eloise A. (Mrs. Frank W. Bogardus).

The children of George H. and Josephine Roberts are Mary, died young; Lena (Mrs. Edward Marshall), Mabel, Florence E., Annie, Jennie and Georgie.

The children of Eugene and Rena Albin are Harriet F. and Harold C.

The families of Sidney and Riley Selleck reside elsewhere than in Norwalk.

[3] Frederick D., son of James K. and Semantha Selleck, married September 19, 1878, Nellie Eagan of Chicago, Ill., and had James K., Elizabeth, George, Helen and Lillian.

[4] Charles B., son of James K. Selleck, married December 27, 1879, Isabel S., widow of William A. S. Hanford and daughter of William C. Street of Norwalk, no children.

[5] The child of Mrs. James H. Bailey is Florence.

[6] Fanny, born May 3, 1801 (Mrs. Wm. Harrington) was a daughter of Asa and Betty (Stuart) Olmstead. Her brother was the clever and considerate Dr. David Olmstead[2nd] of Belden Hill and her sisters were Charlotte (Mrs. Justus Keeler), Betsey (Mrs. Stephen Hoyt), and Julia Maria and Mary Elizabeth, who were unmarried. There was also a brother David [1st], who died in infancy. Dr. David Olmstead was a college man and a New York city medical-schoolmate and intimate of Dr. Valentine Mott. His first practice was with Dr. Nehemiah Perry, Sr., of Ridgefield and he was unmarried.

Mrs. Asa Olmstead was the daughter of Simeon and Mary (Gregory) Stuart. Her mother was twice married, her first husband having been a Gregory. Her Gregory children were Elizabeth (Mrs. Jesse Jarvis), Sally (Mrs. Nathan Munroe of Salem), Susannah (Mrs. Scott) and Mrs. James Aikin. There was also another Gregory child. Mrs. Simeon Stuart was a daughter of David Whelpley.

The children of Mrs. Justus Keeler were Charlotte (Mrs. Thos. Merwin Raymond) and Frances L. (unmarried.)

W. Keyes), Eugene, died young, and Fanny M., died young. Andrew Selleck married, second, Susan F., sister of his first wife, no children. C. Frederick brother of Andrew Selleck, married Ann Eliza, daughter of Robert Flynn, and had no children.

Isaac Selleck[1st], son of Abraham Selleck[1st] and half brother of Nathan Selleck, married July 1, 1793, Sarah, born August 20, 1763, daughter of Phineas and Elizabeth (Lounsbury) Waterbury (see pages 369 and 370) and had Noah, Isaac[2nd], James, Polly (Mrs. William Seeley, first, and, second, Mrs. Babcock), Hettie (Mrs. George Brown), and Nancy (Mrs. Samuel Selleck).

Isaac[2nd], born July 14, 1802, son of Isaac[1st] and Sarah (Waterbury) Selleck, married, October 1 1823, Lucy, born April 1, 1805, daughter of James and Esther (Seeley) Brown, and had: Eliza Esther, born July 7, 1824 (Mrs. Darius Slauson); James Lawrence, born March 15, 1826; George Washington, born October 7, 1827; Charles, born November 2, 1829; Isaac, born August 31, 1831; Mary Ann, born June 18, 1833, died young; Henry[1st], died young; Henry S., born December 29, 1838; Franklin, born April 4, 1841; Cyrus, born May 2, 1843; died young; Mary, A., died young.

Mrs. Isaac Selleck[2nd], died March 15, 1892.

Isaac Selleck[2nd], died September 15, 1893.[1]

The children of Darius and Eliza Esther Slauson were De Witt, Frederick, James and Nettie.

The children of Thomas L. Raymond, were Agnes (Mrs. Jacob Fowler), Celia (unmarried), Justus, Keeler, Henry (died unmarried in the civil war), Harriet (Mrs. John Wilson) and Catharine (Mrs. William Folwell).

Stephen Hoyt, son of Stephen and Althea (James) Hoyt, who married Betsey Olmstead had Julia Ann., born June 29, 1829, married, May 24, 1849, William P., son of Silas and Hannah (Brisco) Hayes; Harriet Amelia (unmarried); Thaddeus A., James.

The children of William P. Hayes were Mary Jane, born September 29, 1850, died August 15, 1870, and Alice Frances, born 1853, who married April 3, 1877, Charles Wheeler, son of Alfred Burritt of Stratford, who resides, in 1899, in Morgan Avenue, Norwalk.

Asa Olmstead was son of David, who was son of John and Mary (Small) Olmstead. John Olmstead who married Mary Small was a son of James[1st], who was son of Richard Olmstead, the settler.

Asa Olmstead lived on Belden Hill. Himself and wife were born and brought up on Chestnut Hill, his father owning the present Gorham property on that hill, and her father where the Finch Brothers of 1896 reside. Betty (Mrs. Asa Olmstead), daughter of Simeon and Mary Stuart, repeatedly and distinctly related, during her life time, that when a child she witnessed the burning of Norwalk from her Chestnut Hill home, and that two years before that time (1777) Tryon marched his men, Danbury bound, across their farm.

Darius, brother of Asa Olmstead, married Esther Gregory and had Charles Olmstead of Cranberry Plains, and Silas, the father of the Olmsteads of Tarrytown, N. Y.

The Harrington's were English people, who came from Boston to Fairfield county. A familiar sight in the Norwalk of forty odd years ago, was the Belden Hill Carriage containing, after the husband and father's decease, Mrs. William Harrington and her daughters Mary and Susan F.

[1]Isaac Selleck[2nd], father of the present "Selleck Brothers," was a man of exceptional physical power. In his younger days he assisted Henry Selleck in laying the still seen foundation walls—lane and house—of the latter's East Avenue (now Osborn) brick dwelling, and made no point of coming from and returning to New Canaan before and after his day's work. He industriously served his generation and earned his enjoyed later life rest. With his cousin Henry he was of strong New England stock, and lived to a good age. Both Westchester men chose Norwalk for their home, where they left families. Clarence, the grandson of Isaac, was a young man of high promise. He was fond of foreign travel and his published correspondence, as well as clever art reproductions of scenery abroad, stamp him as having been a youth of rare tastes and accomplishments. His early demise was greatly lamented, but his noble character is a grateful remembrance. He was the only son of George W. and Cordelia E. Selleck.

James L., son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married Deborah Wright of Baldwinsville, N.Y., and had Henry and Charles.

George W., son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married January 9, 1854, Cordelia E. Twing of Great Barrington, Mass., and had Alice E., Mary E., Hattie, died young, Lucy A., died young, Lucy B., died young, and Clarence who died unmarried.

Charles, son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], is a resident of Blair, Nebraska, and had a child who died young and Gertrude.

Isaac[3rd], (Captain), son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married Mary Payne and had Charles, Frank, Mamie and an infant who died young. Charles married Lena, daughter of Rufus Raymond of Norwalk and had three children. Frank, son of Isaac[3rd], married Nettie Sherwood and had Nettie.

Henry Stanton, son of Isaac Selleck[2nd], married, November 20, 1867, Lydia, daughter of Sherman and Susan (Hurlbutt) Cole, and had Victor S., Willis H., Chester S. and E. Edward.

Franklin, son of Isaac[2nd] and Lucy Selleck married, first, October 14, 1874, Mattie A. Hazleton, no issue; married, second, November 21, 1889, Mary J. Gamble and had Dexter, born November 25, 1894, died January 11, 1898; Ellsworth G., born May 24, 1897.

SANDS—SELLECK—SCOTT.

On the opening day of the autumn of 1734 Nathan and Sarah Sands Selleck first saw their last born child, to whom the name of Sylvanus was given. The parents were married in Huntington, L. I., January 1, 1713, the groom (born September 12, 1676, having been the oldest son of Captain Jonathan and Abigail (Law) Selleck (pages 438 and 439), and the bride the daughter of Captain Samuel Sands, son of Captain James Sands of Berkshire County, England, one of the purchasers in 1660 of Block Island. The young Sylvanus Selleck was highly related. His paternal grandparents were of Law and Gold blood and his grandmother on his mother's side was a Ray of Block Island, while his mother's cousin, Abigail Sands, was the wife of the notable Hon. John Thomas (first Judge of Westchester County, whose home was a few rods removed from the present St. Paul's Chapel in Lewisboro, N. Y.), and his uncle (Samuel Sands) married Mary, daughter of Thomas Pell, Lord of Pelham Manor.

The boy Sylvanus Selleck grew to become a man of thirty-four when Dr. Ebenezer Dibble, Rector of St. John's Church, Stamford, was called upon to unite him in matrimony (March 2, 1768) to a Stratford lady, Tabitha (Siene or Pierce), and on November 17, 1772, the same rector baptized their two children, Molly and Betty. The father deceased while these children were minors, and in the distribution of his estate, July 6, 1786, Molly was awarded "Seventeen acres on Ox Pound," the present romantic and charmingly named "Contentment Island," while to her sister Betty was set off one-half of the near by Butler's Island. Molly married (May 17, 1787) Captain Stephen, son of James and Jemima Raymond, and her daughter Delia (Mrs. Gershom Raymond[3rd]) had Angelina (Mrs. John Scott), who was the mother of the forceful John Winfield Scott of New York City whose telling remarks after the eloquent address by General Russell Frost at the unveiling, in 1898, of the Norwalk Ludlow monument are an emphatic memory, and of his sister Angeline, now the intelligent, efficient and interested South Norwalk Librarian. Another sister of John W., Delia R., (Mrs. George E. Weeks), died in 1889.

URIAH SELLECK DESCENT.

Nathaniel[4th], son of David and Mercy (Waterbury) Selleck, married, August 7, 1744, Sarah, born August 12, 1723, daughter of Nathan and Sarah (Sands) Selleck, and had Uriah[1st], died young; Ray, Mercy, Sarah, Nathaniel and Uriah[2nd] (see page 305).[1]

This last child, Uriah[2nd], baptized October 31, 1762-3, married, May 18, 1784, Hannah, baptized about 1760, daughter of Ephraim Smith of the Haynes Ridge family (page 94), and had:

Zalmon, born March 31, 1795;

Nancy, born July 6, 1806, died in infancy;

Zalmon, son of Uriah and Hannah (Smith) Selleck, married Eliza Phillipse, and had:

Henry Augustus, born August 14, 1814.

Maria Phillipse, born September 6, 1815, (Mrs. William K. James, page 376).

[1]Uriah[2nd], baptized by the patriot Dr. Moses Mather of Darien, October 31, 1762—3, son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Selleck) Selleck, had a sister Rhoda, who married August 2, 1782, John Byxbee, Jr. Mrs. Rhoda (Selleck) Byxbee occupied the fine dwelling for that day now standing on Harbor avenue and known in late years as the "Captain Merritt place." Mrs. Byxbee survived her husband and finally removed to Flax Hill, near the present only store on the crest of that height. She had two daughters one of whom married the recalled Ray Selleck of the same hill and the other, Fanny, of lovely face and features —which are picture-preserved at the residence of the late Captain William H. Wilcox on Flax Hill—died young. John Byxbee, Jr., her father, was of the Eastham, Mass., Byxbee family, the first of whom to come to Norwalk, chose the summit of Flax Hill for his home.

There stands in St. Paul's church yard, a plain stone inscribed to the memory of Catharine Baker, the epitaph upon which is singulary pathetic from the fact that it is the epitome of the sleeper's perturbed life. Catharine Baker was carefully brought up on the Hudson River, but marrying against the wishes of her parents trouble soon befel her. One of the old families of Trinity church, New York, knew her well and fully sympathizing with her delicately but substantially assisted her. Disinherited, however, trials so told upon her that she made her way to Norwalk, where resided an intimate of the old Trinity family before referred to. Here she was welcomed, but death soon put a period to her life of vicissitudes and she was laid to rest at the head of Norwalk Green. She was possessed of something of a property, notwithstanding the fact of her family alienation. This snug little sum was Norwalk-bequeathed, but such was the strict character-probity of Uriah Selleck that he would not permit his granddaughter to retain it, but insisted that it should go back to the deceased's blood, and the consequence is that only three (quite choice) chairs are all that remain, barring the tender mound and gravestone-marking in St. Paul's churchyard, to tell of Catharine Baker.

"Tread softly on this hallowed ground.
Pale sorrow's child lies here;
Ye who have felt misfortune's frown
Here stop and drop a tear."

Not far from said stone and on the west side of the church walk is a broken slab in memory of Sarah Selleck, a sister of the first Mrs. William Lockwood and an aunt of the late William S. Lockwood of North avenue. The good young woman left her estate to St. Paul's church, but albeit her rector, Rev. Henry Whitlock and many of his people went to court to contest the estate's diversion in another direction, still the parish lost the benefaction.

Hannah, daughter of Ephraim Smith, baptized according to Stamford register, about 1760, married Uriah Selleck, who lived in what in recent years has been known as the Matthias Hubbell home in Main street. She was the grandmother of the present Mrs. William K. James and her branch of the Smith family inherited, through the Bartletts, quite a portion of the noble Haynes Ridge in New Canaan. The Norwalk records clearly show how the later members of the family transferred their rights in that large estate to the Long Island James and Moses Smith children of the blood. A portion of their Haynes Ridge property embraced the handsome vicinity of the "Church Hill" of 1896. Thomas Smith who lived in the western part of the Stamford Main street, was a son of Dr. Nathan and Elizabeth (Betts) Smith, who belonged to the same line. The residence of Thomas Smith is seen to day and his son Thomas and daughters Mary (Mrs. Burgess) and Sally (Mrs. David Holly) are Norwalk recalled. They were friends of the Stamford Jarvises and visiting this town on the occasion of a church sociable in the days of Dr. Jackson Kemper's rectorate of St. Paul's church sought out their Norwalk kin. The Thomas Smith Stamford home was a

NOAH AND GEORGE SELLECK.

Noah and George Selleck were Norwalk house-names of fifty years ago. Captain Noah Selleck, brother of Captain Isaac[2nd], had no children. He lived, during his later years, in Brooklyn, and was the instigator and proprietor of the Selleck's line of New York Packets (see page 306). Mr. Selleck accumulated a competency and closed his years surrounded by the comforts of life.

George Selleck was the oldest son, by his second wife, of James Selleck (see page 441), son of David and Mercy (Waterbury) Selleck.

James, son of David and Mercy Selleck married, second, Joanna Morgan of Wilton and had George,[1] Joanna (Mrs. Amos Barnes) and John M. of Bryantsburgh, Ill.

George, son of James and Joanna Selleck, married Harriet, daughter of Hyatt and Sarah (Somers) Banks of Redding, and had Sarah Jane (Mrs. John Plander), Ann Eliza (Mrs. George Evarts, first, Mrs. Stewart, second, Mrs. John March, third, and Mrs. James H. Beers, fourth); Harriet (Mrs. Edward Merrill); George F. and Donna Maria (Mrs. John Woolf).

Harriet, daughter of George and Harriet (Banks) Selleck, married Edward, son of Thomas B. and Sally Ann (St. John) Merrill (see page 235), and had George Thomas,[2] Laura P., James Titus (died young); Annie Betts (Mrs. Frederick R. Beach); Frank S. and Harriet St. John (Mrs. Banford S. Banks).

The Selleck family constitutes an extensive constituency and to complete the line to date would demand time and space. Its main lines have here been indicated from which it may not be impossible to establish any particular lineage branch.

prominent abode in the Stamford of olden times, and there is probably no portion of that prospered and popular township that has more changed or is more improved than that same to-day pretentious and progressive centre. The public buildings arrest attention, the stores and offices are noticeably fine, and the whole street and structure aspect is imposing. The godly Daniel Smith's sanctuary is missing, but churches of stately architecture have taken its place; the village school house near the present City Hall is gone but the commanding High School Building more to the east is a monument to the people's intelligence and admirable taste and judgment; the stage coach and horn are things of the past, but the electric cars and the rythm of the motorman's bell make transit and thoroughfare trouble-free and tuneful. In the days when the Bells, Bishops, Davenports, Hollys, Hoyts, Quintards, Rogers, Seofields, Seelys, Smiths, Waterburys, Webbs and Weeds were on the stage Stamford was indeed fair, but now it is grand, and its projenitors, ancestors, many of them, of striking lines, are entitled to record and memory-regard.

Nathan Smith of New Canaan, married Sarah, daughter of Jesse and Mercy (Selleck) Tuttle and was the father of Jesse Smith, who died at about the age of eighty some years since in West Norwalk. The children of Mr. Jesse Smith are to-day somewhat scattered. One of the daughters, Mrs. William Bessey, resides in 1899 with her sister, Mrs. John H. Romaine of Ludlow street, Stamford. Two other daughters, Mrs. Frank H. and Mrs. Dudley Hoyt, reside in Stamford. The brothers and sisters of Jesse Smith were Frederick, Orville, Bethol Mercy (Mrs. Cornelius Schenck), and Harriet (Mrs. Alfred M. Platt).

[1]George Selleck was Norwalk's first confectioner. He amassed a neat sum by his business and built the brick house (now Bishop place) on Wall Street. It was at his house that Rev. William Cooper Mead, D.D., and wife and daughter Jane Maria were entertained on the occasion of the visit of the future rector of St. Paul's Church before his acceptance of the call to the same.

[2]George Thomas Merrill married, January 11, 1898, Phebe, daughter of John Roff of New York City, and had George Kennith, born February 16, 1899, and baptized August 20, 1899.

David W., son of Thacher and Mary (Weed) Hayes, married, March 30, 1847, Hannah Campfield, daughter of Ebenezer Selleck, and had Levinia (Mrs. Harvey Hoyt),[1] and Mary Eliza (Mrs. James Slauson).

David W. Hayes married, second, Mrs. Albia Campfield, and had no children.

Clarissa, daughter of Thacher and Mary (Weed) Hayes, married, as his second wife, Lewis Richards, M. D.,[2] of New Canaan, and had no children.

Charles, son of Thacher and Mary (Weed) Hayes, married Betsey, daughter of Stephen Waterbury, and had no children.

THACHER—DEANE—WEBB.

Lydia Thacher, a few years the senior of Captain Josiah of Norwalk, married John Deane of Groton, Conn., and was the mother of Silas Deane[1st]. Silas[1st] married Sarah Barker, to whom was born, on the day before Christmas, 1737, Silas Deane, Jr., who was a member of the first (1774) Congress, and deputized, in 1776, to proceed on a political errand to France, there to meet Dr. Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson and confer in the interests of the new power in the West. Silas Deane[2nd] married the widow of Joseph Webb[4th]. This young Webb, who died March 5 or 25, 1761, was born in Stamford December 8, 1627, but anon left Fairfield County for Wethersfield, where he married, February 2, 1748, Mehetable, born 1732, daughter of Gershom and Sarah (Waterhouse) Nott. The widow Webb was, before her second marriage, the mother of a number of Webb children, among whom was General Samuel B. (see page 400). Joseph Webb[4th] was son of Joseph[3rd], born (Marvin) Keeler. Stephen Keeler was a son of John and Lydia (Lockwood) Keeler, a fine connection, see pages 178 and 185. The children of Stephen and Hannah Keeler were Sally (Mrs. Amos Smith of Ridgefield), Nancy (Mrs. Asahel Osborn of Ridgefield), Lucy (Mrs. William Dudley), John, Lockwood died young, Mary (Mrs. Seth Ferris), Jane (Mrs. Samuel Church), Esther (Mrs. Bela St. John) which Jane and Esther were twins, and Roxy (Mrs. Charles Nash).

Seth and Mary (Keeler) Ferris were the parents of the greatly esteemed Deacon Gould Ferris of South Norwalk, who married Mary Ann, daughter of Samuel and Esther (Keeler) Beers of Wilton, and had, Mary A. (Mrs. Rev. J. J. Wooley), Frank A., and Emma (Mrs. Nelson Dickerman).

Lockwood Keeler Ferris and Mary (Mrs. Truman Trowbridge) of Danbury were also children of Seth and Mary Ferris.

Mrs. Nancy (Keeler) Osborn had several sons and daughters. One Charles, a New York silversmith, married the educated Miss Esther Harrington, of Middletown, and had a son Henry, who was on the New York Graphic (illustrated) staff.

[1]Mrs. Hoyt, who is now a widow and tenderly ministered to by her two daughters Cheshire and Mary Eliza, and grandson William A. Hanford, occupies the Hoyt home a little north of the Lewisboro rectory and westerly of the Upper Norwalk reservoir. She is a lady of high worth and the family is held in just esteem.

[2]Lewis Richards, M.D., was a New Canaan clever and conscientious physician of the old school. He possessed certain manner characteristics, but was skillful and good. His name was an household one and he was highly respected. He was twice married. His first wife, Mary Selleck, a sister of Mrs. Peter Smith of Smith's Ridge, was a rare character. She filled the Dr. Richards home (Bond house on Owenoke Avenue, 1899), with sweetness and goodness, and made it an attractive hearthstone. Her daughter Sophia (Mrs. Prof. James H. Olmstead) was a New England maiden, the like to whose eminent excellence the poet must have had in mind when he taught that "few or none rise in their room." There were two other sisters, Sarah and Hannah, and a brother James. Dr. Richards married, second, Clarissa, daughter of Thacher and Mary Hayes, to whom he was introduced by a worthy Oblong wife and mother, Mrs. Amos. N. Raymond.

ing. by the predecessor of the present brick building on Town House Hill, opposite to which Captain Thacher also possessed a house-lot.

The sea-faring Captain continued active, it would appear, almost to the going out of his life-tide. He left no "log" as the success-register of his ocean going ventures, but the Norwalk town records attest to his land enterprises. Money was seemingly at his command, as well as the mind-ability to wisely invest and employ it.

On January 6, 1775, he settled his "stone dwelling house at the great bridge" upon his sons Daniel and Stephen G., which edifice became, in 1785, the property of James Selleck of the family of the first Mrs. William Lockwood.

Until advancing age Mr. Thacher held the old Whitney Mill (northwest corner of Main and Wall Streets, 1896). He was its proprietor and the owner, also of "Thacher's mill pond" in the rear. The Whitney-Thacher grain establishment has a history (page 35).

The story of such lives as Captain Josiah Thacher and his contemporaries Joseph Hitchcock, Goold Hoyt, John Belden, John Cannon, Joshua King, Peter Quintard, Thaddeus Betts, and the Lockwoods, Marvins, Raymonds, Benedicts, Hanfords, Ketchums and Rogers of his day is instructive. Write, urges a western lady of prominence and a gifted graduate of the Emma Willard Seminary of Troy, N. Y., the history of the Norwalk ladies of the immediate pre and post revolutionary periods. Mrs. Judge Austin Adams, herself of Norwalk blood, is unquestionably correct. There is, quite likely, much in the lives of the John Gregory (Lieutenant), son of Denton[1st] and Elizabeth Gregory, married, first, December 8, 1774, Sarah Fairchild, and had Sarah (Mrs. Zechariah Whitman Fitch), born July 11, 1775; Hannah, February 6, 1778; Jesse, March 14, 1780; Helena, December 22, 1781; Elizabeth, September 1, 1787; Betsey, February 26, 1790; John, April 25, 1792, and Branford, December 31, 1795, who died January 26, 1798. The first Mrs. Lieutenant John Gregory died January 15, 1795-6, and her husband married, second, September 20, 1795-6, Nancy Dickinson, who died September 3, 1798. Lieutenant John Gregory married, third, December 9, 1798 (date copied correctly but there is possibly a mistake), Betsey, born July 3, 1772, daughter of Burwell and Sarah (Burwell Betts (second wife), and had Antoinette, unmarried, and Angeline (second wife of Edmond Tuttle), twins, and George B. and Burwell D.

Burwell Betts married, first, November 1, 1740, Thankful Raymond, who died December 3, 1747.

Mrs. Stephen Gregory was a cousin of Captain Hezekiah Betts, the Revolutionary soldier. Her grandfather was Captain Thomas Benedict, who was a son of John and Phebe (Gregory) Benedict, which John Benedict was a son of Thomas Benedict the settler. Mrs. Gregory's sister Elizabeth married Thomas Hayes of the Hayes family branch, which removed to Vermont and is represented to-day by Mrs. Sophia Sage of San Francisco.

Silas Gregory, son of Stephen and Mary Gregory, and wife Polly had Julia (Mrs. William Hanford), Silas Burr, born February 13, 1807, and Susan (Mrs. Abraham Sherwood of Bedford, N. Y.). Silas B. Gregory married, first, Ruth Ann Sherwood and had William Burr and Jane Ann. Silas B. Gregory married, second, Emma Green, who came to this country with her father at six years of age from England. Her father was a jeweler whose Norwalk store was the old Thomas B. Merrill building at "the Bridge." The children of Silas B. and Emma Gregory were Silas W., George, Frederick, Thomas, Jane and Emma.

Josiah, son of Denton[1st] and Elizabeth Gregory, married, January 23, 1783, Ellen Adams. He owned, largely in Cranberry Plains and built and liberally supported the Methodist Episcopal church in Poplar Plains. His sister Clemon married, June 4, 1785, Benjamin Fillow, and had Lewis, born March 13, 1786; Phebe, March 18, 1788, and James, December 21, 1791. Denton Gregory[2nd], son of Denton Gregory[1st], and Elizabeth, was the father of William Gregory, now of Cranberry Plains. The casual mention of Captain Josiah Thacher's Gregory heirship prompts to Thacher-Gregory inquiry.

lot on the south side of Joseph Webb's, to be laid out, having due respect to the highway; to Samuel Hoyt, Increase Holly, David Waterbury, Obadiah Seely, John Waterbury, Thomas Newman, Joseph Fish, Obadiah Stevens, Benjamin Stevens, John Jagger, Moses Knapp, Daniel Ferris, Jonathan Seeley, Joseph Jones and William Penoyer, severally, house lots for their services.

At the end of the list is this record: "the town doth give unto John Green two house lots for his sons, next to Abraham Ambler's front, which homelots were given as they were soldiers."

In Dec. 1677, the town votes to Capt. Jonathan Sellick, "as was upon service against the common enemy, all that piece of land lying upon the west side of the landing place, beginning at the mouth of the brook commonly called Hardy's Hole, in length to the Southfield fence."

The only other local record which refers to these local struggles with the Indians are those in which, occasionally, a citizen asks for an appropriation for his services. The last of these claims was preferred in 1692, when Joshua Hait asks for a piece of land on account of his going out, a soldier, against the common inimy;" and two acres in the ox pasture were given him "as a gratuity for his good service in the late war." At the same time a piece of land is "layed out" to Simon Chapman, probably for the same reason.

Already our townsmen had felt themselves relieved of further danger so that they might safely order a final disarmament as the following record shows.

"18 Dec. 1695, per vote outcry the town doth sell the fort wood about ye meeting house to Stephen Clason for seventeen shillings and ninepence." "The town by outcry doth sell ye fort gates ye wheels of ye great guns and all ye wood belonging to ye guns it is now sold to Nathanall Cross and Jonathan Holly for five shillings and sixpence."

And who shall say that such was not a worthy disposal of the last witnesses to the struggles which the pioneers of the town

The following choice morceau, found in the New York colonial records of this date, will enable us to estimate the influence of Stamford, in what has since become the metropolis of the continent. It bears date, New York, November 28, 1700, and was written by the "Earl of Bellomont," to the English Lords of Trade, his masters. It will give us a pretty clear idea of the Yankee enterprise of at least one of the Stamford boys of that day. The record will also, reveal the natural results of the nearness of Stamford to the great metropolis of the country, indicating thus early in its history how strongly our business men are tempted towards the city.

"Theres a town called Stamford, in Conn. Colony, on the border of this province, where one Major Selleck lives, who has a ware house close to the sea, that runs between the mainland and Nassau, (Long Island). That man does us great mischief with his ware house, for he receives abundance of goods from our vessels, and the merchants afterwards take their opportunity of running them into this town. Major Selleck received at least £10,000 worth of treasure and East India goods, brought by one Clarke of this town from Kid's sloop, and lodged with Selleck."

1768, and had Sarah, b. '70; Esther. '71; Lewis, '73; Noyse, 1777.

SKELDING, Thomas, 1701. married Rebecca Austin and their son, Thomas, was b. in '03

ST. JOHN, David, blacksmith, 1758, is allowed by vote of the town to settle at Woodpecker Ridge.

James, and Hanna Hait, m. Sept. 19, 1753, and had a large family.

SELLECK.—This family, natives of Wales, as the tradition is, were in Boston as early as 1643. Two of the sons of David and Susanna Selleck of Boston,—Jonathan, born, May 20, '41, the very year of our settlement, and John, b. April 21, '43; came to Stamford about the year '60.[1] Jonathan had house and land recorded to him in '63.

Jonathan, married Abigail, daughter of Richard Law, and had his first child, Jonathan, born here, July, 11, 1664. He had two other sons, David, b. Jan. 21, '66, and John, who graduated at Harvaad, in '90. These sons all died, so Savage tells, us before the father's death, which is recorded as taking place, Jan. 10. 1712–13. This Jonathan was a prominent man, and at his death he bequeathed his Latin, Greek and Hebrew books to the Rev. Mr. Davenport.

JOHN, the other pioneer of this name, made freeman, 1669; married Sarah Law, a sister of his brother Jonathan's wife and had children, Sarah, b. August 22, 1669; David, b. Dec. 27, 1672; Nathaniel, b. April 7, '78; John, b. June 7, '81; Susanna, b. Feb. 2, '83, and Joanna, b. May 31, '86. This John was a wealthy ship-owner and captain. Under date, Feb. 25, '68–9, the town granted Mr. John Selleck a piece of waste land by the landing place to set a dwelling-house, or ware-house. He was taken prisoner on a voyage to England, in May, '89, by the French, and never returned to Stamford. His estate was settled here in 1700, and was very large. A branch of this family went just after our revolutionary war to Oyster Bay, on Long Island, where, down to the present day there are found worthy representatives of the name. Abigail, wife of Maj. Selleck, d. Dec. 20, '11.

STONE, John, in 1701, sells to Zach. Roberts, sen. of Bedford, the land and house he bought of Samuel Dean. He was one of the townsmen for a number of years.

STUART, Charles, was here in 1763.

STUDWELL, Joseph, was here in 1667. Thomas was here in March, '67–8, and binds himself to pay for, or return a catalogue of goods, among which were hatters tools. As security, he mortgaged three acres of meadow in the East field.

STURGES, Christopher, admitted inhabitant by vote in town meeting, 1718, and had a son, Jabez, b. here, '21. For several years after '23, he is enrolled among the town officials. His wife, Mary, d. Feb. 17, '46–7.

STURDIVANT, Wm. In 1682, Nicholas Webster, receives from the townsmen a piece of land in the rear of his lot, which had been layed out to this Wm. Sturdivant.

TALMADGE, Thomas, was here in 1709, and by vote admitted an inhabitant. He married Mary Weed, and had a daughter Hannah. He had married again in '21, when his son James was born.

THOMPSON, John, "gunsmith and resident in Stamford," sells house and lands to Jonathan Selleck, May 7, 1667. He was here, also, in '69 and in '70—sold land to Richard Webb.

TRYHERN, (Tryon) Edward, appears on the land record as early as 1684. One of his daughters married John Webster. Sarah, his wife, died here, Sept. 2, 1702, and his death occurred May 14, '74; down to which date his name is found quite frequently in the records.

THORP, Charles, was living here in 1733, when his son Edward was born.

TODD, John, jr. was an inhabitant in 1774.

TURNEY, Joseph, had lands laid out to him in 1686 on the sult the extreme borders of our soil; but the gallant general had so far outstripped them. as to have rallied our townsmen in sufficient numbers with the aid of the garrison in our fort, to meet them and turn their invasion into a precipitous retreat. Once, also, probably, was the eastern margin of our patriot town desecrated with the stealthy tread of British armed men; but their safety demanded a hurried return to the transports which had landed them, and so the town was spared the ravage they had designed.

The following letter from our most distinguished townsman, is authentic respecting the standing of two other of our citizens, and shows how our people managed their foreign commerce during the war:

Stamford, Dec. 8, 1775.

RESPECTED SIR,—Mr. Selleck and Mr. Bates, two of my neighbors own a vessel of about fifty tons, with which they are desirous to make a voyage to the West Indies, to carry cattle and provisions and bring back military stores, if a permit can be obtained of your Honor, for the performance. I suppose that is expected that Mr. Bates will go Master, if the vessel is permitted to go. I believe he may be depended on; and I do not know a man better calculated for the business. The vessel is said to be a prime sailor.

We have but a few pounds of powder in our town stock, and I believe it will be universally agreeable to the inhabitants of the town, that a permit should be granted. At the desire of Mr. Bates, I write this. He informme that Mr. Selleck will apply to your Honor for the permit, and will give bond, if required, for the faithful conduct of the master. Mr. Selleck is a man of considerable interest, and his bond will be quite sufficient.

I am with the greatest esteem and respect, your Honor's most obedient and humble servant,

ABRAM DAVENPORT,

HON. GOV. TRUMBULL.

But the most extensive invasion of the town by the British and their loyal abettors here, occurred Sunday, July 22, 1781. The leaders in that sacriligious foray were from among the tories of the eastern part of the town, and their depredations and captures were confined to their own neighbors and friends. During the night preceding they had crossed the Sound from Lloyd's neck in seven boats, and stealthily secreted themselves, about forty in number, in a swamp a few rods south of the meeting house, waiting the gathering of the congregation for their usual worship. Providentially several of the leading patriots were pose his country longer, as his father was now dead and his widowed mother was living alone at Stamford. He therefore begs to be allowed to return, as a loyal citizen of the new government. The request was granted by the legislature. Mr. Holly afterwards became the proprietor of the Cove Mills, and a prominent and honored citizen.

Elnathan Holly a youth of nineteen years, in 1776, joined the enemy, and was employed in the army. In April, 1782, he abandoned the British service, returned to Stamford and was imprisoned. He forwards to the legislature a penitent confession, his sacred oath of future allegiance, and a fervent plea for his liberation. The petition was granted.

In May, 1782, widow Mary Wooster, pleads before the legislature the case of her son then in New York. He had been early drawn over the lines and into the British service. He had never taken up arms; and of late had lived in New York, carrying on his trade as tailor. He had made money, and is now anxious to visit his mother and make Stamford his future home. He is ready to give pledges of his loyalty to the new government and is by vote of the legislature allowed to return.

After the depredations committed by the British in the eastern part of the town, as reported in our chronological record under date of Nov. 30, 1780, the legislature appointed a committee to report all dangerous persons from Stamford. This was done, when the following names were reported; Gideon Leeds, Admer Stevens, Sam'l Hoyt 3rd, Sam'l Crissy, John Selleck, Anthony De Mill, Daniel Selleck, Josiah Scofield 3rd, Josiah Scofield, John Bates, Nathaniel Dan, James Scofield, junr., Jonathan Lewis, David Hoyt, Gideon Lounsbury and Sylvanus Seeley. Our chronological record shows that Gideon Lounsbury was acquitted of the charge. In the State Archives I found other papers respecting these tories worth reporting.

One contains an appeal from Samuel Crissy and Gideon Leeds, demanding an examination, which was granted. At the trial they brought forward such proofs of their substantial and hopes for merciful treatment. He also promises to be a "faithful member of the United States." The legislature would not release him.

Leeds, Gideon, a brother of Carey.

Lewis, Jonathan.

Loder, Jacob, son of Daniel and Margaret, born in Stamford, Aug. 13, 1734, and went to New Brunswick where he died at Sheffield in 1817.

Lounsbury, Gideon, arrested in 1775, on suspicion of favoring the British. Makes a humble apology and promises "to my utmost to exert myself in opposition to the ministerial troops."

Merrit, Shubael, a "cowboy" who was shot, over in Greenwich.

Mills, Jesse, had rendered himself so offensive to the patriots of the north part of the town that, he was pursued into his sister's house, which stood near where Isaac L. Jones' store now stands, on Highridge, and was wounded by a shot. He escaped from his pursuers and went to Nova Scotia.

Newman, Joshua.

Picket, David went with his wife and seven children to St. John, New Brunswick in 1783. He was a magistrate of the colony and a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of King's County, where he died in 1826.

Rodgers, Fitch went with four brothers to St. John, New Brunswick, but returned to Stamford where he died.

Quintard, Isaac, had command of the first company of militia in Stamford, in 1775.

Scofield, James, junr.

Scofield, Josiah 3rd.

Scofield, Ezra, a brother of the patriot Captain Reuben, went to St. John, N. B., and became a prominent man.

Selleck, Daniel.

Selleck, John.

Seeley, Obadiah.

He had sought the help of the constable to recover damages from a neighbor for some harm done by him. The sharp-eyed official saw at a glance that there was no ground for the attachment, and refused the process. Mead scolded and threatened, but to no purpose. He then goes into court with an action against him for neglecting his official duty. But the angry plaintiff soon finds himself a sorry defendant, with but a miserable advocate. Law had him put under trial for scandalizing the church, for slanders and defamatory reports and for disturbing the peace of the church and the town. To all which nothing in extenuation could be said, and the court exculpating their officer, sentenced Mr. Mead to make full acknowledgement at Stamford, to the satisfaction of the church and Mr. Law, to pay Mr. Law ten pounds for his expense in the trial, to pay ten pounds more for disturbing the jurisdiction, and then that he and his brother or some other acceptable man, be bound over for his good behaviour. After the sentence Mr. Mead made the fullest confession and retraction, and Mr. Law was left thenceforward to prosecute his official business unhindered.

Mr. Law had married in Wethersfield, Margaret Kilbourn, by whom he had three children; Jonathan, b. 1636–7; Abigail, who married, May 11, 1665, Jonathan Selleck of Stamford; and Sarah, who married, Oct. 28, 1669, John Selleck, also of Stamford. The son Jonathan, married June 1, 1664, Sarah Clark, daughter of Dea. George Clark of Milford, and removed to Milford, where he was a man of note. His son, Jonathan, b. Aug. 6, 1674, graduated at Harvard College, 1695; was chief-justice of Connecticut for sixteen years and governor of the state from 1741 to 1750.

Mr. Law probably died in Stamford, though there is no record to show it. His will, the last document in which his name appears, bears date March 12, 1686–7. His widow had probably died before this date as no mention is made of her in the will.

There is a paper, entered on the town records in 1686, bearing date Feb. 15, 1680, which speaks of the misunderstanding under which he had given his son, Law, his land. It seems that the son removed from Stamford to Milford, and this removal was a source of dissatisfaction to the father. Still adhering to the former grant to his son, he now insists on dividing the lands which had come into his hands since that former gift, to his daughters, the two Mrs. Selleck, so that they may each have a half as much as he; for which he says "the word of God is clear, and good reason for it, and why any Christian man that loveth righteousness and equity should be against this, I see not."

MITCHELL, REV. JONATHAN, was son, not of Jonathan, as Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit has it, but of Matthew Mitchell, the wealthiest and otherwise most noted of the lay settlers of Stamford. He was born, so Savage supposes, at Halifax, Yorkshire, Eng., and in the year 1624, according to Mather. He came with his father, in the James, from Bristol, in 1635, to Cambridge, Mass., and thence to Concord and Springfield, and in 1640 to Stamford. He remained here probably until he entered Harvard College, where he graduated, A. B., in 1647. He was ordained, Aug. 21, 1650, at Cambridge, where he labored in the ministry for eighteen years.

He was one of the early New England ministers whom the quaint Mather has immortalized in his Magnalia. He styles him the "Ecclesiastes;" "a Pastor of the Church, and a glory of the College in Cambridge, New England." In his epistle dedicatory, he calls him "blessed Mr. Mitchell," and in his sketch of the life and labors of Mr. Mitchell, he makes him the "excellent," the famous pastor" and "this best of preachers in our new English nation." The opening of his biographical sketch is worthy of a place here, as illustrating the times to which our subject belonged, and also, as furnishing us an interesting clue to his character and that of his family:—

"If it were counted an honor to the town of Halifax in Yorkshire that the famous John de Sacro Bozco, author of the well known treatise "De Sphoera," was born there; this town was

ASA COUNTRYMAN, one year; EBEN FRANCIS, about three years, and J. SMITH DODGE, Jr., who is still the occupant.

CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The first Catholic services in Stamford, of which we have any account, were held by Rev. John Smith, in September, 1842, in the house of P. H. Drew, in West Stamford. At that date there were but three Catholic families in the town. Services were held there, monthly, until 1846. Mr. Drew removing to the old "Webb Place" on South-St., services were there held, first, by the Right Rev. Bishop Tyler. Here the meetings of this denomination were continued, by several ministers, until the church on Meadow-St. was built in 1851. Since then, the Catholic population has increased very rapidly. The church has been once enlarged, and the present necessities of the congregation call for still greater enlargement, for which provision is being made.

The following priests have been stationed here:

EDWARD CLONEY, 1854—1857.

JAMES REYNOLDS, 1857, and died here Oct. 20, 1858.

JAMES O'NEIL, from Sept. 1858 to the present time. He has been assisted by the following curates, Edward O'Neil, who died while in this office, Christopher Dugget, and his present assistant, curate Eugene Gaffney.

FRIENDS MEETING.

How early the movement was started which led to the Friends' meeting in Darien, I have been unable to learn. From a work published in 1844, embracing the biographies of Catherine Seely and Deborah S. Roberts, who were themselves Friends, we learn that their grandmother, Catherine Selleck, was the first member of the sect in Stamford. The opening of a Friends' meeting at a private residence is thus described by Miss Roberts. "After seriously weighing the subject, on the 21st of 6th month, 1828, and on the 1st day of the week, we convened at the house of Uncle Wyx Seely, and quietly sat down together in the capacity of a religious meeting for worship. It was held in the sick room of my dear cousin C. Seely, and was the same one in which our worthy grandmother Catherine Selleck, the first member in this place, sat down in the same way, herself alone. At length others joined her and finally a meeting was allowed." The first "minister" they had, was probably a woman by the name of Griffin; and the only preacher who was located there was probably one of the resident members, Mr. Samuel Bishop, who died in 1852, a lineal descendant of Rev. John Bishop, the second pastor of the first Congregational church of Stamford. The Friends built a small, square meeting house in 1811, and for a few years held in it their simple service. But the meetings were long since abandoned, nothing being left as a witness to the fact of such an attempt, save the old square frame in which the meetings were held.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF STAMFORD.

The first records of any movement towards organizing a Presbyterian church in Stamford, are found among the records of the Congregational church. After the communion service of Jan. 2, 1853, in a church meeting, the following members of the Congregational church called for letters of dismission from the church, to constitute a Presbyterian church about to be formed.

Augustus R. Moen, Alexander Milne, George Elder, James D. Haff, Luke Baker, Hiram Warner, James Robinson, John Holmes, Mrs. Sophia A. Moen, Miss Cornelia A. Moen, Hannah E. Elder, Mrs. Mary E. Haff, Mrs. Almira Baker, Mrs. Sophia Warner, Miss Elizabeth M. Warner, Mrs. Georgette A. Robinson, Mrs. Catherine Helmes.

Letters of dismission were voted to these members of the church according to the rules of the church, Jan. 16, 1853. During the next few weeks similar letters were given to the following members of the Congregational church:

Wells R. Ritch, Mary Ann Sturges, Elizabeth Sturges, Mrs. Amzi Ayres, Miss Matilda Moen, Mrs. Sarah A. Ritch, Miss Sarah L. Ritch.

This church was organized Feb. 25, 1853 with twenty-six

Dear David:

Sorry to be so long getting the Ash family record to you. First I tried to get a copy from cousin Gertrude and wasn't successful. Then Marge said she'd furnish me with a copy when they returned from Florida. The copy she sent was marked and not up-to-date so I decided to make up a new one, but found our typewriter (which is an old secondhand one) could not accommodate that large sheet of paper. Anyway the enclosed has all the additions I know about and I believe it is complete. Wish I could have typed it as it would be more legible.

Looks like spring here today. Know you have had more winter there and hope you are having mild days too.

Cordially,
Jean Sellers

Dear Joan,

Thank you very much for the excellent chart you sent of the Ash family. I know this took you a lot of time, and I appreciate it.

From time to time as I have an opportunity I'll do a little work on the Ash line. A few weeks ago I found the following entry in the International Genealogical Index (IGI) at the Mormon Branch Library:

Thomas Ash, son of Thomas Ash and Margaret Crawford, bapt. June 17, 1769, Belfast, Co. Antrim, Ireland. (Possibly ancestors or relatives of your family.)

Elizabeth may have told you I found many pages of Jellick information at the Minnesota Historical Society. If and when I connect Jacks line to that one, I'll send you copies. I'm still trying to locate the Episcopal church records in the Tyrconnel, N.Y. area, hoping to find the baptismal record of Joseph Whiting Jellick.

Hope you're gradually improving!

Sincerely,

Dave

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

In checking the files here, I learned that in 1799, Syracuse, New York was a part of the Diocese of New York (1785-1838); then in 1838 Syracuse was a part of the Diocese of Western New York (1838-1868); and in 1868 Syracuse was in the Diocese of Central New York.

Therefore, I believe you should write to the Diocese of New York at the following address for the information you are seeking:

I am in hopes they will be able to help you.

Dear Sirs:

I am seeking the baptismal record of Joseph Whiting Sallack, whose newspaper obituary said he was born on Dec. 14, 1799, at Syracuse, N.Y., and was an Episcopalian. Of course, this may have meant in the vicinity of Syracuse.

From your records can you tell me what Episcopal parishes in that vicinity were in existance at that time and where their baptismal records might be at the present time?

I wrote to the Diocese of Central New York in Syracuse, and they said Syracuse was part of your diocese in 1799.

Enclosed is a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. Thank you for your assistance.

Dear Father Witheridge,

Enclosed is a listing of parishes that existed in the year 1799. For almost anything that happened before 1860 it is safe to say that if records exist at all they are in Trinity Parish Archives. So, I would write to them first. You may address your correspondence to Ms. Phyllis Barr, Archivist.

Please let us know if we may be of further assistance, and good luck with your search!

Faithfully,

Dear Ms. Carr:

I was referred to you by the Rev. James E. Templar, archivist for the Diocese of New York, who said you were very knowledgeable about records and events before 1860 and had many such records at the Trinity Parish archive.

I am seeking the baptismal record of Joseph Whiting Pollock, whose newspaper obituary said he was born on Dec. 1st, 1799, at Syracuse, N.Y., and was an Episcopalian. Of course, this may have meant in the vicinity of Syracuse. I wrote to the Diocese of Central New York, and they said that Syracuse was part of the Diocese of New York in 1799.

From your records, can you tell me what Episcopal parishes in that vicinity were in existence at that time and where their baptismal records might be at the present time?

Dear Rev. Mr. Witheridge:

We are in receipt of your letter of 8 June 1983 in which you request information on Joseph Whiting Selleck, b. 1799, at Syracuse, New York.

Trinity Church does not have baptismal records of any Episcopal churches in Syracuse nor any other church for that matter -- only those of its own congregation down through the years.

We would suggest that you write once again to the Diocese of Central New York, perhaps restating your case, for frankly this inquiry concerns their history and not that of Trinity Church.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Tamplar:

I note that you have received a carbon copy of the reply I received from Michael Womack, secretary to the archivist of Trinity Church, in regard to my request about parish records in the vicinity of Syracuse, N.Y., in 1799. As you see, they have nothing but their own records.

In your letter of June 1 you sent me a list of Episcopal parishes in Manhattan. However if you have my letter of May 8 you will notice that I was trying to identify the Episcopal parishes that were in existence in 1799 in the vicinity of what is now Syracuse. (The Onondaga Historical Association said that the name Syracuse was first used in 1819, and until 1848, census listings were under the County of Salina.)

You may not know where the old parish records are located, but you no doubt have an annual report of the Diocese of New York for 1799, in which the parishes of the diocese were listed. I should like to have a copy of that list, and I am enclosing a check for $1.00 for a xeroxed copy. If you do not know which ones were in the vicinity of Syracuse I could track that information down elsewhere.

Thank you again for your help.

Yours sincerely,

David E Hatteridge

Dear Mrs. Juengel:

In April I wrote to you about parish records of Episcopal churches that were in existence in the Syracuse area in 1799, and you referred me to the Diocese of New York, which had jurisdiction over that part of New York at that time. So far their archivist has been unable to help me, and I wonder if you will do me another favor.

The yearbook of your diocese probably contains a list of churches with information about them. Could you send me photocopies of the pages that would give the following information about the churches in the Syracuse Metropolitan District?

- Name and address of church
- Minister's name
- Date of founding or organization

With this information I shall begin to correspond with some of the older parishes about their history and early records. Thank you very much for your help. Enclosed is a check for $2.00 to cover the cost of the copies.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Kittredge

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

I am replying to your letter of June 24th.

In checking with the History Department of the Onondaga County Public Library, I learned that the village of Syracuse was founded in approximately 1802 and was incorporated in 1825.

Enclosed is the information you requested about the Syracuse Metropolitan District. I am in hopes you find this helpful in your search.

If you are researching the SelleckFamily, the thought occurred to me today that there used to be a Mrs. Robert Selleck, bookkeeper, who worked in this office for seven years. She just moved to 56 Armbruster Road, Henrietta, NY 14623 and she may be a link for you. However, I would like to suggest you wait until Fall to write her, as she and her husband along with 2 small children just moved and they are in the process of getting settled.

Good luck.

Sincerely yours,

Lorene S. Juengel

Dear Father Witheridge,

Enclosed is a copy of the entire Journal of Convention for the year 1797. As you can see it is quite small with little information. Also, the list is by clergy rather than by parish.

It was surprising to me that Trinity Church does not have the records that you have been looking for. I will check with their archivist in person next week to be sure, as all of my information leads me to think that the assistant is incorrect.

Also enclosed is your receipt for the cost of xeroxing.

Good luck, again. Let me know if and when I may be of further assistance.

JOURNAL, &c.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 3D, 1797.

The Clergy and Delegates assembled in Trinity Church, at half-past ten o'clock, A. M.

The Right Rev. Dr. Provoost, read prayers, and a sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Vandyke.

After Divine service, the testimonials of the Delegates were read, and approved.

The members then proceeded to the appointment of a Secretary; and Mr. Bisset was chosen.

The congregation of Christ Church in the town of Franklin, Dutchess county, was, on motion of the Rev. Mr. Rogers, and evidence stated by him and other members, recognised and received as a church in union with this Convention; and their Delegates, Mr. Uriah Mitchell and Mr. Archibald Campbell, were admitted to take their seats.

On motion of the Rev. Mr. Ireland,

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be given to the Rev. Mr. Vandyke for his excellent sermon preached before them this day, and that he be requested to publish the same.

On motion of the Rev. Dr. Moore, the minutes of the last Convention, together with the Constitution and Canons, were read.

Adjourned to half-past 10 o'clock to-morrow.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4TH, 1797.

The Convention met.

The Rev. Mr. Rattoone read prayers.

A report was given in by the Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Propagating the Gospel in the State of New York, accompanied with the minutes of the Committee, the letters and journal of the Rev. Mr. Wetmore, and the Treasurer's account of the state of the funds; all which were read, and approved by the Convention.

The Convention then proceeded to the election of the Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Propagating the Gospel in the State of New York; and the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Dr. Beach, Rev. Mr. Bisset, Dr. Charlton, Mr. Van Wagenen, and Mr. David Clarkson, were chosen.

The Treasurer gave a statement of his accounts and produced a certificate signed by two members of the Standing Committee, testifying that they were just and right.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Convention be given to Mr. Van Wagenen for his faithful services as Treasurer.

On motion of the Rev. Mr. Ireland, a canon was enacted for continuing the powers and functions of certain Committees and officers till a new election take place.

The Rev. Mr. Rattoone proposed a canon for the better ascertaining of the qualifications of candidates for Holy Orders; the further consideration of which, after some discussion, was postponed till to-morrow.

Agreeably to the fourth canon enacted in the last Convention, the Rev. Mr. Rogers and Rev. Mr. Ireland gave in to the Bishop the amount of their parochial registers, with a written account of the state of their parishes. A similar return which had been transmitted by the Rev. Mr. Thomas L. Moore, was also presented. They were read in the Convention, and ordered to be filed by the Secretary.

Adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5TH, 1797.

The Convention met.

The Rev. Mr. Rogers read prayers.

The Rev. Mr. Rattoone, after some discussion of the subject, agreed to the further postponement of the canon proposed by him yesterday; and,

On motion of Rev. Mr. Vandyke, seconded by Rev. Mr. Rattoone,
Resolved, That the Clerical and Lay Deputies from this Convention to the General Convention, be instructed to propose and advocate in that body the obtaining of a more effectual and guarded mode of ascertaining the qualifications of candidates for Holy Orders; and that the Bishop be requested to use his influence for the accomplishment of the same salutary purpose.

The Right Rev. Dr. Provoost, Rev. Mr. Nesbitt, Rev. Mr. Sayrs, and Rev. Mr. Van Horne, gave in the amount of their parochial registers.

The Rev. Dr. Moore communicated to the Convention a letter addressed to him by the Rev. Mr. Ellison, stating that some Lutheran clergymen had, in the name and on the behalf of the Consistory of the Lutheran Church in the State of New York, intimated to him a desire to have it proposed to this Convention that their Church might be united with the Protestant Episcopal Church in this State, and that their ministers might receive Episcopal ordination: Whereupon it was Resolved, That the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Mr. Ellison, and Rev. Mr. Rogers, be a Committee to meet such gentlemen of the Lutheran Church as may be duly appointed by their ecclesiastical authority to confer with them on this subject; and that, should it appear to the Conferees on the part of this Church proper and necessary to obtain the interposition of the General Convention for the accomplishment of this object, they shall be empowered, with the consent and advice of the Bishop, to make application, in the name of this Convention, to that body at its meeting in September next; and that they shall make report of their proceedings to the next State Convention.

The Convention proceeded to the appointment of the Standing Committee; and the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Dr. Beach, Rev. Mr. Cooper, Rev. Mr. Bissett, Dr. Charlton, General Clarkson, and Gerret Van Schoonhoven, and J. O. Hoffman, Esq's, were elected.

The Convention proceeded to the election of Deputies to the General Convention; and the Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Thomas L. Moore, Rev. Mr. Bissett, Rev. Mr. Rogers, Richard Harison, Henry Walton, John Delafield, Esq's, and Mr. Moses Rogers, were chosen.

Mr. Hubert Van Wagenen was elected Treasurer.

The Convention adjourned.

CANON.

It is hereby ordained that the Standing Committee, the Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Propagating the Gospel in the State of New York, the Deputies to the General Convention, the Treasurer, and the Secretary, shall continue in office, and exercise their respective functions during the year for which they are appointed, and until a new election take place.

NOTE.—There do not appear to have been any Conventions held in 1798, 1799, or 1800.

Note → "For the benefit of those who do not quite understand how it is that our records all come from the Congregational church, a word may well be added to what has already been written in the Preface of the first book. Not alone is it because such records are found to be the oldest and best, but it is well to remember that from the beginning of the settlement in 1635 to the year 1705 while there were, scattered here and there, a few Baptists, Episcopalians and Friends, no other organization of any kind existed. The whole territory was entirely theirs till, in 1705, a Baptist society was organized in Groton which stood alone of its kind for twenty years. In 1726 the second was formed at New London; and not till 1743 was the third, at North Stonington to be found.

"Up to this time there had been little deviation from the tenets of Congregationalism, though with the organization of the Baptists in the East, the few isolated Episcopalians of the West, after persistent effort from the year 1706, had succeeded in organization at Fairfield in 1723 the first Connecticut Episcopal parish. Yet the year 1750 found the latter with but twenty-five struggling parishes against 147 Congregational located in all parts of the colony." p. 4 (Preface)

The town of Darien was incorporated May, 1820, and taken from Stamford. The Congregational Church in Darien — formerly called Middlesex — was organized June, 1744. It is recorded that "one Sunday during the Revolution the church was suddenly surrounded by Tories and the British, and forty men (nearly all who were in church, including Dr. Mather, the pastor), and as many horses, were carried off to Long Island. Many of them never returned." The marriages recorded follow.

DESCENDANTS OF ROBERT LOCKWOOD,

WATERTOWN, MASSACHUSETTS,

A. D. 1680.

ROBERT LOCKWOOD

came from England about 1630 and settled in Watertown, Massachusetts, where six of his ten children were born, and where their births are recorded. He was made a freeman March 9th, 1636–37. (Mass. Rec., I., 372.) He was executor of the estate of Edmund Lockwood, supposed to be his brother; see Appendix. About 1646 he removed from Watertown, Mass., to Fairfield, Conn., where he died 1658. (Bolton's Hy. Westchester Co., N. Y., p. 108.) He was made a freeman of Connecticut May 20th, 1652. (Trumbull's Conn. Col. Rec., I., 231.) "This Court Goun'r John Winthrop (of Conn.) presiding, doth confirme Mr. Gold to be Leiften't. Nehe. Olmstead and Robert Lockwood to be Sergeants at Fairfield." (Conn. Col. Rec., I., 299.) He was appointed Sergeant at Fairfield in May, 1657. (Rev. Bouton's Hist. Dis. in 1851, p. 59.) His name is recorded as a settler at Fairfield as early as 1641. (N. E. H. and G. Reg., 7, 157.)

The names and dates of the births of his first six children are printed in nearly all the early historical works of New England. An inventory of his property was made Sept. 11th, 1658, by Anthony Wilson and John Banks. He left no Will.

Aprile ye 30th, 1646, he sold to Bryan Pendleton all the land granted to him by the town, also four acres of remote meadow, bought of Mr. Bridge, except one acre of patch meadow, sold Sept. 29th, 1645, to Edward Garfield. Soon after this he moved to Norwalk, Connecticut. (Bond's Watertown.)

In 1650 Robert Lockwood, of Fairfield, deeded to Rev. John Bishop the house and lot which he had purchased of Elias Bayley, Rev. Mr. Denton's attorney. (Hy. Stamford, p. 50.)

Eleven Lockwoods had been graduates of Yale College in 1834. (Savage.)

NOTE: Edward Garfield, above mentioned, is said to have been the ancestor of James Abram Garfield, President of the United States. His widow, Susannah, was appointed administratrix. The estate was administered upon by her October 20th, 1658. The widow, Mrs. Susannah Lockwood, married Jeffrey Ferris, and died at "Grinwich," December 23d, 1660. (Hy. Stamford, Conn., p. 158.)

"Gershom," for he said, "I have been a stranger, in a strange land." (Exodus ii. 22.)

He removed to Greenwich with his father before he was nine, and was only fifteen years of age when his father died.

"Lieut. Gershom Lockwood was the principal carpenter and builder in the town of Greenwich, and filled many offices of trust and importance." (Mead's His. of Greenwich, p. 113.)

"Gershom Lockwood was one of the twenty-seven proprietors of Greenwich." (Ib.)

"Gershom Lockwood and son in 1694–95 were taxed on £153. 15s." He made his Will November 22d, 1692, and was at that time called "Gershom Lockwood, Senior."

The plain blue slate headstone which marks his grave is well preserved, and bears the following inscription:

"Here lyes ye Body
of Mr. Gershom
Lockwood, aged
77 years, dec'd
March ye 12th,
1718–19."

Lieut. Gershom Lockwood married Lady Ann Millington, from England, daughter of Lord Millington. This lady came to this country in pursuit of her lover, a British army officer. Failing to find him, she taught school, and subsequently married Gershom Lockwood of Greenwich, Conn.

In 1660 her parents sent her a large oak chest, ingeniously carved on the outside, and strongly built; tradition says "it contained half a bushel of Guineas, and many fine silk dresses," etc., etc. This identical chest is now (1888) at Mr. Samuel Ferris's house in Greenwich, Connecticut. Lady Millington's granddaughter, Ann Lockwood, born 1713, married Samuel Ferris.

Note.—With reference to the statement as to Lady Millington, the compilers would say, the only information they have is from the memorandum on the cover of the chest, and the statements of elderly persons, now living, to whom the tradition has been handed down, as it undoubtedly has been through a number of generations. There was a Sir Thomas Millington, Knight, M.D., President of the College of Physicians, &c., in England, born in 1630 and died in 1702–4, who left a son, Thomas, and two daughters, named Anne and Mary. (Morant's History of Essex, England, vol. 2, p. 282.)

Millington.

It is said that Lord Millington had but two children, both daughters. The title may have become extinct in him, or gone to another male branch of the family.

A memorandum taken from the New York Observer in the year 1866, of a meeting held at the Society Library of New York city, says the foundation of the Library was in a great measure owing to a gift of books left by the will of the Rev. Dr. Millington, Rector of Stoke, Newington, London, England, to the "Society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts," and by this society it was presented to the Public Library of New York, now known as the Society Library. Dr. Millington died about 1720, and his Library came over in 1729. He left no heirs, and his will gave other property or funds to this "Society" for missionary purposes.

Note.—Lieut. Gershom Lockwood and Rev. Dr. Millington died within about one year of each other; there has been a tradition in the Ferris family that the doctor was a near relative of Lady Ann Millington, and as he died about the time of her husband, who was 77 years old, he may have been her brother. (Editor.)

Gershom Lockwood married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Montgomery) Townsend, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, New York. In the Townsend Memorial, pp. 87, 88, 91, and 132, I find the following:

John Townsend died in 1668, and, as he died intestate, his widow according to a prevailing custom divided his estate. "The 23d year of the reign of Charles II. King of England, and the tenth day of the fifth month 1671," i. e., July 10th, 1671.

In speaking of her daughter Elizabeth, she says:

"To my eldest daughter Elizabeth, although not above mentioned, yet she is to have with what she hath already received, £30, all at such pay as passes between man and man, after the rate of Indian Corn at 3 shillings a bushel, and wheat at 5s."

"2d. To the said Elizabeth or her husband, Gideon Wright, towards her portion, I give with what her father had before given her already, first two cows, 10 pounds, a young horse 5 pounds, a bed and furniture 10 pounds, 2 sheep 1 pound, 1 kettle 1 pound, in all £27, and Gideon her husband is to have £3 more, and that will be £30 in all."

"Elizabeth, daughter of John Townsend 1st, married Gideon, son of Peter Wright, and had eight children. After his death she married Gershom Lockwood, who came from Connecticut, and returned there after his marriage to her."

11. JONATHAN LOCKWOOD, JR. (Robert,[1] Jonathan[2]), born about 1663?, died November 9th, 1689, s.p., son of Jonathan and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood.

"Jonathan Lockwood, Jr., son of Leftenant Jonathan Lockwood, deceased, departing the world, upon ye 9th day of November, 1689." (Greenwich Records.)

12. ROBERT LOCKWOOD (Robert,[1] Jonathan[2]), born in Greenwich, Ct., died between May 7th, 1731, and January 23d, 1732; son of Jonathan and Mary (Ferris) Lockwood, married Mary ———.

Calls himself "Husbandman" of Greenwich, Ct. 1694–95, Robert Lockwood was taxed on £61. March 1st, 1698, town sold him Hosick meadows. May 17th, 1731, made his will, wife Mary and son Jonathan, executors. January 23d, 1732, will probated.

The first postmaster was Rufus Bell, in 1814. There was but one post-office in the town, and that was located in a building which stood nearly opposite the present parsonage of the Congregational church.

CHAPTER XXVI.

DARIEN (Continued).

ECCLESIASTICAL, CIVIL, AND MILITARY HISTORY.

Congregational Church—Presbyterian Church—St. Luke's Church—Methodist Episcopal Church—Incorporation of the Parish—Organization of the town—Selectmen from 1820 to 1881—List of Town Clerks—Representatives from 1820 to 1880—Darien in the War of the Rebellion—List of Soldiers.

How early separate religious services were held in this town no existing records show. Probably for years before Dr. Mather was settled here, in 1744, there had been preaching, with more or less regularity.

At a society meeting, held in the first society of Stamford, Dec. 20, 1733, by vote "the society agree that those particular persons that pay to the minister at Five-Mile River shall be discharged from paying their proportion of Mr. Wright's rate during the term of three months, provided they bring sufficient proof to the society's committee that they pay as much to the minister there as their proportion to Mr. Wright for the time above said."

In 1734 forty-six planters, on the west side of Norwalk River petition for a new society. The next notice taken of this project, as far as records show, was simultaneously in Stamford and at the May session of the Legislature, in 1736. Sixty-nine petitions, representing eighty families, and a list of five thousand eight hundred and eighty pounds, made a formal request to be incorporated as an ecclesiastical society by themselves. The petition was negatived, only to be renewed in October of the same year by fifty-six men. The urgency of the petitioners led to the appointment of a special committee to examine their claims. In May, 1737, the committee report favorably, assigning as proper boundaries of the society the Five-Mile River on the east and the Noroton on the west. In October of this year the act of incorporation was passed. It is curious to note upon what frail boundaries they relied. The moment they leave the rivers, which they might presume to be permanent, they fix upon the most perishable objects, in the most indeterminate of localities, to answer as permanent bounds for the society. On the west side of the parish, to separate it from the older society of Stamford, they define, as the westernmost limits of Middlesex, "an old chimney about two and a half miles east of the Stamford meeting-house," and "so to run a strait line midway between Stephen Bishop's house and David Dibble's house," and thence to where the Norotor crosses the Canaan line. But this separation was no to be a peaceable one. Though no blood seems to have been shed in the struggle, there were many earnest and clamorous appeals and remonstrances between the parishes themselves and between the parishes and the Legislature; so that the peaceful settlement of the Middlesex seceders was not accomplished before the summer of 1741, about a dozen years after the need of such a society was felt and its incorporation demanded.

Eleven somewhat lengthy documents now on file in the State library at Hartford testify to the great interest shown in both the old and the new parishes in the proposed division. These papers indicate the most obstinate determination on the part of the first society not to allow any further alienation of any part of their ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Assuming a sort of indefeasible right to the territory, the society, by a unanimous vote of all excepting the seceding portion, declared that they would "not grant to the people at the east end of the town the liberty of a society apart." They also appointed Capt. Jonathan Hoyt and Mr. Jonathan Maltby as special agents to the Legislature to report the reasons of the town against forming the new society. But the seceders at length prevailed.

The names of the petitioners to the "Five-Mile river peticion," dated the second Thursday of October 1736, are Thomas Reed, Edmond Waring, Jonatha Cristy, Jonathan Bates, Robert Mills, John Reed Joshua Scofield, Isaac Bishop, Jonathan Bell, Joshu Morehouse, John Bates, Jonathan Petit, David Selleck, Nathaniel Bates, Edmond Waring, Jr., Josep Pengban, Thomas Reed, Jr., John Petit, Joseph Whiting, John Reed, Jr., James Slason, Jr., David Bate Elias Reed, John Raymond, Nathaniel Selleck, Davi Scofield, Samuel Richards, Joseph Waterbury, Jon Weed, Deliverance Slason, Charles Weed, Theophilu Bishop, John Andrus, Nathaniel How, John Dea David Waterbury, Ebenezer Bishop, Zachariah Dibble, Thomas Bishop, Samuel Bryan, Nathan Sturgi Benjamin Dibble, David Slason, David Dibble, Nathan Selleck, Nathan Waring, Samuel Brinswad Ebenezer Green, John Bolt, Jacob Waring, Joh Waring, Daniel Reed, Abraham Raymond, Comfo Raymond, Isaac Wood, and Samuel Reed.

The first record of a society's meeting in Middlese bears date June 15, 1789. Ensign Nathan Bell w its moderator, and Joshua Morehouse was appointe society's clerk. The meeting was held at the hou of John Bates. At an adjourned meeting held Ju 21st, Thomas Reed, Jonathan Bates, Daniel Ree Isaac Bishop, Jonathan Selleck, Samuel Reed, a Ensign Jonathan Bell were appointed a committee "caryon" the building of the "metting-hous." Th ere instructed to make the house fifty feet long, hirty feet wide, and twenty feet post.

They then voted a tax to meet the expenses of the uilding, and to pay Mr. Buckingham "for His reaching the time agreed." Jonathan Weed was ppointed collector. The society records from this ate to that of the organization of the church show iat the following ministers labored here either simly as supplies or as candidates: Rev. Mr. Birdseye, ideon Mills, Ebenezer Mills, David Judson, Mr. lls, and Mather. At a meeting held Dec. 11, 1741, ie society voted, by a large majority,—forty-two to our,—to settle Mr. Judson. But to give every man i the society an opportunity to vote, Mr. Morehouse, ie clerk, was ordered to carry a paper with the vote about and read the same to those persons that beong to said society which were not at said meeting, iat they might have opportunity to subscribe to the ame."

At their meeting Sept. 1, 1742, while Mr. Mather as still preaching as a candidate for settlement, we nd this vote: "Ye Society by major vote granted to e Rev. Mr. Right (Wright) to preach in any part of Middlesex parish on any needful occasion as often as e shall see fit."

A record of the doings of this society in 1747 repecting the seating of the meeting-house explains iore fully the process of this custom than any record ow existing of any other parish in town, and is worth reserving as a curiosity of the times. Besides, it ndicates some of the principal men of that day in his part of the town.

By the first vote the society decided to seat the neeting by a committee.

"2. pr vote ye society a lowed ye first pue to be ye hiest in Dignity.
"3. pr vote the 2 pew to be 2 hiest in Dignity.
"4. pr vote, the fore seat alowed to be the 3 hiest in Dignity.

The above record is of date Aug. 9, 1747, and the next meeting of the society was held "geneWary ye 8th, 1747–48." A record of this meeting is also so characteristic of the times as to justify insertion:

"Voted yt Mr. Jona. In 1837 John V. White crossed the ocean with his wife and family to seek a new home in the United States. He was a landscape gardener and, finding in the wealthy and cultured residents of this section most appreciative employers, he located at Danbury, Conn., where he and his wife lived to the advanced ages of eighty and seventy-four years, respectively, Mr. White dying September 19, 1868, and Mrs. White on October 8, 1862.

As George H. White was but a lad when he came to Danbury, his education was continued there in the common schools, which he attended in the evenings, his days being spent in working with his father. In 1840 he left the paternal roof and went to New York City, where for twelve years he was engaged in the painting business at the corner of Eighth avenue and Twentieth street. On returning to Danbury in 1852, he established himself in a house and sign painting business, which he continued successfully until his retirement in 1889. For about eight years he was interested also in photography, in which he had a fine custom. He has acquired a goodly competence, and owns a number of houses in the city of Danbury, while his own residence, at No. 103 Rose Hill, Danbury, is a beautiful place, the grounds, comprising about two acres, showing his artistic taste in arrangement. The fine large trees were planted by his own hand, and the beautifying of the place has been a pleasant occupation for his spare time for many years. When he purchased the property in 1851 it was a farm, his house being the only one within some distance, but it is now in the city, and is built up closely with residences. Nearly all the large trees on the hill were planted by Mr. White, and he has straightened and opened streets through his property, being ever ready to do all in his power to improve and beautify, not only his own place, but the neighborhood in general. The interior of his house is adorned with numerous oil paintings of considerable merit, the work of his own hand.

Mr. White has been twice married. His first wife, Caroline Michaels, daughter of John and Amelia Michaels, of New Hurley, N. Y., died in April, 1874, leaving one daughter, Caroline, who married William Jacobus, a hardware merchant at No. 90 Chambers street, New York City; they have one child, George Richard Jacobus. In 1882 Mr. White married Miss Anna M. Ritch, and by this union he has one son, George Ritch, who is still at home. Mr. White is a member of the Episcopal Church; his wife is a Methodist. In politics he is a Republican, and for many years he has been prominent in fraternal society work, being one of the oldest members of Union Lodge, No. 40, F. & A. M., at Danbury. He was also active at one time in the I. O. O. F., but the lodge to which he belonged surrendered its charter, and he did not again join the Order.

HERMAN SELLECK (deceased) had lived on his farm in the town of New Canaan, Fairfield county, for half a century, and his father and grandfather also carried on agricultural pursuits in that town, where the family have been well-known for the last century.

Jacob Selleck, grandfather of Herman, was born in the town of Stamford, of Welsh ancestry, and early removed to New Canaan, being a resident of Canoe Hill when the town was organized. He was a prominent member of the Episcopal Church at Norwalk, in which he served as vestryman. For his first wife he married a Miss Fitch, of Norwalk, and after her death he wedded her cousin, also named Fitch.

Samuel Selleck, son of Jacob, was born in Carter Street, in the town of New Canaan, where he was reared, acquiring his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. Under his father's guidance he was early instructed in the science of agriculture, to which he devoted his time, farming on the paternal homestead until 1836, when he sold it to Stephen Hoyt, the nurseryman. Removing to Orleans county, N. Y., he spent his remaining days there, passing away in 1840 when a comparatively young man. He married Ann DeForest, who survived him many years, dying in New Canaan in 1872. They were the parents of ten children, namely: Caroline, Charlotte, Herman, George, Charles, Julia, Mary, Benjamin, William and Eliza, all of whom are now deceased.

Herman Selleck was born in 1823, in Carter Street, town of New Canaan, on the family homestead occupied by his father and grandfather. His early boyhood was passed there, and for about five years he lived in Orleans county, N. Y., whither his parents had removed in 1836. He lived on his late farm from the year 1841, with the exception of one year spent in Morris, Ill., and his entire life was devoted to farming, in which he met with encouraging and well-merited success, acquiring, by years of industrious toil, a fine farm and a comfortable home. He did not give much attention to outside affairs, but he served acceptably for one term as assessor of his town. Socially, he was affiliated with the Grange, and in religious faith he was a member of the M. E. Church. He passed from earth about 1897.

Mr. Selleck was married at Darien, Conn., to Miss Adeline M. Hoyt, daughter of Rufus Hoyt. There have been no children. Rufus Hoyt was born in Darien, a son of Thaddeus Hoyt, and passed his entire life in the town of his birth, engaging during his active years in farming. He married Sarah E. Reed, and of the ten children born to them we have the following record: Louisa Rebecca (Mrs. Charles Rogers) is living in Danbury; Frances Elizabeth lives in Darien; Thaddeus married a Miss Hutchins, and lives in Darien; Adeline M. is the widow of Herman Selleck; Sarah Jane makes her home in Darien; John Woolsey, Oscar Rufus and Edward Mortimer are deceased; Mary Virginia lives in Darien; and Charles Reed is a resident of Norwalk.

HON. JULIUS B. CURTIS, of the Fairfield County Bar, is a well-known resident of Stamford. He has for many years been one of the leading members of the Bar, a fact which alone gives abundant proof of his ability and high character.

The family of our subject is of English origin, and they have a coat of arms, the right to use which was confirmed in the time of Charles I. The first ancestor of whom we find a definite account was Capt. William Curtis, who came to America from England at a very early date with a brother John, and settled at Stratford, Fairfield Co., Conn. He became prominent among the pioneers of that locality, and was sent to represent them in the Colonial Assembly twelve times. His military title was gained by his appointment as captain of forces raised for service in King Philip's war, and to serve against the Dutch at New Netherlands, with power to appoint his inferior officers, Capt. Josiah Curtis, the next in the line of descent, was born in Stratford, and engaged in farming there. He served in the militia in his day, and was also active in political movements, being elected in 1716 as a member of the Assembly.

Benjamin Curtis, the great-great-grandfather of our subject, was a native of Stratford, but made his home in Newtown, where he followed agricultural pursuits during his later years. He too was a member of the General Assembly.

Benjamin Curtis (2), our subject's great-grandfather, was born in Newtown, and resided there throughout his life. He served as selectman of the town. He married (first) Fedima Nichols, and (later) wedded Mary DeVine.

Philo Curtis (a son by the first wife, Fedima), grandfather of Hon. J. B. Curtis, was a lifelong resident of Newtown, where he died in 1818. He was an influential citizen, an Episcopalian in religion, a Federalist in politics, and for many years he held the office of selectman of his town. His wife, Huldah (Hubbell), was a native of Weston, Fairfield county. They had eight children: Nichols, our subject's father; Carlos, who went west to reside; Huldah, who married M. C. Hatch, of Oxford, Conn.; Fedima, wife of Thomas Beers; Polly, wife of John Glover; Betsey, who married Amariah Beers; Philo, a resident of Newtown, and Julia, who never married.

Nichols Curtis was born September 27, 1784, in Newtown, and was educated there in the district schools and at a private school taught by Capt. Luther Harris. Throughout his life he followed farming as an occupation, occasionally teaching, and until 1822 he resided at the old homestead in Newtown. Like all of his family he was a public-spirited citizen, and although he did not aspire to political honors he took much interest in a quiet way in local affairs, being especially active in the cause of education and in religious work as a member of the Episcopal Church. He died April 20, 1852, and his wife, Sarah Ann Bennett, who was born June 4, 1786, the daughter of Amos Bennett, of Newtown, survived him a little over six years, breathing her last on October 30, 1858. Our subject is the younger of two children: The elder, Charlotte Nichols, married Monroe D. Downs, of Southbury, Conn., and died in 1881.

Hon. Julius Bolivar Curtis was born December 10, 1825, in the town of Newtown, where his youth was spent. His education was begun in the public schools of the locality, and he also attended the Newtown Academy and a private school of academic character for short periods. These opportunities were not sufficient for his wishes, however, and he is largely indebted to private reading and study for his wide range of information. His professional studies were begun in the summer of 1846 with Hon. Edward Hinman, of Southbury, and afterward continued under Isaac M. Sturges, Esq., then of Newtown, and Hon. Amos S. Treat. Later he entered the law school at Ballston Springs, Saratoga Co., N. Y., where he spent the summer of 1850. In the same year he was admitted to practice at the December session of the Fairfield county court, and in the following summer he opened an office at Greenwich, this county, where his worth was speedily recognized, and rewarded by a fine practice. In the fall of 1864 he removed to Stamford, and has since continued in practice there. In 1867 he was elected judge of the probate court for the district of Stamford, and he

He makes a specialty of dairying, and supplies a large amount of milk to the local market. His success in his chosen line of work indicates executive ability as well as energy, and he ranks among the substantial citizens of his locality. He is not married, but is prominent in social life, and attends Trinity Church at Nichols, with which his honored father was so long identified.

WILLIAM HOLMES, a leading citizen of Shelton, has for many years held a responsible position with the Derby Silver Company, and his long and faithful service is in itself an evidence of mental and moral worth.

The Holmes family is of English stock, and William Holmes (1), the grandfather of our subject, was a lifelong resident of the old country. William Holmes (2), the father of our subject, was born in Leeds, England, where he married Miss Lucy Walker, also a native of that city. About 1845 he came with his family to America, locating first at Derby, this county, where he was employed as foreman by the Shelton Company. In 1856 he removed to Madison, Wis., and operated a gristmill and sawmill for about three years, when his mills were destroyed by fire. In 1859 he returned to Derby and took his old position again, and a few years later he located in Shelton (then known as Huntington) and engaged in business as a florist, continuing until his death in March, 1892. He took an interest in all that concerned his adopted country, and was a stanch Republican, while he and his wife remained devout members of the Episcopal Church. They had ten children: Joshua, Mary A. (deceased), Walter (deceased), Lucy, William, Lillie, Emma (deceased), Florence, Royal and Josephine. The mother is yet living.

Our subject was born September 6, 1858, in Madison, Wis., but the greater portion of his life has been spent in the town of Huntington. His education was chiefly obtained in the schools of Shelton, and on leaving school he entered the employ of the Derby Silver Company, with which he has remained ever since, except for three and one-half years spent with the Meriden Plating Company, of Meriden, Conn. In 1880 he became foreman of the plating department of the Derby Silver Company, a position which he still holds. His fellow citizens have not been slow to recognize his abilities, and he is one of the leading advisers of the Republican organization in his locality. He has been (and still is) chairman of the Republican town and borough committee for eleven years, and he has also held the office of assessor for the borough. Socially he is prominent as a member of Ousatonic Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F., the N. E. Order of Protection, the Order of United Workmen, and he is one of the charter members of Echo Hose Company, in which he has held every office, including that of chief engineer.

On April 14, 1881, Mr. Holmes married Miss Agnes T. Trumpbour, by whom he has had three children: Everett and Leslie, who are at home; and Gerald, who died July 28, 1888, when but five days old. Mrs. Holmes is a native of Ellenville, Ulster Co., N. Y., and a daughter of John C. and Julia (Collins) Trumpbour, in their day well-known residents of that town. Mr. Trumpbour, who was engaged in a very successful bakery business, died at Stamford, Conn., June 22, 1899, at the age of sixty-four years. Her family is noted for patriotism, her paternal grandfather and great-grandfather having served in the Revolutionary army, the latter having been aide to George Washington, while her father was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war. Her great-grandfather Crawford (on her grandmother's side) was the oldest Methodist minister in the New York Conference when he died at the age of ninety-one years.

JWOOLSEY SELLECK, whose sudden death on Saturday, January 8, 1898, is still fresh in the minds of the citizens of Stamford, was a prominent man in the locality in which he lived, and a native and lifelong resident of the town of Stamford. He was born February 22, 1840, in the house now occupied by David Bonner, and was the son of Joseph Selleck, who was in his day a well-known farmer of Stamford township.

Joseph Selleck, the grandfather of the subject of this memoir, was born in the town of Stamford February 14, 1759, and lived to a very advanced age, dying March 16, 1846. On December 31, 1786, he married Miss Phebe Clock, who was a native of Darien, Conn., born November 17, 1771, and they became the parents of six children, namely: Polly (who married James Bell), John, Jesse, Hannah, Joseph and Isaac. During the war of 1812 he enlisted in the army, and served as teamster.

Joseph Selleck, son of the above, was born in 1802 in the town of Stamford, in a house which then faced on Selleck street. He passed his entire life in his native place, where he engaged in farming, and, like his father, he also owned vessel interests. He married Emily F. Scofield, daughter of Richard Scofield, and their union was blessed with seven children—Emily

Frances, the widow of Harvey Hoyt; Phebe C. (deceased), who married Gideon C. Ferris; Henry R., living in West avenue, Stamford; J. Woolsey; Isaac; Harvey, who was killed by lightning; and Annie. Joseph was an active member of the Connecticut State militia, in which he held the rank of captain. He was a Republican in politics.

J. Woolsey Selleck attended the public schools of the town of his birth, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he followed all his life, also engaging in the market business, in Oliver street, from 1869 to 1875. His career was a splendid example of a life of industry and energetic purpose, for he rose by his own exertions to a position of affluence and influence, and made an enviable name for uprightness and honesty of character wherever he was known. His pleasant manners and kindly disposition won for him friends on all sides, and his generosity to the poor and unfortunate, though quietly exercised, made him their special friend, for he was never known to refuse aid if deserved. Mr. Selleck was an ardent Democrat, always ready and willing to do all in his power for the welfare of the party, in which he was a local power. Public affairs in his neighborhood received a considerable share of his time and attention, especially during the later years of his life; and being an energetic and efficient worker, and a man worthy the confidence of his fellowmen, he became very popular in the ranks of Stamford's politicians. In 1885 he was elected selectman, and so well did he fulfill the expectations of his constituency that he was re-elected annually for the five succeeding years, during which time he discharged the duties of the incumbency with ability and faithfulness, never allowing outside influences or personal feelings to draw him aside from the path of duty. His straightforwardness and integrity were never questioned.

Mr. Selleck was married in Elmira, N. Y., to Miss Helen M. St. John, daughter of Hiram St. John, and by her had four children, viz.: Emma Frances, Joseph Milton, Walter and Clara Helen. The daughters are both now deceased; Milton is employed in the St. John Wood Working Company; he married Mary E. Williams. In 1868 Mr. Selleck erected the residence occupied by his widow, and which stands just east of the house in which he was born. Mr. Selleck's decease, on the night of January 8, 1898, was a shock to the entire community. Early in the evening he went to spend a few social hours with Dewitt Betts, a neighbor, and started for home about ten o'clock. At 6 o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Selleck, unable to account for her husband's continued absence, sent an employe to Mr. Betts' to ask whether he had spent the night with his friends, and on his way through the fields Mr. Smith discovered the dead body of his employer. Hurrying back to the house with the news, the family notified Medical Examiner Rowell, who responded quickly and rendered a verdict of death from apoplexy. The body was removed to the house, not many yards distant, as soon as Dr. Rowell gave permission, and on Wednesday, January 12, was laid to rest in Woodland Cemetery, Stamford. The funeral was largely attended by people in all ranks of life. Mr. Selleck was deeply mourned by his wide circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the vicinity, who realized that in his death Stamford lost one of her best citizens. Mr. Selleck was a great lover of sport, and was an experienced hunter, having spent many weeks in the enjoyment of that pastime in Canada.

REV. THEODORE L. DIBBLE, now living retired in the town of New Canaan, Fairfield county, is a native of Westchester county, N. Y., born July 8, 1836, in Pound Ridge. He is of English descent, his great-grandfather having been one of four brothers who came from England and settled in this country.

Simeon Dibble, grandfather of our subject, a farmer in Westchester county, N. Y., died in 1876, aged eighty-four years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. He married Mary Brown, and to this union were born one son and three daughters. The father was a worthy member of the Bedford M. E. Church.

Jonathan Dibble, son of Simeon and Mary (Brown) Dibble, was born at Pound Ridge, N. Y., and was reared in that place. In early manhood he went from the home farm to New York City, where he followed the trade of locksmith for a number of years. He married Mary M. Coggshall, a native of Pound Ridge, and they had five children: Theodore L.; Samuel, who is now a resident of Stamford, Conn.; George B., of Jersey City; and Frank B. and Annette A., both deceased. The father passed from earth in 1855, a devout, lifelong member of the M. E. Church.

Theodore L. Dibble in his youth lived in New York City, and was given a good education in the elementary branches, attending the public schools and also a private school. For seven years he was employed in mercantile business, after which he resumed study at Bedford, N. Y. In 1858 he commenced teaching at Pound Ridge, continuing to follow that profession for six and one-half years, until, in the spring of 1864, he en-tional Church. Politically, he is a stanch Republican, and although he is no office-seeker he has served as constable one year. He is a straightforward business man and a valued citizen, one who worthily enjoys the public confidence.

WILLIAM F. NORTHROP, senior member of the firm of Northrop & Son, of Southport, Fairfield Co., Conn., is one of the leading citizens of that thriving town, with whose business interests he has been prominently identified for many years. He is a native of the "Nutmeg State," born November 6, 1836, in Kent, Litchfield county, son of Alvin Northrop, who was one of the two sons of Amos Northrop, the other being named Garry. Both became shoemakers.

Alvin Northrop was born in Chatham, New York State. He learned the trade of shoemaker, and followed it during his earlier manhood, in about 1846 removing to Greens Farms, Fairfield Co., Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life. He worked at his trade during the winter, and at farming in the summer, becoming one of the substantial, respected farmers of this locality. When a young man he married Miss Sarah Wakeman Alvord, and they became the parents of the following named children: Julia B. (Mrs. Charles Bulkeley), who died at Greens Farms; Francis N., deceased in childhood; William F.; Frances Josephine (Mrs. Charles A. Meeker), who died at Greens Farms; George E., of Southport; and Louisa A. (Mrs. George B. Mills), who died at Greens Farms. The father and mother both passed away at Greens Farms, aged seventy-three and seventy-seven years, respectively, and their remains rest in the East cemetery at Fairfield. They were Methodists in religious connection.

Up to the age of ten years William F. Northrop lived in his native county, attending the public schools there when possible, though he commenced work when only eight years old, being obliged to help at home on account of his father's ill health. He came with the family to Greens Farms, and up to the age of seventeen worked for different farmers, as he had been reared to agricultural pursuits from his earliest boyhood. He then commenced to learn the carpenter's trade under John Kerley, of Waterbury, Conn., receiving $60 and board for his first year's services. After completing his apprenticeship he immediately started out on his own account in Greens Farms, although at the time he was but a lad. For about two years he was employed in a carriage shop at Wolcottville (now Torrington), Conn., but he returned to Greens Farms and resumed contracting, finally, in February, 1858, locating in Southport, where he has ever since remained. In the meantime, after his marriage, he had farmed on a small scale, raising onions and garden truck about one year. On coming to Southport Mr. Northrop entered the employ of Sherman & Jelliff, builders and contractors, and remained with them as employe until 1865, when the firm dissolved and he continued with Mr. Jelliff, who succeeded to the business, after about one year becoming a partner to the latter gentleman, in connection with the lumber business, with whom he was in all for seventeen years. After Mr. Jelliff's retirement Mr. Northrop and his brother, George E., carried on the business under the firm name of Northrop Bros., this partnership lasting until January 1, 1897, when the present firm of Northrop & Son was established. During the preceding years, in addition to their extensive building and contracting business, the Northrop Bros. had engaged in other lines, and when the present partnership was formed the original branch was dropped, the firm now dealing in coal, lumber and builders' supplies, in which they are the leaders in this section. Mr. Northrop is a self-made man in the best sense of the term, and he has in all his dealings gained and retained an enviable reputation for integrity and sterling honesty, commanding the respect of his business associates wherever he goes.

At the age of twenty-one years Mr. Northrop was united in marriage with Miss Abby J. Baker, of Greens Farms, daughter of Ebenezer Baker, and two children blessed this union, viz.: Fred E., a graduate of Yale University, who is now his father's partner in business; and Ella A., who died when five years old. Mr. and Mrs. Northrop are devout and active members of the Methodist Church, in which he has been one of the foremost workers for years, holding all the offices, and he is at present serving as trustee. He is also an ardent advocate of the temperance cause, and sympathizes strongly with the Prohibition movement. In political sentiment he is a Republican. Fraternally, he affiliates with Pequonnock Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

HON. WILLIAM BURR HILL, one of the most prosperous and well-to-do agriculturists of Fairfield county, is a native of Connecticut, born January 5, 1826, at Redding, where in the district schools he received a liberal education.

From some of the old documents of the Colonial History of Hartford, Conn., it is learned that the ancestors of the Hill family, of which our subject is a member, were English, the first to come to this country being William Hill, the date of whose advent on these shores was 1632, twelve years after the "Mayflower's" first arrival. For a time he located at Dorchester, Mass., thence removing to Windsor, on the Connecticnt river, having bought land there. Later he came to Fairfield county, Conn., where he passed the rest of his days. In 1636 he was elected selectman of his town; was auditor of public accounts in 1639; in 1639 was appointed to view arms and ammunition in the town; was elected deputy or representative, in which incumbency he served from 1639 to 1641, also in 1644; after his service in the House of Representatives was elected assistant senator, and collector of customs at Fairfield, and in 1652–53 he again served in the House of Representatives. By his wife Sarah he had children: Sarah, William, Joseph, Ignatius, James and Elizabeth, of whom,

William Hill died December 19, 1684. By his wife Elizabeth had children: Sarah was the wife of Richard Widow; William died in 1728; Joseph, in 1690; John, in 1727; Eliphalet, in 1695; Ignatius and James (no record).

Deacon William Hill, great-great-great-great-grandfather of our subject, died in 1737; by his wife Sarah he had children: Joseph, William and David. Of these, Joseph, great-great-great-grandfather of our subject, was born April 1, 1699, and married Miss Abigail Dunon, who was born March 30, 1701, and died April 25, 1774. He died March 6, 1797. Children: Abigail, born March 21, 1732, married David Gould; Sarah, born August 21, 1733, married William Wakeman; David, born April 22, 1737, never married; Ebenezer, born February 26, 1742; Jabez, great-great-grandfather of our subject; and Moses, born June 11, 1748. Of these,

Jabez, born June 17, 1744, was a man of considerable ability, and served as a major in the Revolutionary army. He settled in the town of Weston, Fairfield county, and married Miss Sarah Read, daughter of Colonel Read, after whom the town of Redding was named, and three children were born to them: Sarah, wife of Timothy Blatt; John R., who married Betsey Sanford; and Moses, great-grandfather of our subject. Jabez Hill died of consumption October 9, 1779. Of his family, Moses was born January 11, 17—, and died October 13, ——. He was married June 17, 1773, to Miss Esther Burr, who was born May 29, 1755, and died October 6, 1836, aged eighty-one years, and their children were: William, grandfather of our subject; Abigail, born October 14, 1776; and Esther, born June 17, 1777.

William Hill was born April 30, 1774, in Greenfield, Conn., and was a lifelong farmer. He married Betsey Barlow, who was born August 3, 1778, daughter of Nathaniel Barlow, and died September 9, 1864. Children: Bradley, father of our subject; Abigail, born November 12, 1800; Horace, born December 15, 1802; Burr, born December 23, 1804; Betsey (1), born August 2, 18—; Betsey (2); Ebbie, born August 23, 18—; and William, born October 6, 1807.

Bradley Hill was born September 9, 1798, in the town of Greenfield, Fairfield Co., Conn., and was a lifelong farmer. In the old-time training days he was a member of a troop of calvary, and shouldered his flint-lock musket with all the ardor of a true patriot. In religious faith he was a member of the Congregational Church. By his wife, Betsey (Banks), daughter of Zelmon B. Banks, he had children as follows: Abbie M., born September 27, 1823, married Lemuel Sanford; William B. is our subject; Sarah E., born January 31, 1836, is unmarried; and Arthur B. and Albert (twins), born May 28, 1847, the former of whom married Alice St. John, the latter being unmarried.

William B. Hill, the subject proper of these lines, on leaving school engaged in farming, and has ever since devoted his undivided time to that occupation, giving special attention to the buying, rearing and selling of cattle and horses, his business operations in this line extending to the West and various points. He has been quite prominent in politics, as a Whig (which party he joined in 1826) and a Republican, and has filled all the town offices; has served as selectman, as constable frequently, and for many years as a justice of the peace. In 1865–67 he represented his town in the State Legislature with characteristic ability and patriotism.

On April 26, 1854, Mr. Hill married Miss Katie A. Selleck, a daughter of Nathaniel and Eunice (Hull) Selleck, of Danbury. A brief record of the children born to this union is as follows: (1) Helen S., born May 10, 1856, in Redding, Conn., married C. W. Merchant, a prosperous farmer of Redding, and they have one child. (2) Nathaniel B., born July 30, 1859, in Redding, is a farmer and dairyman; he married Mary E. Morehouse, and has one child—Helena L. (3) Celia F., born August 21, 1863, married Walter P. Rowland, a farmer of Weston, and they have one child—Charles B. (4) Sarah M., born September 26, 1865, married Prof. Louis B. Treadwell, professor of biology in Miami (Ohio) College, and they have two children—Lois, born July 13, 1893, and Alvin H., born July 15, 1896. (5) Eunice P., born January 19, 1867, married F. B. Wickes, a foreman hatter of Bethel, Conn., and they have one child—David M. (6) Mary E., born February 22, 1870, married William G. Fish, a farmer of Redding. (7) William B., Jr., born May 27, 1871, is a farmer in the town of Redding; he married Eva L. Ferris, daughter of John Ferris, of Greenfield, Conn., and they have one child—Kate F., born September 23, 1894.

Nathaniel Selleck, father of Mrs. William B. Hill, was born in 1801 in the town of Danbury, Conn., and was a lifelong farmer. In politics he was originally a Whig, later, during the Civil war, becoming a Democrat. He married Miss Eunice Hull, who was born in 1809, daughter of Dennie and Polly (Platt) Hull, farming people of Redding, Conn., and children as follows were born to them: (1) Nathaniel B., a hatter by trade, was thrice married—to Sarah M. Burr, Decie M. Sherwood, and Martha Roscoe, respectively—and of his children one son, Nathaniel, is a physician in Danbury (he married Miss Mary Benedict). (2) David M., who resides in California, married Celia F. Miller, and has children—Eunice, Arthur, Katie, Laura and Oliver. (3) Ethan F., a carpenter by trade, died in Danbury; he married Julia Goodsell, and had one child—Caroline Selleck. (4) Oliver F., who was a carpenter in Danbury, married Mary Goodsell, and they had two children—William R. and Dora. (5) Katie A. (wife of our subject), born July 23, 1835, in Danbury, received her earlier education there and afterward attended the Normal School at New Britain, subsequently teaching school for some time prior to her marriage with Hon. W. B. Hill. By a second marriage Nathaniel Selleck had one son, Eugene W., who married Clara Banks.

Benjamin Selleck, grandfather of Mrs. Hill, was born in Maryland, and was the owner of a large plantation in the South; he was also extensively engaged in contracting. He married Hanna Taylor, of Ridgefield, Conn., and had children: Nathaniel, mentioned above; Hanford, married to Betsey Bennett; Benjamin, married to Phebe Wood; and Katie A., who died young.

NEHEMIAH PERRY, M. D. For more than two hundred years the Perry family has been noted for the achievements of its members in professional lines, and especially in the science of medicine. The subject of this sketch, who recently retired after a successful practice of forty-five years in Ridgefield, is the fifth in the line of medical practitioners who have brought distinction to the name of Perry, his career completing an unbroken record of one hundred and fifty years in which some one of his family has been in active practice in Ridgefield. As a physician and surgeon he has fully sustained the prestige of his name, winning a place in the front ranks of the profession, and during his long term of practice he has so established himself in the affectionate regard of the community that the following history will be read with unusual interest.

The first ancestor of whom we have definite knowledge was Richard Perry, a lawyer, who came from England in 1637 and settled at New Haven. In 1649 he received a grant of land in Fairfield county, where many of his descendants have remained. Richard Perry's son Nathaniel, born in 1652, died in 1681; he married, in 1675, Hester, daughter of Richard Lyon. Their son Joseph, born in 1677, died in 1753; his third wife was Mary, daughter of Michael Clugstone. Their son Micah (or Michael), born in 1721, died in 1797; he married, in 1742, Grace, daughter of Peter Sturges. Their son David was the grandfather of our subject.

Dr. David Perry was born in this county in 1747, and in 1772 settled in Ridgefield, where he was engaged in the practice of medicine for fifty years. He often rode to Bridgeport, and even to New York City, for text-books, and he acquired a wide reputation for skill and learning. He married Hannah Brown, by whom he had six children, viz.: David, who married Clarissa Benedict, of Ridgefield; Samuel, who married a Miss Catharda; Nehemiah, our subject's father; John, who died unmarried; Betsy, who became the wife of Thaddeus Keeler, of Ridgefield; and Lucy, who died unmarried.

Dr. Nehemiah Perry, Sr., the father of our subject, was born in Ridgefield in 1790 and died in 1866. He began the study of medicine with his father, and after completing a course in New York City received his degree in Connecticut from President Day, of Yale College. In 1811 he entered upon his professional career in Ridgefield, where he practiced the healing art for fifty-five years, having a very extensive clientele throughout this part of the State. For years he was a leading member of the Fairfield Medical Society, and his inherited talents, developed by study and observation, made him eminent in correct diagnosis and skillful surgery. He owned the property now in the possession of Ex-Governor Lounsbury. His first wife was Mary Sanford, daughter of Esquire the wife of Henry B. Dikeman (now deceased), a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere. She and her two daughters reside on Mount Pleasant, Newtown.

Daniel B. Camp was born on his father's farm February 21, 1836. At the age of seventeen he went to Danbury and served four years at the tinner's trade with Charles Hull. Later he worked for a short time in New Haven, then at Naugatuck, in which place, on August 9, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, 15th Conn. V. I. His command was in the 9th Corps under General Burnside. He made a good soldier, and returned to Naugatuck after two years and eleven months' faithful service, receiving an honorable discharge June 27, 1865. He resumed his former occupation at Naugatuck, engaging in the tinning business there until 1872, when he came to Newtown village, where he has ever since carried on that business. Mr. Camp is now a Democrat, although he was a Republican until the Greeley campaign of 1872. In 1885 he was a representative from Newtown in the State Legislature, and he has also held other positions of honor and trust. On November 23, 1859, he was married to Augusta, daughter of Isaac and Louisa (Bartlett) Nichols. She was born February 22, 1839. Their children are: Esther L., born January 27, 1862; Grace, born October 3, 1872, married December 29, 1897, to Dr. Clyde O. Anderson, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

Lemuel F. Camp (son of Joel Trowbridge Camp) was born December 8, 1820, in Taunton District, town of Newtown, and died in April, 1894. In 1855 he was married to Sarah Jane, daughter of Amos and Mary Ann Lake, and about this time he erected the house occupied at the time of his death by Hobart Hawley, and resided there until some years ago. In 1893 he moved with his family to the Booth Hawley place, at Hawleyville, where he died. His children were: Carrie A. (deceased), Alma M. (Mrs. Charles B. Johnson), Mary A. (Mrs. Edward C. Platt), Amos Trowbridge, and Sara A. (Mrs. Asa Hawley). Lemuel F. Camp was possessed of a taste for live-stock, of which he was a fine judge, and he gave considerable attention to buying and grazing cattle for the markets. He was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church, and in politics was a Republican.

Samuel B. Camp, of Taunton District, Newtown, the youngest son of Joel Trowbridge, a farmer and respected citizen, was born in 1828. He has followed farming with the exception of two or three years, during which he was engaged in comb-making. He came to his present farm in 1839. In later years he has engaged in stock raising, has since been in the milk business, and he has a farm of one hundred and forty-five acres. On National issues he is a Republican, and he is a member of Trinity Episcopal Church. In 1867 he was married to Caroline C., daughter of Amos and Mary (Bennett) Lake, of Bethlehem, and had children: Edwin Beers, born in 1868; and Frank Bennett, born in 1870, died in 1875.

Luther Camp, whose death occurred November 11, 1884, was in his eighty-seventh year.

John Camp, his father, was a brother to Lemuel and Silas Camp, and the old home was the old red house that formerly stood opposite where Lemuel F. Camp lived. John Camp, at his marriage, moved to Brookfield, Obtuse District, and built the house occupied by the late Amos Camp. He had three sons and one daughter: Wheeler, who died unmarried at his home in Brookfield in 1868, aged seventy-two years; Lucy Ann (also unmarried), who died there in 1870, aged sixty-nine years; Amos, who died in 1877, aged seventy-six (he had two children—Beers, who died in 1855, aged twenty-five years and eleven months, about four months after his marriage to Miss Jane Wood, of Southville; and Mary, who still occupies the old home near Horace Beers).

Luther Camp, soon after his marriage to Miss Lucy Foote, removed to the place in Hawleyville which he afterward made his home. His second wife was Miss Olive Barnum, of Bethel. They had no children, but adopted, when only two years old, and loved as their own, Mrs. Camp's motherless niece, Abigail Hoyt, afterward Mrs. Abigail Wood. Mrs. Wood tenderly cared for her foster-parents some years before Mrs. Camp's death, which occurred in 1878, and remained with Mr. Camp until less than three years ago, when she felt that duty called her to live with her only child, Mrs. McArthur. Mr. Camp died at the latter's home.

NATHANIEL SELLECK, M. D., is one of the most successful medical practitioners of Danbury. Born and reared in that city, he has found his best field for work in the place where he is best known, a fact which speaks volumes for his worth and ability.

The Selleck family is of English origin, the first to cross the ocean being Nathaniel Selleck, our subject's great-grandfather. The grandfather was also named Nathaniel. Nathaniel B. Selleck, our subject's father, was born in Maryland, and was for many years a citizen of Danbury, although he had extensive business interests elsewhere. He was a hatter by trade, but also engaged in merchandising and carried on a large logging business in Minnesota. In connection with these varied lines of work he made several voyages to South America. He died in December, 1891. He married Delia M. Sherwood, who was born in Redding, Conn., and they had two children: Nathaniel, our subject; and another son, who died in childhood.

Doctor Selleck was born November 22, 1868, and received his literary education in the public schools of Danbury, graduating from the high school in 1888. After a preliminary course of reading with Doctor Benedict, of Danbury, he entered the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York, where he received his degree in 1891. After spending two years in practice with his former preceptor he opened an office on his own account, and in the six years that have intervened he has built up a large and lucrative practice; his office is at No. 238 Main street. Our subject belongs to the Danbury Medical Society, and to the County and State Societies, and is highly esteemed in professional circles.

Doctor Selleck married Miss Mary A. Benedict, daughter of Daniel M. and Mary Benedict, and they have a pleasant home on Foster street, Danbury. They are prominent in social life, and the Doctor is a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters; the Ancient Essenic Order; Union Lodge No. 40, F. & A. M.; and Crusader Commandery, K. T. In his political affiliations, he has always been a Democrat.

FOOTE. Daniel Foote, born in Stratford, Conn., July 25, 1717, son of Jehiel and Susanna Foote, grandson of Daniel Foote, great-grandson of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Smith) Foote, and great-great-grandson of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Deming) Foote, and of Lieut. Samuel and Elizabeth Smith [see Goodwin's Foote Genealogy and Savage's Genealogical Dictionary], married, November 6, 1746, at Stratford, Sarah Whitney, born in Stratford, Conn., September 1, 1723.

They lived in Stratford until after they had three children born, then moved to Newtown, Conn., where they spent the rest of their lives. He died June 28, 1790, in his seventy-second year; she on November 2, 1795, in the seventy-third year of her age. Their children were: (1) Abigail. (2) Anna married Stephen Shepard, a cooper of Newtown, son of John Shepard. They resided in Newtown and there died (she November 17, 1827, in her seventy-eighth year; and he July 24, 1830, aged seventy-eight), and were buried in Newtown cemetery. They were Sandemanians in religion. (3) Charity Foote, born in Stratford, June 21, 1752, married Elias Bristol, of Newtown, who was a soldier in the war of Revolution, and fell probably in the early part of that struggle. She married (second) Samuel Sanford, of Newtown. They settled and lived at Newtown. (4) Susanna Foote married Amos Griffin, of Newtown, a son of Lieut. John and Beulah (Hubbell) Griffin, of Newtown. They settled and lived at Newtown. (5) Peter Foote, born in Newtown, August 10, 1759, a weaver, married Naomi Gillett, daughter of Samuel, of Newtown, where she was born about 1764. (6) Daniel Foote, born at Newtown in 1762, a farmer, married Betty Northrop in Newtown, where she was born in 1764, a daughter of John and—(Baldwin) Northrop. (7) Jemima Foote, born at Newtown, married David Curtis Wainwright. (8) Lemuel Foote, born at Newtown, a farmer, married Charity Beers.

JAMES FOOTE, DESCENDANTS OF. James Foote and Adah Stilson were married April 25, 1774, and their children with dates of birth are as follows: Hannah H., October 31, 1774; Rhesa, April 4, 1776; Ruth, December 4, 1781; David S., March 20, 1783; Vine, October 10, 1785; Heber, December 5, 1787; Milton, September 15, 1789; Ann, August 31, 1791; Aurelia, July 7, 1793; Arisnoe, January 7, 1796; Abba, March 7, 1798; and James, June 29, 1801. Of these, Hannah died in infancy; Rhesa is referred to farther on; Ruth married a Mr. Phelps, and went to New York State; Heber married, and went to New York State; Ann married, and died in young womanhood; Amelia married, and went to the State of New York; Arisnoe died unmarried; Abba married Lyman Lake, and is buried in the cemetery at Hawleyville; James married, and moved to Groton, N. Y. The mother died August 9, 1834, in her eightieth year, the father on February 25, 18—, and the remains of both rest in Newtown cemetery.

Rhesa Foote was a shoemaker by trade and occupation through life; also worked at bookbinding. He was a Christian man, being a member of Trinity Episcopal Church, and a respected citizen of the town. He built the house, at the foot of Newtown Street, now occupied by John Nash. He married Polly Hawley, of Monroe, Conn., and they had the following children, some of whom became especially useful and prominent in the various walk of life: (1)

Mrs. Robert DeBlock
56 Winchester Road
Henrietta, N.Y. 14623

Dear Mrs DeBlock,

About a year ago our son Thomas married Virginia DeBlock in Evanston, Illinois, and I have been helping her trace her DeBlock ancestry. Genealogy has been my hobby for many years.

Her earliest ancestor we have located was Joseph Whiting DeBlock, who lived much of his life in Erie, Pa., but was born in the Syracuse, N.Y. area and was an Episcopalian, according to a family history.

I have been in correspondence with the Episcopal Diocese of Central New York trying to locate baptismal records from the early days (1799). In one of her letters Mrs. Lorane D. Swengel mentioned that you had worked for the diocese and that you might possibly be a resource in my research.

What does your husband know about his DeBlock ancestry? Did his family live for a long time in New York State and particularly in the Syracuse area? Is there someone else in his family who has done more work on family history?

I look forward to hearing from you at your convenience. It may be that your husband and our daughter-in-law are distantly related.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Withington

Hist. of Fairfield Co., Conn., D. W. Hurd, 1881 MHS-9/7/83 Se 68 Log 507

Richard Crabb.—His name first appears on the roll of the general meeting of the freemen, at Hartford, for the election of magistrates, Jan. 16, 1639; and April 9, 1640, he is present as deputy, and must have been a man of some note. He came to Stamford with the company from Wethersfield, and is on the list of those who paid the hundred bushels of corn to the New Haven colony, and of those to whom the first assignment of land was made. He received ten acres. His land must have been assigned him west of the present limits of the town, as he is spoken of subsequently in the records as belonging to Greenwich.

Rev. Richard Denton came with his parishioners from Wethersfield. His name heads the first list of the new colony, and stands third on the list of those who paid for surveying the tract. He received fourteen acres, only two of the settlers exceeding him in the assignment of land.

Jeffrey Ferris, made freeman in Boston in 1635, came with the first settlers, is on the list of those who paid for the survey, and received ten acres at the first assignment of land. Savage says he was from Watertown, Mass., where he was made freeman, probably May 6, 1635, whence he came to Wethersfield. He sold his lot in Wethersfield, of forty-five acres, to John Deming. He came with the first colony from Wethersfield, and in 1656 is one of the eleven Greenwich men who petitioned to be accepted under the New Haven jurisdiction. His will, found on the Probate records at Fairfield, is dated Jan. 6, 1664. He wills to the four boys he brought up ten pounds sterling apiece if they live with any of his children until they are eighteen years old, the money then to be put out for them until they are twenty years of age. His will names also his wife Judy, son James, son Jonathan Lockwood, and Mary Lockwood, son Peter's three children, and son Joseph's two. Judy Bowers, his widow, receipts for her widow's portion, March 6, 1667. His marriage contract with his wife Susannah, widow of Robert Lockwood, of date May 28, 1661, pledges certain legacies to the children of Robert Lockwood, deceased, and mortgages his Greenwich lands and "housings." He died in 1666. The name Ferris is from Leicestershire, house of Feriers, from Henry, son of Gualchelme de Feriers, to whom William the Conqueror gave large grants of land in the three shires of Stafford, Derby, and Leicester.

Tradition invests the emigration of this family to this country with the hues of romantic adventure,—the ancestress, high born, following her plebeian lover out into this Western world, to share with him here the fortunes which English aristocracy would not allow there.

Daniel Finch, made freeman in Boston, 1631, and enrolled same year among Watertown settlers. In 1636, he was constable in Wethersfield, whence he came with the Stamford settlers, 1641, and is on each of the three first lists of the colony. He received nine acres in the first distribution of land. Savage supposes he was from Watertown, Mass., and that he came in the fleet with Governor Winthrop; that he was made freeman May 18, 1631; that he went to Wethersfield in 1635 or 1636, where he was constable in the latter year. He also makes him remove in 1653 to Fairfield, where he married, Dec. 25, 1657 Elizabeth, widow of John Thompson, and died March 1667. His marriage agreement with Elizabeth Thompson is on the Probate records at Fairfield.

John Finch is assigned by the town in October 1642, six acres, with marsh and upland, as the other men. He died here in 1657. He sold his house and home-lot in 1653 to Richard Ambler.

Robert Fisher was here early, if not with the first colony. He had land assigned him by the town, as appears from the testimony of Thomas Morehouse March 17, 1649, in which he says that John Whitmore sold to his son John the land which was Robert Fisher's by gift of the town.

Robert Gildersleeve came with the first company from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of settlers. He received, in the first distribution of land, thirteen acres. While here he was a representative from the town in the General Court at New Haven.

William Graves received a house-lot in the distribution of November, 1642.

John Holly was here, as present records show, as early as 1647. William H. Holly, Esq., copied from the records several years ago the birth of John, son of John Holly, in October, 1642, which would suggest that the family may have been here even as early. He purchased land on the 26th of 12th month, 1647, of William Newman, and from that date his purchases of real estate are numerous. He was a noted man and much in the public service. In 1679 he gave his house and lot to his son Samuel, and land to his son John, reserving to himself and wife half the fruit of the orchard. He also gave land at the same date to his son Increase. In his will, on record at Fairfield, his legatees are his wife Mary, and his children John, Samuel, Increase, Elisha, Jonathan, Elizabeth Turney, Bethia Weed, Hannah Hoyt, and Abigail.

Thomas Hoyt, or Hyatt, received three acres of woodland. This name was spelled very variously on the records,—Hoyette, Hyat, Hyot, Hioute, Houte, Hoyt, Hoight, Hayt, Hiat, Hoit, and Hoyte. Thomas "Hyat" died here in 1651. I suppose him and Simon to be the ancestors of the Stamford Hoyts. The inventory of his estate was rendered in court in 1662, amounting to £132 2s. 3d. The court gave to the widow her third, and made Cornelius Jones administrator, to divide the rest among the six children. The administrator was so well pleased with the case as to take for his wife the widow Elizabeth, and their marriage is on record, 1. 8. 1657. The children are recorded as giving receipts to their father-in-law Cornelius Jones, as follows: Caleb, Dec. 23, 1661; Ruth then become Mrs. John Wescot, Feb. 9, 1667; Re

, 13. 8. 1674, for twelve pounds eleven shillings
1 pence; Thomas, 21. 8. 1674, a like sum; and ɔrah gives similar receipts, 30. 9. 1669. These pts are for their several portions of their father, nas "Hiat's" estate. John "Hiat," of "Younk-N. Y., gives receipt, July 6, 1689, for twenty ıds, current pay, to the said Cornelius Jones, his ɛr-in-law. After careful collation of names I am ɔle to distinguish among the settlers the two ly names Hoyt and Hyatt. Within twenty-five
's of the settlement I find these different ways of ling the same name. On pages 113 and 114, ords No. 1, the estates of both Thomas Hyatt and on Hoyette are receipted for by the heirs of both.
hese receipts we have the following different spell-ɜ: Hoyt, 1662; Hiat, 1669; Hoyte, 1661; and the miscuous entry of these receipts for the two esɛs would seem to indicate that they belonged to same family. Joshua, son of Simon, spells his ne Hyot. When the name became settled in its ) leading forms, Hoyt and Hyatt, as distinct family nes, I hardly think the records will show.

Simon Hoyt was probably here with the first set-rs. I take the liberty of entering his name in one the places whose name has been effaced by time.
ɜ died here in 1657, and his name occurs quite often the records of the town. The inventory of his esɛ is on record, dated Oct. 9, 1657, and amounting two hundred and twenty-five pounds. After his ath his widow Susanna, it appears, married a Bates. is children, as indicated by receipts given for their ɪrtions of their father's estate, were Joshua, Moses Westchester, John, Samuel, Benjamin; Mrs. Samuel inch, and Mrs. Samuel Firman. In the distribution the estate of their mother, then Susanna Bates, eb. 1, 1674, besides the above names, appeared also ıat of Thomas Lyon, who probably had married one her daughters.

Robert Husted was one of the company who reɛived land in October, 1642. He had come from Iount Wollaston, now Braintree, Mass. He is probbly the father of that Robert Hustis who, according ɔ Bolton's Westchester, went from Fairfield to West-hester in 1654. His will, dated July 8, 1652, makes ɛquests to his son Angel of all his lands in Greenvich, with housings; to his son Robert all his lands n Stamford, with cattle and housings; to his wife a naintenance and other bequests; and to his daughter Ann, ten pounds. In 1654 his widow, Elizabeth, by will makes bequests to her son Angel, of Greenwich; to Robert, of Stamford, and to her daughter Ann, the wife of Richard Hardy. In the will of Robert the name is Husted, and in that of the widow the name is written Hustis, and both are equally distinct, and that they refer to the same family is also as clear as the form of the name. The names of the children are also changed from Husted to Hustis, though in the second will the name is spelled both Hustes and Hustis.

Jeremy Jagger came with the first company from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the colony. He received, in the first distribution of land, three acres.

John Jessup came with the first colony from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the colony. He received, in the first distribution of lands, five acres. In 1664 he represented Westchester in the Connecticut Assembly. His name is spelled on our records, Gesseppe, Giseppe, Gesoppe, Gishop.

Richard Law came with the first settlers from Wethersfield, is on the second and third lists of the settlers, and received, at the first assignment of land, eleven acres. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilborn, of Wethersfield, who was born in 1612.

John Lum was here in 1642, and received a house-lot in the distribution of that date.

William Mayde (Mead) received, Dec. 7, 1641, five acres, house-lot, with woodland. The wife and son of William Mead died here in 1658.

John Miller received from the town, in October, 1642, five acres, house-lot, and marsh and upland, as the other men. This name is on Chapin's list of the Wethersfield colony, where he was in 1630. He died soon after coming to Stamford, in 1642, leaving three sons.

Matthew Mitchell came with the settlers from Wethersfield. His name stands next, on the first list of the colony, to the minister's, and heads both the next two lists. He paid about three times as much as any other of the settlers towards the survey of the land, and received twenty-eight acres in the first distribution of the land.

Thomas Morehouse is on the list of those who shared in the first distribution of land, and received seven acres. In 1649 he was here, as appears from his testimony in court. Savage makes him in Fairfield in 1653. His will and inventory are on the Fairfield records, Sept. 11, 1658. His wife Isabel is mentioned in the will, and children, Hannah, Samuel, and Thomas, the last of whom was to be paid his portion in four years; Mary in five years; and so each child one year later; and if any of them die before seventeen, their part to be divided, if unmarried.

William Newman hath assigned to him by the town, in October, 1642, two acres marsh and three acres woodland. In 1659 complaints having been made to the court in New Haven respecting the "sizes of shoes," the court, hearing that William Newman had an instrument which he had brought from England, which "was thought to be right to determine this question, did order that the said instrument should be procured and sent to New Haven, to be made a 'Standard,' which shall be the rule between buyer and seller, to which it is required that all sizes be conformed." Mr. Newman was evidently a man of note in the young colony, and once represented the town in the General Court.

John Northend came with the colony from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the settlers. He received in the first distribution of the land eight acres.

John Ogden received, Dec. 7, 1641, ten acres, house-lot, with woodland, like the first company. In 1642 he agreed with Governor Kieft, of New York, to build a stone church for twenty-five hundred guilders. In 1644 he was a patentee of Hempstead L. I.

Richard Ogden, brother of the above, went to Fairfield, where he became a man of note.

—— Pierson received, in the distribution of November, 1642, a house-lot. The Christian name is obliterated, but that of Henry is given to the Pearson who emigrated with Mr. Denton in 1644. A Jacob Pearson (Pierson) was landholder in 1661.

Thomas Pop received, Dec. 7, 1641, a house-lot, with woodland, the same as the first company. This name should probably be Pope, and he probably went soon after the colony settled here over to Hempstead.

James Pyne received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, house-lot, and woodland, the same as the first company. He went to Hempstead, L. I., and was accepted as freeman from that town of the Connecticut colony in 1664.

Thurston Raynor came with the first company from Wethersfield. His name on each of the first three lists stands next to Matthew Mitchell. In the first distribution of lands he received twenty acres. He sold his lot in Wethersfield, which contained three hundred and thirty acres, to Richard Treat. On reaching Stamford he was appointed to the New Haven court with senatorial honors. This distinction places him among the foremost of our pioneers. From Stamford he went to Southampton, L. I., where he was held in honor.

John Renoulds appears on the list of the settlers of Wethersfield, from which place he probably came with the first settlers of Stamford. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists. He received, in the first allotment of land, eleven acres.

John Rockwell received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, home-lot, and woodland, as the first company.

Daniel Scofield received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, home-lot, and woodland, as the first company. He died in 1671. His children were Daniel, John, Richard, Joseph, Sarah, the wife of John Pettit, and Mary. His widow Mary became the third wife of Miles Merwin. The son Joseph suffered so much from hardships in King Philip's war as to lose his life in 1676, giving his estate to his brothers and sisters. His will, dated Sept. 4, 1664, gives to his wife one-third the estate, with use of the house for her lifetime; to his daughter Sarah, five pounds; and to her two children, five pounds; and to the other four children, Daniel, John, Joseph, and Mercy, the rest of the estate. His wife and two of the sons, Daniel and John, were made executors.

John Seaman came with the first company fi Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first tl lists of the colony, and he received in the first dis bution of land three acres.

Simon Seiring appears on the records, in 164 landholder, where his name is spelled Cymon. H reported on the list of those who went, in 1644, v Mr. Denton to Hempstead, L. I.

Samuel Sherman came with the first settlers fi Wethersfield. His name appears on each of the three lists of the new colony, and he received, in first distribution of land, ten acres. He was assist in the New Haven court in 1662, and his reappo ment for the next two years. He was also sent to General Court of Connecticut, after the union the town colonies, in 1665. In his sale of ho and land, in 1654, he is said to be "now living Stratford." In leaving Stamford he probably t every member of his family, as the name does subsequently occur on our records. The descenda of this pioneer of Stamford have numbered m very eminent men, among whom are John Sherm the present Secretary of the Treasury, and Gen. W T. Sherman.

Vincent Simkins came with the first company fi Wethersfield.

George Slauson came probably from Sandwi Mass., with Thomas Armitage, in 1642. He appe in our account of the first church of the town as a le ing member, and he was also evidently a man of not civil life. I suppose him to have been the represe tive from the town in 1670. He had three children appears from his will, dated Dec. 16, 1694,—Elea John, and a daughter who married John Gould. died Feb. 17, 1695. His son John married, in 1 Sarah Tuttle, of New Haven, and had a son J born in 1664, and Jonathan in 1667. The wife this John was killed Nov. 17, 1676, by her brot Benjamin Tuttle, who was executed for it the foll ing June. He then married a second wife, Elizab Benedict, and had a daughter Mary and a son Thon He died in 1706. He was doubtless the ancesto the present Slason families in town.

Thomas Slawson in November or December, 1 received a house-lot, and three acres "in the fiel besides. Savage says he did not stay long in St ford.

Henry Smith came with the first company fr Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first th lists of the new colony, and in the first distribut of land he received three acres. Whence he came Wethersfield is not known. He was promoted freeman in 1670, and died in 1687. He had a John, mentioned in his will, and a daughter Rebec who married, July 2, 1672, Edward Wilkinson, Milford, and a daughter Hannah, who married Lawrence.

John Smith, Sr., received, Dec. 7, 1641, two ac house-lot, and woodland, the same as the first co ny. He and his son John went to Hempstead, L. I.

hn Smith, Jr., received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, use-lot, and woodland, as the first company. In 75, John, Jr., in a deposition, gives his age at sixty ars, and says that while in Stamford he was called ck John Smith, for distinction.

John Stevens received, Dec. 7, 1641, two acres, use-lot, and a woodland, as the first company. The scendants of this pioneer have been quite numerous.

Samuel Swain, in September, 1642, is engaged to ild at the common charge of the townsmen a mill, appears from a record of that date, and his name curs later in the records.

James Swead received a house-lot in the distribun of November, 1642.

John Towne received in the distribution of Novemr, 1642, a house-lot.

Capt. John Underhill had assigned to him in Octor, 1642, house-lot, eight acres, and woodland, as e others. He was made a freeman in Boston in 31.

Andrew Ward.—This name appears in the first cord of the "Corte holden at Newtown, 26th April, 36." He was one of the five worthies, who thus d in their hands the destinies of the new settlent at Newtown (Hartford), and so those of the ate. The record states that he had been dismissed m the church of Watertown, Mass., on the 28th May last, and he with his associates are authorized renew the covenant. He continued a member of e court until September, 1639. At the session held ctober, 1639, he is nominated by the court to be prented for the vote of the county for magistrates in pril next. In 1637 he is reported in the records of e General Court as collector of Wethersfield, and doubtless came to Stamford with the Wethersfield ttlers. His name is on each of the first three lists the pioneers, and during his life here he was a ominent man. He was chosen magistrate for the lony in 1646 to represent it in the higher branch the New Haven court. His will, still found on cord in Fairfield, bears date June 8, 1659, and akes bequests to his wife Esther, son John, daughter arah, daughter Abigail, and his two youngest sons, ndrew and Samuel. It is stated also that his other ildren had received their portions. From this pioeer of the town have descended eminent names. lenry Ward Beecher gets his middle name from him, nd his daughter Mary was grandmother of Viceresident Aaron Burr.

Jonas Weed came to Watertown in 1631, where he as made freeman, and thence to Stamford in 1642. le died here in 1676. His will, on record at Fairld, dated Nov. 26, 1672, makes his legatees his wife lary, and his children John, Daniel, and Jonas; lary, wife of George Abbott; Dorcus, wife of James Wright; Samuel; John Rockwell for Elizabeth; arah; and Hannah, wife of Benjamin Hoyt. His dministrators were his wife Mary, and his sons Daniel and John. The widow died in 1690. His son John married Joanna, daughter of Richard "Westcoat." The son Jonas married, Nov. 6, 1670, Bethia, daughter of John Holly, and to him the father gave, in 1671, the house where he was then living. The descendants of this Jonas Weed have been very numerous here, and they have, also, always been among our prominent citizens.

Thomas Weeks went from Wethersfield to Hadley and returned to Wethersfield, from which place he probably came with the first company of settlers to Stamford. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists, and he received, in the first distribution of land, six acres.

John Whitmore came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists, and he received, in the first distribution of land, ten acres.

Jonas Wood, Sr., came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first three lists of the colonists, and he received, in the first distribution of land, eight acres. He was among the settlers of Springfield in 1636, from which place he went to Wethersfield. In 1648 he brings an action against Thomas Newton, of Fairfield, when he is reported as from Long Island. In 1654 he was in Southampton, L. I., as appears from an action against him in the court of magistrates at New Haven. In that action he is called Hallifax Jonas by Richard Mills, of Stamford, in his testimony. In 1658, Jonas Wood (O) and Jonas Wood (H), both of Huntington, L. I., agents for the inhabitants of the same, desire to join with this colony (New Haven). In May, 1662, on the petition of Huntington, L. I., he is appointed by the General Court in Hartford the first townsman and custom-master. He became on Long Island a man of some prominence. His name heads the list of those to whom the town of Huntington was granted in 1666.

Jonas Wood, Jr., came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on the second and third lists of the colonists. He received, in the first distribution of land, seven acres.

Edmund Wood came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first three lists of the colonists. He received, in the first distribution of land, seven acres.

Jeremiah Wood came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. His name is on each of the first three lists of the new colony.

Francis Yates is on Chapin's list of the residents of Wethersfield, between 1634 and 1673. He went to Stamford, where he stayed until 1644, when he removed with Mr. Denton to Hempstead, L. I.

The healthful climate and fertility of the soil soon attracted other settlers, and not much time elapsed ere the little colony was rapidly being augmented by an enterprising class of people. The following is a list of those who came in between the years 1643 and the breaking out of the Revolution: Joseph Arnold, Richard Ayres, Sr., Samuel Baker, John Banks, John Beachgood, John Beldin, Matthew Bellamy, Samuel Blackley, Joseph Blackley, Josiah Blackman, William Blanchard, Israel Boardman, Richard Booloch, Ephraim Bostwick, Nathaniel Borden, Richard Bouton, Daniel Briggs, Samuel Brooker, Samuel Bryan, Richard Chester, Daniel Chichester, William Clements, John Cluggstone, John Clock, Thomas Corey, Cary Conklin, James Crawford, Nathaniel Cross, Cornelius Curtiss, Francis Dan, Richard (Daniels) Daniel, John Davis, Rev. GRIST-MILL.

One of the greatest inconveniences usually met the early settlers of any section is the want of mi for grinding grain. The pioneers of Stamford ga this matter their early attention, for as early as Se tember, 1641, an order was passed for the erection a mill at a common charge. It was promptly erect and "set agoing," but during the same year was se to private parties.

THE PERFIDY OF THE DUTCH TRADERS.—THE DERHILL MASSACRE.

The following concise statement of an affair wh at one time wore a threatening aspect, endanger the very existence of the community, is from the p of the late Rev. E. B. Huntington:

"Some of the Dutch traders had stripped an dian, who had been tempted by them to drink much, of a valuable dress of beaver skins. On covering from his drunken fit, the insulted red m revenged himself by killing two Dutchmen, and f to feast his memory with the great revenge among distant tribe. He could not be found. The Du governor at New Amsterdam, Kieft, sought an opp tunity to punish the Indians for the revengeful de The next winter the Mohawks fell upon two of Hudson River tribes, and after killing their warri scattered the remnant in utter destitution to find f and shelter from the piercing cold among the Du on the South. The time for a civilized revenge h now come; and at the instigation of Kieft, with sanction of his counselors, more than a hundred those helpless fugitives from their savage foe w sent from their quiet sleep on earth to the spirit wo of their race by a blow from the Dutch soldiers sudden that they could not even beg for life.

"Then Indian blood was stirred. Savage vengea awoke. With almost electric despatch Indian war pledged to Indian warrior, and clan to clan, the di vengeance on their foe. 'More than fifteen hund warriors,' according to De Forest, rallied from confederacy of eleven clans to constitute this ave ing army. 'A fierce war blazed wherever a Du settlement was to be found; on Long Island and Manhattan, along the Connecticut and along Hudson.' From Manhattan to Stamford the c was desolated, Dutch and English alike atoning the inexorable spirit of Indian revenge for the i ries that had been heaped upon the Indian's race.

"Within hearing distance of the Stamford se ment* were three Dutch settlers who had excited wrath of the restless and brave Mayano. He n met them, armed as they were, with his bow arrows, and brought two of them to the ground. third only saved himself by a well-directed b which laid the fearless savage at his feet; and daring of the fallen sachem had made the exte nation of his tribe a necessity to the safety of whites. A company of soldiers were immediately dispatched to capture them. At Greenwich they were directed by Capt. Patrick to the rendezvous of the maddened Indians, but on reaching it not a soul could be found. Proceeding on into the Stamford settlement they find Patrick with his own former comrade in arms, our Capt. John Underhill. They immediately suspect him of having given the Indians notice of their approach. They taunt him with the treachery.

"He who had led his trusty men so successfully against the bravest of the New England savages could not brook such insolence from Dutchmen, even though in arms. He contemptuously spat in the face of their leader and turned to walk away. A pistol-ball brought him to the ground in death, and the Dutchmen returned to the pursuit of their savage foe.

"Underhill, who had been no friend to the Dutch settlers, now sympathized with their mortal hatred of the Indian enemy. He had already signalized his bravery in the Pequod war. His was already a name of terror to Indians far and near; and to his presence our Stamford colony had doubtless owed their comparative exemption thus far from savage invasions. It was no time for him to rest inactive when his friends and neighbors were exposed every hour to some sudden and relentless massacre. He offered his services to the Dutch Governor, and was at once sent into the field. The troublesome Indians about Stamford were the first to feel his power. With one hundred and thirty men he started from New Amsterdam on a cold and cloudy morning in the February of 1644. They were able to land at Greenwich Point that evening in a furious storm. With the early dawn of the next morning the resolute captain was again on the march. All day did the sturdy Dutch soldiers, under their valiant leader, plod their toilsome way through the snow until, at eight in the evening, they had reached the vicinity of the hostile camp. Soon the clouds gave way, and a clear, bright moon, flashing from the snowy crystals, lighted their way to their horrid work. By a little after ten they filed round the southern spur of a ridge stretching towards the northwest, and the village, a triple range of wigwams, lay reposing before them, awaiting their attack. With marvelous celerity the captain circles the doomed village with his trusty men. Now spring upon them, as hounds unleashed upon their prey, the stalwart forms of more than a hundred warriors, all prepared for their death grapple with the foe. But neither their sudden rush, nor their wild war-cry, could intimidate their assailants. Coolly they are received, a tenth of them captured, and the rest impetuously hurled back. For a whole hour the unrelenting struggle went on. A hundred and thirty men wrestled in mortal strife with more than five hundred of the enemy, and when the doomed Indians were at length driven back within their lines of defense, one hundred and eighty of their fallen comrades were already still and stiffening in the blood-stained snow. Nor would they yet raise the flag of truce or cry for quarter. Each undaunted spirit, left beneath such shelter as his own or his neighbor's wigwam could give, continued the fight. This was the opportunity for which Underhill was prepared. He called for fire. Torches lighted the wigwams. Indian men, women, and children, issuing from their burning homes, were driven back to perish in the flames. Before the morning dawned more than five hundred who, the night before, had gone to their usual rest, were now sleeping their last sleep with the unconscious dead.

"By noon of the next day the victors had already reached Stamford on their way home, having in this signal chastisement of the Indians of this neighborhood secured the perpetual peace of the English settlements."

INDIAN DEEDS, ETC.—THE STAMFORD PATENT, 1685.

The following is a copy of the Indian deed which, in consideration of "twelve coats, twelve bowes, twelve hatchets, twelve glasses, twelve knives, four kettles, and four fathom of white wampum," was conveyed, July 1, 1640, to Capt. AGREEMENT WITH PONUS AND ONAX, 1655.

"Our agreement made with Ponus, Sagamore of Toquamske and with Onax his eldest son: Altho' there was an agreement made before with the said Indians and Capt. Turner and the purchase paid for, yet the things not being clear, and being very unsatisfied, we came to another agreement with Onax and Ponus for their land from the town plot of Stamford north about 16 miles and there we marked a white oak tree with S. T. and going toward the Mill River side we marked another white oak tree with S. T. and from that tree west we were to run four miles, and from the first marked tree to run four miles eastward, and from this east and west line we are to have further to the north for our cattle to feed, full two miles further, the full breadth—only the said Indians reserve for themselves liberty of their planting ground: and the above said Indians, Ponus and Onax, with all other Indians that be concerned in it have surrendered all the said land to the town of Stamford, as their proper right, forever, and the aforesaid Indians have set their hands as witnessing the truth hereof, and for and in consideration hereof, the said town of Stamford is to give the said Indians 4 coats, which the Indians did accept of for full satisfaction for the aforesaid lands, altho' it was paid before, hereby Ponus' posterity is cut off from making any claim or having any right to any part of the aforesaid land, and do hereby surrender and make over, for us or any of ours forever, unto the Englishmen of the town of Stamford, and their posterity forever, the land as it is butted and bounded the bounds above mentioned. The said Ponus and Onax his son having this day received of Richard Law 4 coats acknowledging themselves fully satisfied for the aforesaid land.—Witness the said Indians the day and date hereof, Stamford, August 15, 1655.

THE SOLDIERY OF STAMFORD—THE HEROES OF FOUR WARS.

The French and Indian Wars—List of Soldiers—Stamford in the Revolution—List of Revolutionary Soldiers—List of Stamford Loyalists—War of 1812—List of Volunteers.

THE record of Stamford's soldiery from the period of the French and Indian wars, in the second quarter of the eighteenth century, through the various conflicts which our country has passed, to the close of the great Rebellion, 1861–65, is one in which the citizens of this old town may justly feel a patriotic pride.

THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WARS.

From the town records of this period we find that Stamford was alive to the emergency, and in 1757 it was voted that if the "Lord of London shall send regulars into this town, the town will bear the charge of accommodating them with what shall be necessary for them."

In December, 1758, it was voted that Col. Hoyt, Mr. Abraham Davenport, and Ensign Holly be appointed a committee to supply His Majesty's regular

Hist. of Stamford, Conn., Rev. E.B. Huntington, 1868

£472 and 17s., a large estate for those days. It is on record at Fairfield. His executor seems to have been Robert Usher, as receipts to him are on record from two of his sons, Jeremy and John, for their full portions of their father's estate. He died in 1658. An account of his sympathy with those who were disaffected towards the New Haven colony will appear in its appropriate place.

JESSUP, JOHN came with the first colony from Wethersfield, and is on each of the first three lists of the colony. He received, in the first distribution of lands, five acres. In 1664 he represented Westchester in the Connecticut Assembly. His name is spelled on our records, Gesseppe, Giseppe, Gesoppe, Gishop. John Jessup was in Hartford, 1637, Wethersfield, before 1640, Stamford, 1641, Long Island about 1654, representative from Westchester, 1664, and back on the Island again, 1673. This name is thought to have come from Yorkshire, England. (See Gen. Reg., Vol. X., page 358.)

LAW, RICHARD, came with the first settlers from Wethersfield, is on the second and third lists of the settlers, and received, at the first assignment of land, eleven acres. He married Margaret, daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilborn, of Wethersfield, who was born in 1612. Mr. Law is not on the Wethersfield records as a landholder, like the most of the settlers who came with him. But he is reported in the colonial records, in 1638, when he is appointed with George Huberd, from Wethersfield, to trade in beavers with the Indians, on the Connecticut river. No other Wethersfield man was to do so, under penalty of five shillings "per pounde, to be paide pr. evry pounde they soe trade." He is also reported in the case of the estate of John Oldham, as indebted to it £6 4s. 11d. A further account will be given of him in the chapter devoted to biography.

LUM, JOHN, was here in 1642, and received a houselot in the distribution of that date.

1768, and had Sarah, b. '70; Esther. '71; Lewis, '73; Noyse, 1777.

SKELDING, Thomas, 1701. married Rebecca Austin and their son, Thomas, was b. in '03

ST. JOHN, David, blacksmith, 1758, is allowed by vote of the town to settle at Woodpecker Ridge.

James, and Hanna Hait, m. Sept. 19, 1753, and had a large family.

SELLECK.—This family, natives of Wales, as the tradition is, were in Boston as early as 1643. Two of the sons of David and Susanna Selleck of Boston,—Jonathan, born, May 20, '41, the very year of our settlement, and John, b. April 21, '43; came to Stamford about the year '60. Jonathan had house and land recorded to him in '63.

Jonathan, married Abigail, daughter of Richard Law, and had his first child, Jonathan, born here, July, 11, 1664. He had two other sons, David, b. Jan. 21, '66, and John, who graduated at Harvard, in '90. These sons all died, so Savage tells, us before the father's death, which is recorded as taking place, Jan. 10. 1712–13. This Jonathan was a prominent man, and at his death he bequeathed his Latin, Greek and Hebrew books to the Rev. Mr. Davenport.

JOHN, the other pioneer of this name, made freeman, 1669; married Sarah Law, a sister of his brother Jonathan's wife and had children, Sarah, b. August 22, 1669; David, b. Dec. 27, 1672; Nathaniel, b. April 7, '78; John, b. June 7, '81; Susanna, b. Feb. 2, '83, and Joanna, b. May 31, '86. This John was a wealthy ship-owner and captain. Under date, Feb. 25, '68–9, the town granted Mr. John Selleck a piece of waste land by the landing place to set a dwelling-house, or ware-house. He was taken prisoner on a voyage to England, in May, '89, by the French, and never returned to Stamford. His estate was settled here in 1700, and was very large. A branch of this family went just after our revolutionary war to Oyster Bay, on Long Island, where, down to the present day there are found worthy representatives of the name. Abigail, wife of Maj. Selleck, d. Dec. 20, '11.

STONE, John, in 1701, sells to Zach. Roberts, sen. of Bedford, the land and house he bought of Samuel Dean. He was one of the townsmen for a number of years.

STUART, Charles, was here in 1763.

STUDWELL, Joseph, was here in 1667. Thomas was here in March, '67–8, and binds himself to pay for, or return a catalogue of goods, among which were hatters tools. As security, he mortgaged three acres of meadow in the East field.

STURGES, Christopher, admitted inhabitant by vote in town meeting, 1718, and had a son, Jabez, b. here, '21. For several years after '23, he is enrolled among the town officials. His wife, Mary, d. Feb. 17, '46–7.

STURDIVANT, Wm. In 1682, Nicholas Webster, receives from the townsmen a piece of land in the rear of his lot, which had been layed out to this Wm. Sturdivant.

TALMADGE, Thomas, was here in 1709, and by vote admitted an inhabitant. He married Mary Weed, and had a daughter Hannah. He had married again in '21, when his son James was born.

THOMPSON, John, "gunsmith and resident in Stamford," sells house and lands to Jonathan Selleck, May 7, 1667. He was here, also, in '69 and in '70—sold land to Richard Webb.

TRYHERN, (Tryon) Edward, appears on the land record as early as 1684. One of his daughters married John Webster. Sarah, his wife, died here, Sept. 2, 1702, and his death occurred May 14, '74; down to which date his name is found quite frequently in the records.

THORP, Charles, was living here in 1733, when his son Edward was born.

TODD, John, jr. was an inhabitant in 1774.

TURNEY, Joseph, had lands laid out to him in 1686 on the WHITING, Joseph, is in business here, 1724, and same year had recorded the birth and death of a daughter, Sarah. His wife Abigail died in '33, and he married Hannah Beachgood, Jan. 25, '33–4.

WHITE, James came from Huntington, L. I. in 1717. In company with Michael Waring and Thomas Brush, he purchases of John Holly a tract of 246 acres, bounded by the New York State line on the north, by hills east of Great Meadow on the east, by Stony Brook on the north, and Miannus river on the west. He married Elizabeth Waring, Feb. 30, 1720, and had children, Timothy, Sarah, Jacob, Richard, Uriah and James. The family are still in possession of a part of the first purchase made by James, the pioneer, on Long Ridge.

WIATT, Nathaniel and Mary, had son Henry, born in 1726. He was among the town officials in 1737.

WHEATON, Benjamin and his wife Ruth had son Samuel, born here in 1750–1. How long the family had been here does not appear. The marriage of Jemima Wheaton to Reuben Holly is recorded in 1748–9. Samuel Wheaton and Mary Skelding were married in 17[illegible]76, and had here, Mary, Samuel S., John S. and Eliza Ann. [illegible]he Wheatons of New England, are said to be descended from a[illegible]mmigrant from Swansea, Wales, who settled in Rehoboth, Ma[illegible]

WILLSON, John[illegible]r. 1765, began the practice of medicine here, and was the father [illegible]f a family of physicians. That his father's family were living [illegible]ere previous to his birth, our records do not show; though his descendants suppose that they were.

WILMOT, Zophar and Sarah Webb, married Dec. 29, 1760, and had children; John, b. July 9, 1762; Enos, April 18, 1766: and James, Nov. 17, 1769.

WILMOT, Joseph and Hannah, had a son Isaac, b. Nov. 20, 1775.

WILLIAMSON, John, married Mercy Hoyt, Sept. 17, 1746, and had children, Joanna, b. May 5, 1748; and Mary, Sept. 8, 1750.

fies, proposed to give the profits of the land "to helpe maine-taine such as shall bee Imployed in teaching children to Reade."

In May, 1674, the Connecticut court desire Mr. Jones "to take the paynes to dispence the word of God to the people of Rye once a fortnight on the Lord's day till the Court, October next, and then this court will take further order concerning them and for Mr. Jones satisfaction." Mr. Jones remained in Huntington, preaching and laboring with general acceptance down to his death. He is not known to have left children.

LAW, RICHARD, was perhaps the first civilian among the Stamford settlers, the acknowledged legal adviser of the community for more than a quarter of a century. His scholarly and clerical abilities gave him great advantage among the settlers. Though not one of the first twenty to inaugurate the settlement, he was at Wethersfield, arranging to join the colony at the opening of their second season in their new home. He probably took with him from Wethersfield, as his gifted help-meet, Margaret, the oldest daughter of Francis Kilborn; and their home, though not the most expensive, was to be one of the most honored of the colony. Their family, though not to remain through other generations to honor the town they were so helpful in founding, was to furnish names to give a new luster to the state whose highest civil and judicial seats they were to fill. From the first he seems to have been the scribe of the colony. His pen was equally ready for the records of the town, the church, and the courts. He was the only town clerk appointed for about twenty-four years. He was the ready lawyer, in the age preceding, technically that profession among us. He was oftener a deputy in the general court at New Haven than any other of the settlers, and apparently more in demand when there. As constable, he was noted for a fearless and tireless efficiency. He seemed to have exercised a sort of personal discretion in regard to prosecutions, which was not always most acceptable to parties who would dictate his official duty. John Mead once had good proof of his fidelity, never to be bribed

He had sought the help of the constable to recover damages from a neighbor for some harm done by him. The sharp-eyed official saw at a glance that there was no ground for the attachment, and refused the process. Mead scolded and threatened, but to no purpose. He then goes into court with an action against him for neglecting his official duty. But the angry plaintiff soon finds himself a sorry defendant, with but a miserable advocate. Law had him put under trial for scandalizing the church, for slanders and defamatory reports and for disturbing the peace of the church and the town. To all which nothing in extenuation could be said, and the court exculpating their officer, sentenced Mr. Mead to make full acknowledgement at Stamford, to the satisfaction of the church and Mr. Law, to pay Mr. Law ten pounds for his expense in the trial, to pay ten pounds more for disturbing the jurisdiction, and then that he and his brother or some other acceptable man, be bound over for his good behaviour. After the sentence Mr. Mead made the fullest confession and retraction, and Mr. Law was left thenceforward to prosecute his official business unhindered.

Mr. Law had married in Wethersfield, Margaret Kilbourn, by whom he had three children; Jonathan, b. 1636–7; Abigail, who married, May 11, 1665, Jonathan Selleck of Stamford; and Sarah, who married, Oct. 28, 1669, John Selleck, also of Stamford. The son Jonathan, married June 1, 1664, Sarah Clark, daughter of Dea. George Clark of Milford, and removed to Milford, where he was a man of note. His son, Jonathan, b. Aug. 6, 1674, graduated at Harvard College, 1695; was chief-justice of Connecticut for sixteen years and governor of the state from 1741 to 1750.

Mr. Law probably died in Stamford, though there is no record to show it. His will, the last document in which his name appears, bears date March 12, 1686–7. His widow had probably died before this date as no mention is made of her in the will.

There is a paper, entered on the town records in 1686, bearing date Feb. 15, 1680, which speaks of the misunderstanding under which he had given his son, Law, his land. It seems that the son removed from Stamford to Milford, and this removal was a source of dissatisfaction to the father. Still adhering to the former grant to his son, he now insists on dividing the lands which had come into his hands since that former gift, to his daughters, the two Mrs. Selleck, so that they may each have a half as much as he; for which he says "the word of God is clear, and good reason for it, and why any Christian man that loveth righteousness and equity should be against this, I see not."

MITCHELL, REV. JONATHAN, was son, not of Jonathan, as Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit has it, but of Matthew Mitchell, the wealthiest and otherwise most noted of the lay settlers of Stamford. He was born, so Savage supposes, at Halifax, Yorkshire, Eng., and in the year 1624, according to Mather. He came with his father, in the James, from Bristol, in 1635, to Cambridge, Mass., and thence to Concord and Springfield, and in 1640 to Stamford. He remained here probably until he entered Harvard College, where he graduated, A. B., in 1647. He was ordained, Aug. 21, 1650, at Cambridge, where he labored in the ministry for eighteen years.

He was one of the early New England ministers whom the quaint Mather has immortalized in his Magnalia. He styles him the "Ecclesiastes;" "a Pastor of the Church, and a glory of the College in Cambridge, New England." In his epistle dedicatory, he calls him "blessed Mr. Mitchell," and in his sketch of the life and labors of Mr. Mitchell, he makes him the "excellent," the famous pastor" and "this best of preachers in our new English nation." The opening of his biographical sketch is worthy of a place here, as illustrating the times to which our subject belonged, and also, as furnishing us an interesting clue to his character and that of his family:—

"If it were counted an honor to the town of Halifax in Yorkshire that the famous John de Sacro Bozco, author of the well known treatise "De Sphoera," was born there; this town was

OFFICIAL LISTS.

1. REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATORS FROM STAMFORD.

The following list contains all the names which can now be recovered of the representatives and senators of Stamford in the state legislature. Down to 1665 they represented the town in the general court of New Haven; afterwards in the general court or legislature of the colony and state of Connecticut. The omission of names between 1644 and 1653 was occasioned by the loss of the New Haven colony records of that period, a loss probably not to be supplied. There will also be found occasional omissions of the regular meeting of the legislature, occasioned by the fact that no representatives appeared from the town at those meetings. The omission for October 1687, the two sessions of 1688 and for April 1689, is due to the assumption of the government by Sir Edmund Andross for that period. Our list contains also the representatives for Darien from the incorporation of that town in 1820. The thanks of the author are due to the kindness of J. Hammond Trumbull, for his cheerful aid in completing the catalogue.

2. TOWNSMEN OR SELECTMEN OF STAMFORD.

The following catalogue of "townsmen," or Selectmen, is as complete as the town records enabled the author to make it. From 1642 to 1666 there are no records to show who were appointed; and in 1673 the records which are otherwise full, make no mention of the choice of townsmen. The other years for which there is no record of a choice, are, 1681, 2 & 3, 1685 and 1699. Instead of copying the list, as chosen, I have simply indicated the year when each one was first chosen, and the number of years he served.

1640—Rev. Richard Denton, 1
" Matthew Mitchel, 2
" Andrew Ward, 2
" Thurston Raynor, 2
" Richard Crabb, 2
1641—John Whitmore, 1
" Richard Law, 6

The most of the above served probably through the next twenty years, of which there is no record.

1666—Lieut. Francis Bell, sen., 5
" John Holly, 4
" William Newman, 2
" Richard Hardy, 3
" Joseph Garnsey, 1
" Richard Ambler, 2
1667—Peter Ferris, 7
" Richard Webb, 2
" Abraham Ambler, 13
1668—Robert Usher, 1
" Jonathan Bell, 14
1669—John Green, 3
" Francis Brown, 1
1670—Jonathan Selleck, 1
1671—George Slawson, sen., 3
" John Pettit, 1
" John Holmes, 2
" Joshua Hait, 6
" John Slawson, 2
1674—John Bates, 3

PART I

HISTORY

MIDDLESEX PARISH was the early name of this community, which was originally a part of Stamford. The name is preserved in one of its oldest highways, Middlesex Road, which probably was the first highroad connecting it with Stamford and New Canaan. Records show the first clearings to have been made by men from the New Haven and Wethersfield colonies and from Norwalk about 1641, but it was not until 1740, a hundred years later, that the Middlesex Society of the Town of Stamford erected a house of worship on what is now the site of the present Congregational Church. One of the first pastors was the Rev. Moses Mather, who died in 1806, after having served the parish for sixty-two years. He was a son of Richard Mather and related to the Rev. Cotton Mather and Dr. Increase Mather, one of the presidents of Harvard College.

Some of these early pioneers bore the names of Bates, Bell, Bishop, Ferris, Fitch, Holly, Holmes, Gorham, Hoyt, Morehouse, Raymond, Scofield, Seeley, Selleck, Slosson, Walmsley, Waterbury, Webb, Weed, and Williamson.

A few of the old houses still stand: the Bates Homestead (1749) on Raymond Street; the Mather Homestead (1778) on Brookside Road, then called Gracious Street; Wayside and the Lone Pine Cottage (about 1770) in Tokeneke; the Frank Fitch house, sometimes known as the Dutch Oven Tavern (1756); the Weed house (1749) in Nearwater Lane; the Gorham house (1789) on Ring's End Road; the Wardell house on the Post Road at Noroton Center (1756), and the House under the Hill (1750) on the Post Road.

On the west side of Five Mile River, near Tokeneke Creek, stood the original Williamson house, built in 1700, now part of a more modern structure. In the rocks near this house is a pothole used by the Indians and early settlers for grinding corn. Another of these potholes is on Butler's Island near by, and a third, well preserved, on Contentment Island, near the home of John Sherman Hoyt.

Travel up to that time was mostly overland by horseback and ox team, but because of detours along the shore to get around boggy ground, the settlers very early turned to the water for transportation, and both freight and passenger traffic was carried up and down the Sound by sloops. The nearest harbors to the Middlesex settlement were Five Mile River and Pear Tree Point Cove, where Good Wives' River meets the tide at Gorham's Pond. At Five Mile River oyster sloops took on their cargoes at Loadin' Rock, a huge boulder, part of which still remains a landmark on the western shore of the river.

Pear Tree Point Cove seems to have been preferred by the settlers of Middlesex Parish, probably because of a higher and drier road leading to it. The landing there was called Clock's Landing and later Ring's End. Clock was a German who came from the Palatinate. Ring's End was the name of a town in England from which some of the early colonists came. A tidewater dam was built at Ring's End very early in the eighteenth century and a grist mill erected. This soon became the community center; so Ring's End Landing shares honors with Middlesex Parish and the Five Mile River fishing-port as the location of the first settlements of the present town.

Sloops sailed in from the Sound up Good Wives' River to Ring's End Landing. Freight and passengers came here under sail from ports both east and west and from Long Island across the Sound. Produce of the settlers was shipped from this point to New York and Boston. At one time wharfs or stores were owned and operated here by Capt. Isaac Jones, Selleck Jones, Jesse Selleck, Epenetus Walmsley, Isaac Gray, Elisha Seeley, John Holmes, Nathaniel Clock, and Bell and Waterbury. Here the farmers brought their grain and made their purchases at stores. Here the grinding was done.

Blacksmiths had their forges here. The last to survive was Spellman's. Before him there was a forge kept by William Barker, and the foundations of his smithy may be seen to the left of the road near the Gorham house as one approaches Ring's End Bridge from the north.

One of the captains of the community was Samuel Selleck, a descendant of the original Jesse, who lived at the place later called Tide Ways, owned for many years by Mrs. Crimmins Jennings.

Many of these early settlers were buried in a plot of ground where Stony Brook empties into Good Wives' River. Several years ago, the town moved the old headstones to Spring Grove Cemetery on the Post Road, where they remain in a good state of preservation.

It was in 1708, according to the Stamford town records, that Richard Scofield and John Youngs were granted deeds to "Ye Streme at Good Wives' River so much as is needful for a grist mill," upon condition that they should build the mill within twelve months and grind "Ye Town's Graine for a Sixteenth Part, and to grind for Ye Town's people before strangers," provided also that Youngs build a highway from the upland hard road to his mill. Youngs failed to agree to the road as laid out by the town. In 1711, Richard Scofield was granted permission to set a house on this highway at the site of his town mill. In 1722 the town again laid out a road down to the mill. This highway was deeded to the town in 1725 by Joshua Scofield.

A year later a second mill was built at Ring's End Landing. These early mills appear in the Town's records as having been first owned by Richard Scofield, John Youngs, and John Clock, son-in-law to Scofield, and Deborah, his wife.

In 1777 one Daniel Gorham, mentioned later, shipped flour to the Commissary General of the American army. On January 10, 1778, H.M.S. Diligent, an armed brigantine, captured the American sloop Eagle, 30 tons, while she was ashore in Good Wives' River. She was loaded with wheat and flour belonging to the Continental Congress and being shipped to Norwalk, Connecticut. Leverett Stevens of Killingworth was commander of the sloop and Jonathan Brigdon of Charlestown, mate. Three persons aboard the sloop were taken prisoner and afterward exchanged in New York for British prisoners.

The British from Long Island, aided by Tory sympathizers in Norwalk and Middlesex, continually harassed this Connecticut shore. On July 21, 1781, the Rev. Moses Mather and a number of his congregation were captured by a band of Tories and British who surrounded the church after services had begun. These raiders had assembled at what is known as Tories' Hole in the Delafield Woods, near the shore of the Sound, and from that hiding-place made their way to the church and effected the capture. The prisoners were tied together and with horses, cattle, and other plunder were marched down to Scotch Cove (now called Scott's Cove), east of Ring's End Landing, off the present Tokeneke shore, and taken in boats to Long Island. Later they were removed to New York, and Dr. Mather, with others, was confined for a time in prison ships in New York harbor and later in the old Provost Jail, then standing in what now is City Hall Park, New York.

It is evident that many families in Middlesex remained loyal to the Crown government at the outbreak of the Revolution. These fled to Canada; a goodly number to Nova Scotia and their lands were forfeited. Their descendants are leaders in the Provincial and Dominion government today.

In 1816, the town of Stamford leased a piece of ground extending from Jesse Selleck's store to the causeway of Selleck Jones's house to John Bell and John Waterbury; part of the causeway still remains to this date. The house occupied by Mrs. Elizabeth Lounsbery stands on this site. A condition of this lease was that Bell and Waterbury agreed to reduce, within the year, the grade over the knoll north of the Gorham house and to use the fill for enlarging the wharf at the landing. Bell and Waterbury were merchants and conducted a general store for trading at the landing; Selleck Jones lived in what now is the Mrs. Junius Browne house near by. Up to as late as ten years ago an old grist mill stood at the dam by the bridge. The group of houses which stand near the bridge today, very old, probably contain many timbers from the original structures, which years ago were badly damaged by fire. One is the old toll house; another is called the Customs House; another, a general store.

The first mill erected was known as Scofield's mill, but on March 19, 1740, the property, including the dam site, house, mill, and two acres of land, was purchased by George Gorham from one Thomas Hill, then owner. It has been in the continued possession of the Gorham family ever since.

The original house bought by George Gorham has disappeared, but the pleasant, square white house now standing on the old site was built in 1789 by Daniel Gorham, son of George. Much of the material in the old house was used in constructing the new one, and members of the Gorham family live in it to this day. The grist mill and pond from then on were known as Gorham's Mill and Pond, and the road leading to it from King's Highway became known as Ring's End Road. What is now an easy grade leading down to the present bridge was called Clock's Hill.

Until 1825 there was no bridge across the dam. The only road from the upland to Long Neck followed a trail (now Good Wives' River Road) on the far side of Good Wives' River, which it crossed by a ford just below Glenbreekin Farm. On February 3, 1825, Joseph Gorham, grandson of George, leased to the town of Darien for ninety-nine years the right to cross the dam with a bridge, and a rough bridge was then thrown across this water. This lease was renewed by the heirs of Joseph Gorham for a period of ninety-nine years on February 4, 1924. The town agreed as before to maintain and keep the dam and flood gates in repair. The first wooden bridge which ran across the dam remained for three quarters of a century, when an iron bridge was built, and this was replaced in 1930 by the present artistic stone structure.

In the meantime, the residents of this growing community had become involved in a quarrel with Norwalk settlers over timber cutting on the town's eastern boundary line. It is said that a serious conflict was barely averted. This trouble was ended by Stamford's addressing a petition to the State Legislature. After several conferences the Legislature passed an act in May, 1820, defining the boundary lines of a new town and giving it a charter, all of the land for the new town being taken from Stamford.

This document was signed at New Haven and brought to Darien on horseback by Thaddeus Bell, great-grandfather of Clarence W. Bell, present chairman of the Board of Finance. Thaddeus Bell was descended in the fifth generation from Francis Bell, one of the leaders of the Wethersfield men who began the settlement of Stamford. He presided over the first town meeting of Darien and during his long life held many positions of trust and responsibility in the town.

Many residents wanted to call the new town Bell Town. The name Darien, which was chosen, is a heritage of the early shipping industry along its shore, and undoubtedly came from some sailor man's fancy.

Oyster, clam, and lobster fishermen were active off this shore up to the beginning of the present century. The Illustrated London News of October 29, 1859, reprinted an article from the Norwalk (Conn.) Gazette of September 27 telling of Darien skippers discovering a new and large bed of oysters between Eaton's Neck and Green's Reef Light where they dredged bivalves as big as a garden spade. A big fleet of fishermen was on the new ground and the excitement equaled that of the oyster war between Ring's End and New Haven fishermen on a similar discovery thirty years previous.

For nearly a century, the Middlesex and Darien countryside was dependent upon sail and later steamboats for its communication east and west. Men had not yet learned to construct drawbridges to let river traffic pass underneath and the many navigable streams through the Connecticut shore country, likewise ridges separating the rivers, were prohibitive barriers to railroad construction. At the height of this water-borne traffic, there were forty to forty-five steamboats in the Sound trade, when, in 1834, the Long Island Railroad started to build a line from Jamaica to Greenport, by way of a ferry across the Sound to Stonington, to reach Boston eventually. The new passenger, mail, and freight service advertised its time as follows:

4 hours—New York to Greenport
2 hours—crossing to Stonington
4 hours—Stonington to Boston

This line was successful at the start, but its prosperity was short-lived. It took so long to plan and build it that by the time it was completed, engineers had learned to bridge the Connecticut rivers, to run grades over its hills, and to complete a railroad the length of its shore. This new railroad was then known, and is still, as the New Haven. It was opened in 1848 and immediately took all the Boston business away from the Long Island route and cut deeply into the business of the Sound steamships.

Then the new town, Darien, which had succeeded Middlesex Parish, suddenly had two railroad stations, at Rowayton and Darien Center; later two others were added, Noroton and Glenbrook. Business activity shifted from the shore to the country back by the new railroad, and Ring's End Landing lost its trade. The wharves were deserted. The grist mill and smithy hung on, but gradually business moved toward Old King's Highway and the new railroad line. For a while the Town Hall was located at Noroton Center, and then it, too, was moved to a site on the Post Road at the corner of Mansfield Avenue, on the eastern end of the Town, where it still remains.

The Lounsbury hardware store is one of the oldest buildings in the town. Most of its timbers, possibly the whole building, formerly stood on the site of the tennis courts near the old Congregational Church at the corner of Brookside Road and Old King's Highway, whence it was moved over the railroad tracks, by horse and windlass, in 1886, to its present site by Senator Charles W. Lounsbury, who founded this sheet-metal and tinsmith business in Darien. He originally came from Baltimore, but had lived in New Canaan, and started his business in Darien after he was discharged from the army at the close of the Civil War.

This building was originally used for a church, later a parish house, and then a school. The church site was the original business center of the old Middlesex community.

Within the memory of the older residents of the present town there was a general store kept by a Mrs. Otis back of the old church on King's Highway, and across the present Post Road, on the northwest corner of Brookside Road, there still stands a house which in the early days was also a general store. Just north of this corner house, on Brookside, stood another, only recently torn down, where Luke Davis lived. He farmed in the summer and in the winter made boots, going to New York by sloop in the autumn to buy his leather and other supplies.

On the north side of the Post Road, just west of the Brookside corner, was a hat shop; the water of the creek was used to soak the felts. On the site of the Review office was a tannery. When the railroad was built, Old King's Highway crossed it at a grade, and later when the tracks were raised the Selectmen refused consent unless the road would build an underpass. They gave their consent only after the court threatened to arrest all of them if they persisted in holding up the completion of the railroad.

The first railroad station was a wooden building and stood farther east, nearer Old King's Highway, and the original Ivanhoe Lodge of Masons had its rooms in the second story.

In those very early days the Mansfield Avenue road and Middlesex road did not run straight north to New Canaan as now but near the Lapham property, this old road bore to the east down to the present West Norwalk–New Canaan road in the valley.

As the water-borne traffic affected the physical construction of the new town, so with the railroad when it was opened; and the coming of the motor car changed it again. Old King's Highway, twisting and turning up hill and down dale, which remained for years a rough route for oxen and horsedrawn vehicles, was cut here and there by detours which made for straighter lines, greater width, and easier grades, eventually evolving into what is now called the Boston Post Road. The center of activity shifted again. The new high school was located and built nearer the geographical center of the town. The new police headquarters building followed a few years later, bringing the court room with it nearer the center of the town.

Whatever further changes the future brings, the town has the satisfaction of knowing that it has a competent Town Plan and Zoning Commission at work, an able Highway Department, a Board of Education, and a new Park Commission, and that its business affairs are in the hands of a capable body of Selectmen and competent Board of Finance.

The history of Darien since its incorporation has been one of steady progress, in particular during the decades following the Civil War. Its growth as a place of residence has increased from year to year. It has always been a residential and farming community, no manufacturing interests of any importance ever having been located here.

Darien has excellent train service to New York and Boston, an emergency landing-field for airplanes close by, two deep-channel harbors on the Sound shore, and bus-line connections for all points; and the completion of the new Merritt Parkway will bring it within an hour's run, through a beautiful parkway system, of New York City.

Darien has become noted for the number of its clubs of various kinds, which have drawn many persons to it, and for the excellence of its school system, the purity of its water supply, its fine system of highways, and its splendid trees and charm of landscape. As a result persons of wealth and culture have been drawn to it in large numbers, have purchased land and erected homes, and have become a part of its fine community life.

LONG NECK

LONG NECK ties close into the early history of Ring's End Landing. A high promontory, bare of trees and stretching far out into the Sound, it was a landmark for early navigators. Difficult of access from the mainland, it contained few habitations. Forage was cut here by the settlers for their cattle and horses, and prior to 1708 they reached it by ferry across Good Wives' River at Ring's End or by a ford for the heavier ox-team loads a mile farther east, near Glenbreekin Farm. Originally Great Island and Hay Island, Salem Straits and Delafield Woods, were all a part of it in the first purchase from the Indians by two settlers, Ward and Law. They and the Sellecks appear to have been the first land-owners recorded, but on the very early warrants and deeds appear also the family names of Abraham, Isaac, and Leeds Pennoyer, Theodosia Gray, Gould Selleck Silliman, the Widow Gould, and David Raymond.

The first large subdivision of Long Neck within the last hundred years was made in 1836 when, by will, Samuel Selleck, widower, a descendant of Jesse, left a 50-acre tract of his original farm of 125 acres and near-by islands to his son George, and five daughters, Nancy Bell, Phebe, Theodosia, Angeline, and Caroline. This will, dated August 5, 1836, is a voluminous document, and in it Samuel not only divided the land among his children, but his house as well. Angeline, for example, was left, in addition to a piece of the land, "the south front room of the lower floor; the south back chamber; the south quarter of the halls and the lower and chamber floors; one-fourth of the garret, southeast; the west end of the shed; the south half of the cellar, with privilege to pass through any other parts of the house that is necessary, and to occupy the back house, and also the green to put out clothes one-fourth of the time; the privilege of both wells for the water, likewise the cisterns and tubs under spouts, one-fourth of the time. Also the south half of the outdoor kitchen; east half of the water house; south half of the carriage house; east half of the hen house; south half of the smoke house"!

The next transfer of ownership of this southern tract of Long Neck is dated 1865, when Harrison Olmsted, son of John Strickland Olmsted of Port Chester, purchased it from the heirs of Samuel Selleck. Olmsted held it seven years.

In 1872 Hugh W. Collender, who was known as a "forty-fiver" from Ireland and had been a participant in one of the several disturbances that swept that country, acquired the property from Olmsted. Previous to this purchase, Collender had owned the northern section of the original Selleck farm. He was evidently a man of ability and one of the first to begin the work of landscaping and beautifying Long Neck. He built several houses and married into an industrial family in New York who manufactured, among other things, pool and billiard tables, and he used considerable of their finely grained wood in the interior decoration of houses he built on the Point.

Up to Collender's purchase, the road to the end of Long Neck followed the west shore. Early residents erected their barns and out-houses along the shore, using the Sound for drainage and refuse. Collender began the first rearrangement of the roads, moving all buildings farther back and toward the center of the Point.

In 1890, John D. Crimmins, in the fourth subdivision of Long Neck, acquired from Collender his first holding of this original fifty-acre tract, and in the further development of the property, built more roads and a number of houses for members of his family.

Later, three brothers, James A., Edwin, and Dr. George A. Trowbridge, all Connecticut-born descendants of Thomas Trowbridge, who settled in New Haven in 1639, became interested in Long Neck. James A. and Edwin purchased from Collender land adjoining the Crimmins tract and joined him in the development of the Neck. One daughter of the late Hugh Collender is now living in Italy. Mrs. Luther Brown and Benjamin F. Collender, grandchildren, also survive, as does Mrs. William Collender, a daughter-in-law of the founder of the family, who lives for part of each year in Westport, Connecticut. The Crimminses and the Trowbridges intermarried and still own a large part of this original tract.

Anson Phelps Stokes acquired the tip of the Neck in 1902 and on it built Brick House, where he and his family lived for many years. John Sherman Hoyt, who developed Contentment Island to the east, married a daughter of Anson Phelps Stokes. During Stokes's ownership of Brick House, Andrew Carnegie occupied it several summers. Brick House is now owned and occupied by the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

Following the Stokes family came the Renshaws, Hafners, Bells, and others. Most of the present houses date from the Collender and Crimmins occupation, but there still stands the Selleck homestead known as Tideways, now owned by L. A. LaMott, the Gray cottage, and the home of Billy Woods, the pilot, who for years took steamboats and barges in and out Good Wives' River to Ring's End Landing.

Treelands, the present home of Col. Thomas Crimmins, was originally the gate-house of the residence Collender built, and the road to the big house led by Colonel Crimmins's present home, whence on a clear day the Empire State Building, the Chrysler Tower, and the Rockefeller Institute can be seen, thirty-three miles due west up the Sound.

GREAT ISLAND CORPORATION

THE land comprising the Great Island estate of William Ziegler, Jr., consisting of 180 acres, including Hay Island, is part of a grant dated March 24, 1645, from Piamiin, Sagamore of Roatan, to Andrew Ward and Richard Law of Stamford, of all the land lying between Five Mile River and Pine Brook. This grant is recorded in the Stamford Town Records, Book A, page 343.

Following this grant, the inhabitants of the town of Stamford claimed possession of the land and the right of occupation.

Long Neck, as Collender's Point was then called, remained undivided among the inhabitants of the town of Stamford, or the Common Proprietors, so called, until March, 1688, when it was apportioned to the seventy inhabitants of the town according to their ratable estate.

By 1762 two brothers by the name of Selleck had become the owners of the whole of Long Neck, but from this date the ownership began to spread among various people.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that during the Revolutionary War one tract was confiscated by the State of Connecticut, as its owner had been attainted for treason in adhering to the Crown of Great Britain. This tract was later sold by the State to one Abraham Davenport, a familiar name in the early annals of Stamford.

In the settlement of an estate in 1842, Great Island was appraised at seventy dollars an acre, only a fraction of its present assessed valuation.

About 1870 Hugh M. Collender began purchasing land on La Belle Pointe and shortly afterward this whole section became known as Collender's Point.

In 1882 Daniel M. Edgar became the owner of Great Island, and from his heirs it passed in 1902 into the hands of William Ziegler, father of William Ziegler, Jr. Mr. Ziegler proceeded to improve and develop his holdings. Rock for the construction of the main residence, walls, etc., was quarried from a ledge on the property. A deep well was drilled and a water-system installed which was later supplemented by the local water company's mains. At one time as many as 200 men as well as numerous teams were employed on these improvements.

William Ziegler, Jr., continued to improve the property after his father's death by adding, among other things, a large greenhouse, coach house, stables, and kennels and laying out a polo field. His activities have won for this owner many prizes in the International Flower Show, National Horse Show, and All-American Field Trials. His great pointer, Mary Montrose, is famous in the history of field trials as the first bitch to win the national championship on three different occasions, and the Great Island Polo Team has won many major matches.

PAGEANT OF DARIEN

ON August 29 and 30 and September 1, 1913, the community put on a historical pageant, raising, through subscriptions, upward of $10,000 to meet expenses. Five hundred adults and children took part, portraying Indians, early settlers, English and Colonial soldiers, Tories, cowboys, clergymen, sailors, and the present type of residents and commuters.

A grassy expanse just east of the Gorham homestead, with the woods on one side and Good Wives' River on the other, formed a natural amphitheater for this elaborate production. It was witnessed by thousands of people who came from far and near and was given in nine episodes, six of which were as follows:

1. The Men of Wethersfield 1641
2. The War with Norwalk 1670
3. The Mill at the Landing 1744
4. The Raid on the Middlesex Church . . 1781
5. The Town of Darien 1820
6. The Coming of the Railroad 1849

Dear Mr. Witheridge,

First let me apologize for not writing this letter earlier, I just plain forgot. My wife passed this along to me a month ago.

I'm very afraid that my father died when I was 10. He was a life resident of Syracuse, as I was. He had two sisters. I have not kept up with them, nor do I ever intend to do so. I was never very inquisitive about my ancestory in regard to that side of the family, and I don't see where I would develope a desire, at this time.

Please forgive me for not being very helpful, and accept my wish that you may be successful in her quest. Perhaps the records at the Syracuse City Hall, could help, as well as the Onondaga Historical Society.

Sincerely
Robert Selleck.

Mr. Robert Sallack

Dear Mr. Sallack,

I have just re-read your letter of last October in answer to my request about information on your ancestry. You will remember that I was interested in finding out if there is some connection between your father's family and that of my daughter-in-law, Virginia Sallack. Her earliest ancestor we have record of was Joseph Whiting Sallack, who was born in the Syracuse, N.Y., area, so we are trying to find out anything we can about Sallacks in that area.

When your letter arrived, I was involved in research on a number of other family lines, so I put your letter aside, as it didn't contain any specific family information. Now I want to get back to this line of search, and I am hoping you will answer the following questions for me:

1. What are the full names of your father's two sisters, and what are the last addresses you had for them?
2. Do you have the date and place of your father's death and his burial place?
3. If you have any other biographical facts about him — such as date and place of birth, marriage information, occupation, religion, and so on — I'd be very happy to receive them.

I can understand your desire not to delve into his background and family relationships, but if you would give me what you do know, I can carry on from there myself. Thank you very much for any information you can provide.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Tom Selleck

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF TV'S FAVORITE PRIVATE EYE

His life isn't entirely a bed of Hawaiian orchids . . . after all, a grueling, six-day, eighty-hour workweek can really cramp a guy's style. But sexy Tom Selleck—with the devastating charm and easygoing humor that are his hallmarks both onscreen and off—has found his very special place in the tropical sun.

"The past few years have been like a big snowball. Once it starts rolling it's hard to stop. Maybe in a few years I'll get control of that snowball. Or maybe it won't be there."
—Tom Selleck, 1983

Two years ago, Tom Selleck's career did resemble a runaway snowball—defying gravity in an upward climb. His hit series, Magnum P.I., had reached the top of the Nielsen mountain. Fan mail was pouring in at the astonishing rate of ten thousand letters a week. Critics dubbed him the Clark Gable of the '80s for his sculpted body as well as his sharp mind. Behind the bushy eyebrows and the bottomless dimples, a new male talent was emerging.

But in a business littered with failure, Selleck's snowball threatened to run him over. With his face plastered all over the newsstands, he feared that overexposure would ruin his career. He complained of Magnum scripts that seemed to feature little more than his six-foot-four-inch, two-hundred-pound body, and of female fans who belly-crawled their way into his backyard. He hired round-the-clock bodyguards, only to fret that the public would turn its back on the hero it had created or that reporters would label him temperamental. Mostly, he worried that his fame would suddenly flicker out.

"If you get hot quick, you get unhot quicker," he once said. And Tom Selleck is determined not to be another flash in the pan.

Today, his snowball is still rolling, but Selleck, at thirty-nine, has it firmly under control. Like the businessman he once planned on becoming, he has begun managing his career with un-Magnum-like prudence: restricting access to the product, enforcing tight quality control and spending a fortune in legal bills to protect his name from gossip-column innuendo. Surrounded by cameras and fans for twelve hours every day, he is fiercely trying to protect what's left of his private life and those he's close to in his battle to stay on top and to stay sane. But for a superstar to lead a normal life requires a superhuman effort.

It's 8:30 A.M. when Tom Selleck, alone, enters Michel's, the elegant, chandeliered restaurant in Honolulu's Colony Surf Hotel. Taking his usual seat at a corner table overlooking the ocean, he opens a newspaper and begins scanning the sports section. Dressed in typical island fashion—jogging shorts, navy polo shirt and tennis shoes—he might pass for one of the well-heeled hotel guests. But it's only a few moments before his Olympic-class looks give him away.

Slowly, necks begin twisting and the air buzzes with the words "Tom" and "Magnum." Across the room, two tourists drop their forks to stare at the solitary figure preparing to take a bite of his cheddar-cheese omelet. Selleck remains buried in his newspaper, brushing his mustache as he reads, rarely looking up.

"Uh—excuse me." Just as Selleck puts down his fork after finishing up a plate of papaya and strawberries, two women shyly step forward to request an autograph. He smiles wearily and tells them he (continued on page 127) doesn't have a pen. Flustered, one of the women fumbles through her purse, finally comes up with a ball-point and hands him a travel brochure to sign. He then quickly rises to leave, looking worried that he'll be further accosted. Tucking the newspaper under his arm, he strides toward the door, thanking his waiter on the way.

He's almost home free when, from behind, a woman in emerald-studded sunglasses and a noisy yellow muumuu grabs his arm—"just to tell my friends I touched you," she apologizes as he turns. Smiling wanly, he nods his head and silently jogs out.

For Tom Selleck, the scene is typical. No matter where he goes, star-hungry fans track him like junior versions of the private detective he portrays on television. Even his occasional trips to the local supermarket turn into spectacles, as curious shoppers check out the contents of his cart to see if the superstar buys lettuce and toilet tissue like ordinary mortals. In the beachside community of Diamond Head, where he lives, a steady stream of Instamatic-wielding teenagers ignores the "Private—No Trespassing" sign on his street. All day long they trek along the narrow, windy street on a pilgrimage to Tom's house. When they do get a peek, however, they're often disappointed.

Selleck's gray, wood-framed house with white trim and porch is no larger than most suburban colonials, and it sits on a hill crowded with other split-levels. Still, perhaps in deference to his success, he's recently added a modest extension to the house he's lived in since before Magnum P.I. began.

In Selleck's yard there's no beachfront, no swimming pool, not even a volleyball court to set it apart. The $500,000 price tag reflects its hillside location. Behind a low lava-rock wall studded with aloe plants and purple orchids, he relaxes by puttering in his garden and stretching out on wicker furniture. Selleck rarely gives parties or entertains; in fact, he maintains such a low profile that several neighbors profess not to know that an actor lives in their midst.

To Selleck, that's a compliment. Honolulu isn't Hollywood, but Tom has been only partially successful in avoiding the paparazzi. Locals keep a respectful distance—"We're used to celebrities from the film colony here," says Honolulu Mayor Eileen Anderson—though tourists aren't so considerate. Determined fans hide in the bushes outside his home, others jump his backyard fence or climb the stone wall surrounding his house to peep through his windows.

This kind of attention, which the low-key Selleck now seems at least partly resigned to, was understandably bewildering to the star in Magnum's early days. Says co-star John Hillerman, who plays the very British majordomo, Higgins, "When he walks down the street and women scream and moan, he can't understand it. He's said, 'I looked the same three years ago as I do now, and nobody palpitated on the street. It's in their minds.' He thinks it's a little freakish."

Coping with his relentless fans is undoubtedly the hardest part of Selleck's success. He looks to his home as a retreat—and any interruptions as invasions of privacy. He's suffered insomnia caused by the public pressure and seeks relief by taking long soaks in a Jacuzzi. To enjoy Oahu's attractions unbothered, he's resorted to wearing disguises. Recently, he donned a Halloween mask, complete with spring-loaded googie eyes, to cruise Waikiki undetected. "I get tired of it," he complains. "But as Mae West said, 'It's better to be looked over than overlooked.'" passenger seat, apparently had a faulty transmission. The vehicle crashed through the third-story guardrail of the parking lot at the Outrigger Canoe Club and nose-dived onto a boat trailer below. Fortunately, the trailer had heavy-duty shocks—the jeep was badly crushed, but Selleck and Kevin escaped serious injury. Both were treated and released the same day from a nearby hospital, leaving Selleck with only minor cuts and bruises that Universal's makeup artists could camouflage.

"We're rolling."

And while in London this summer filming Lassiter, he had another lucky escape when the motorcycle he was riding for a scene skidded and he bruised his leg.

Where Tom Selleck stops and Thomas Magnum takes over is hard to say. "The biggest difference," says John Hillerman, "is that Magnum is a playboy, and Tom's a very conservative fellow." Consider the evidence: Magnum drives a 145-mph Ferrari, lives in a palatial Hawaiian beachfront mansion and is usually surrounded by scantily dressed beauties. Selleck tools around in a navy-blue Bronco jeep, resides in a modest suburban villa and maintains a discreet circle of friends, mostly his co-stars on the show. Magnum wears loud Hawaiian shirts. Selleck claims he hasn't bought one in years, and chooses most of his clothes from Honolulu's Ralph Lauren Polo shop.

Unfortunately, Selleck's fans don't always see the difference, and, as he puts it, "are in love with this guy up on TV [who] doesn't wake up in the morning with bloodshot eyes." Whenever Magnum films on location around Oahu, as many as two hundred fans gather for a glimpse of the star. As Selleck walks between the set and his trailer, cries of "Tom, Tom!" invariably erupt from the crowd. Usually, he stops to sign autographs, shake hands, answer questions and pose for snapshots. He has an image to maintain—that of a genuinely nice guy—and he's conscious of the need to work at it. Fortunately, he is a genuinely nice guy, appreciative of all the adulation. One crewmember explains, "He doesn't mind crowds except when they scream and grab at him." Then he looks to his bearded, red-haired bodyguard, Mike, to shield him from the most intrusive fans.

Lately Selleck has tried to protect himself through litigation. He complains repeatedly about unauthorized cover stories—no matter how flattering—and requests approval over where his pictures will appear. He's named the National Enquirer in a $36-million lawsuit, charging the tabloid with "contriving entire articles where there is absolutely no factual basis." He recently went to court to halt distribution of a poster showing him in a state of semi-undress—his shirt half off and his fly unzipped—complaining, "It was suggestive and distasteful." Even his father has entered the fray, filing a $6-million libel suit over the 1982 Globe article, "Tom Selleck's Love Secrets—By His Father."

> He avoids nightclubbing and the party circuit for practical reasons: Too little sleep and too much fun show up on camera.

Selleck estimates he's spending $10,000 a week on legal fees to protect his image, a difficult act that has nonetheless drawn support throughout Hollywood, especially from friend Carol Burnett, who won her own battle against the Enquirer.

Longtime friends explain that this testy relationship with the press stems from Selleck's cautious nature and conservative upbringing. He's walked off the set after spotting a reporter taking notes . . . not on him, but on one of his co-stars. "He can get mental about his privacy," confides one publicist. Adds Jack Hogan, who's known Selleck since their acting student days in Hollywood, "He knows it won't last forever, and it won't be long before he's looking for another job."

John Hillerman agrees. "The world is now knocking at his door, so he has to put up restrictions. He's said, 'I'm afraid people are going to get tired of looking at me.' He's trying to avoid that as any good businessman would."

While some stars create jealousy because of their celebrity status, that's not the case with Selleck. "There's not a phony bone in his body," says John Hillerman. "He's naturally masculine. He has a nice vulnerability about him. Women look at Tom Selleck and say, 'My God, I want to go to bed with him.' Men look at him and say, 'I'd like to spend an evening having a drink with that guy.' His appeal is universal."

Honolulu city officials certainly have few complaints, even though the on-location filming often means roadblocks and traffic disruptions. One Magnum episode can cost upward of three quarters of a million dollars and the series is a boon to the local economy. Area Ferrari dealers report their sales have skyrocketed since Magnum began driving a $60,000 red model on the show. Tourist authorities maintain Selleck has become Hawaii's biggest attraction since Jack Lord reigned over Hawaii Five-O. "Any time a Tom Selleck show hits a place that's snowing, the telephone lines start perking up at our major hotels and airlines," reports Honolulu Mayor Eileen Anderson.

Selleck's heavy work schedule leaves little time for a social life. He avoids nightclubbing and the party circuit for practical reasons: Too little sleep and too much fun show up on camera. Most evenings, he's content to dine out with cast members Larry Manetti (who plays Magnum's friend, Rick), Roger Mosley and John Hillerman. No trendsetter, he frequents a handful of elegant restaurants that offer dimly lit privacy and simple fare. Although Selleck never drank until he was twenty-one, he now enjoys a glass of Scotch or white wine with dinner.

At The Bistro, a sedate French eatery with turn-of-the century decor and dark wood paneling, co-owner Karl Diebold flies in calves' liver (which is not on the menu) just to accommodate Selleck's taste. "He appreciates it if you can do something special for him," says Diebold. "He's the type of person you want to make happy, and I consider him my friend."

At Nick's Fishmarket, another favorite restaurant, general manager Randy Schoch also considers Selleck "a great guy" and a friend. "We play softball with him—the restaurant team versus the Magnum team," he explains. Who usually wins? "I won't say . . . I don't want to get him mad," Schoch says with a laugh. At Nick's, Selleck's favorite foods are linguine with clams, sashimi and bouillabaisse.

At dinner, conversation is generally freewheeling, with topics ranging from sports to politics to show business. He has his acting heroes, growing up on a diet of Jimmy Stewart, Gary Cooper and especially John Wayne, to whom he's been compared for his virile looks as well as his conservative politics. Selleck's favorite magazine is William F. Buckley's National Review, and he's a supporter of President Reagan, who invited him to attend Bob Hope's eightieth birthday party at (continued) the Kennedy Center. He's gone on record in favor of nuclear power and is opposed to an "obstructionist" Congress. "He's well-informed on current events," notes John Hillerman. "And he holds strong opinions."

Away from his buddies, Selleck's most important relationship is with his stepson, Kevin. In 1981, Selleck and actress/model Jacquelyn Ray were divorced after ten years of marriage, but they still phone each other about twice a week. "I never make an important decision about Kevin without discussing it with Tom," says Ray. When Kevin comes to town, they embark on typical father/son excursions—to fast-food restaurants or the movies—except with a twist. To avoid stirring up the fans, Kevin picks up the burgers, and the pair wait until the lights dim before entering a theater.

Selleck's social calendar seems strictly "PG" fare. Although he's been linked to everyone from ex-Vegas beauty Phyllis Davis to actress Mimi Rogers (his co-star in the TV movie Divorce Wars), he's dated only casually since his divorce. Part of the problem is his harried schedule. Long-term relationships are nearly impossible, he says, "with the hours I work and the zombie I am when I'm off." Another problem is that women are easily threatened by his image. An acquaintance of several women he's dated recently remarked, "Women are always trying to get close to him, but once they do, they start acting dumb."

Lately he's been seeing Jillie Mack, a twenty-six-year-old dancer from the hit British musical Cats. They met last spring when he was in London filming Lassiter, the story of a jewel thief during the 1930s, to be released this spring. Ever-protective Selleck won't talk about Mack, but acquaintances use words like "vivacious," "natural" and "unspoiled" to describe her. Says a girlfriend: "Jillie obviously likes older men. I remember when she was at dance school, she had a crush on actor David Niven and used to knit him woolly hats and gloves."

Last summer Jillie left Cats after only six months—infuriating the show's producers—to spend time with Selleck in Hawaii, where the two were seen at his favorite restaurants.

But with Mack in Britain, Selleck seems to have written off any serious romantic relationship at this stage in his life. Although the tabloids have announced that Selleck and Mack are engaged, Mrs. Mack, Jillie's mother, insists: "They have no plans to marry. They are very good friends and will continue to be so." Selleck himself denies the rumor, invoking the "married to his work" defense.

After filming nine months of the year, from mid-July to mid-April, Tom Selleck's idea of a vacation is to take on a new film project. What little spare time he has he spends alone, reading or gardening. At night he'll occasionally splurge by staying up till three A.M. to watch an old horror movie.

These solitary moments probably help keep him sane and in control of his life. Understandably, he guards them with a passion. He is a private man, respected by friends and associates for his dedication both to his work and to his pursuit of a normal, happy life. With his level-headed, professional control, Tom Selleck's fame should live long after the public's passion for Thomas Magnum has cooled. End

"Within about three weeks of going on the air [in Dec. 1980]," says Selleck, "my whole life did a flip-flop." But the real problem lies elsewhere. He and his wife of 10 years, actress-model Jacquelyn Ray, 31, have been separated since 1979, and they can't figure out what to do next. "It's one of the great sorrows of my life that we can't be together — I'll always pretend to be married for the rest of my life," says Selleck. "We're still very close, still on good terms. We've worked out an agreement to live separately, but we haven't made any moves toward divorce." He frets about being away from Kem, 14, his wife's son from a previous marriage, whom he calls "the only child I have."
If Selleck seems well adjusted, the credit probably goes to his father, Bob, an investment executive, and his mother, Martha, a housewife, who moved their family from Detroit to Sherman Oaks, Calif., when Tom was 4. Like his sister and two brothers, Selleck received a gold watch from his father for not drinking, smoking, or swearing before his 21st birthday.

THE ORGANIZATION OF ONONDAGA COUNTY AND ITS TOWNS TO 1800

by Robert V. Moyer

The land from which Onondaga County was formed was purchased to fulfill the state of New York's obligations to the soldiers who fought in the New York State line of the Continental Army in the American Revolutionary War.

When the Continental Congress decided that the militia system was not adequate for fighting the war and that a regular army must be formed, each state was assigned a quota of regiments to raise. A measure of the size of New York State at that time (consisting of sparsely settled areas along the lower Mohawk Valley, a moderately well settled Hudson River valley and New York City which then was not as large as Boston or Philadelphia) is that it was assigned only two regiments.

Since enlistments for patriotism were inadequate to raise the necessary troops and the draft was a thing of the future, it was necessary for the state either to pay a bounty or to promise land after the war to those who would enlist. Money always being scarce in those days, land was promised to soldiers who would enlist in the two New York regiments.

When the war was over, the land had to be purchased from the Indians and then surveyed into townships and lots. Lists then had to be made of those eligible to draw lots, and finally ballots were drawn and the land was slowly settled.

When this military tract, as it was called, was formed into a county, towns were also formed. Generally two townships were combined to form a single town.

At this point, I must make clear something that even native New Yorkers find confusing. A township is not a town. A township is a real estate subdivision used to define areas of large tracts of land. Towns are political subdivisions, generally smaller than a county, but larger than all villages and cities. Exceptions are the city of Buffalo, which has completely absorbed a town of the same name, and New York City, which has grown to encompass five towns now referred to as boroughs. Because many people refer to villages as towns, they feel the need for another word to use when speaking of towns, and hence they use the word township which legally in New York is something else and which politically does not exist.

In map No. 1 (5 March 1794* to 2 April 1798) the names of the townships are in small horizontal letters and the names of the towns are large diagonal ones. Note the Cayuga and Onondaga resident reservations. These areas were reserved by the Indian nations of those names as a place where they would live forever. The Cayugas eventually sold all of their reservation and the Onondagas most of their reservation which became the Town of Onondaga and the city of Syracuse. Parts of Wayne and Schuyler counties and all of Cayuga County, which included land that became Seneca and Tompkins counties, were removed from Onondaga County shortly before the 1800 census. About half of Oswego County and all of Cortland County were still included in Onondaga County at the time of the census. The final map in the series shows the county and the towns as they are today. We would like to have shown the organization of the towns from the organization of the county to the present, but it would have taken too much time and expense.

As usual, the chronology of the formation of the towns was taken from French's Gazetteer of New York State. The exact wording of the acts forming the county and towns and the exact dates of organization were obtained from the Laws of New York in the archives of the Onondaga Historical Association. Simeon Dewitt's map of the military tract was used as a base map.

Perhaps I should explain the utility of these maps. The early settlers in newly formed counties generally named the town when identifying their place of residence. This made sense since at that time there were usually few villages or settlements and most people lived on farms. The rather large original towns were reduced in size when the population grew large enough to support a smaller and more compact town in which it would be easier to attend town meetings to transact official business; hence, it was easily possible to be living in Marcellus in 1794 and in Camillus in 1800 and not have moved at all. A farm in Lysander, Onondaga County, in 1800 could be in Oswego County today. A resident of the south part of Fabius, Onondaga County, in 1800 would be living in Cortland County today. To track down elusive ancestors, it helps to know the geography of your ancestor's day.

It is suggested that readers also consult the Tree Talks maps of counties referred to in Mr. Moyer's discussion. These maps were prepared by Mr. Moyer to accompany transcripts of the censuses of those counties. The maps and transcripts were printed in Tree Talks as follows: Seneca County ...1810, September 1975; Tioga County...1820, December 1977; and Cortland County...1820, December 1980.

An article on the military tract by Robert S. Rose, "The Military Tract of Central New York," appeared in Tree Talks 4:1, pages 12-15, March 1964. A condensed form of this article can be found in 18:1, March 1978. Names of those drawing lots in the military tract were printed in 4:2 through 11:1. Abstracts of Sessions Laws of New York, land disputes, petitions of soldiers and their heirs have been printed in Tree Talks beginning in 7:1, continuing through 12:1, and again in 18:1.

Americans of Royal Descent, Charles M. Browning, 7th Ed., 1911, Reprinted 1969

Dacre, of the Fiones blood, had a daguhter named Catherine. See further as to this in the "Boston Transcript," 13 January, 4 April, and 30 November, 1904. The only "Lord Dacres," of proper age, who had a daughter named Catherine, was Humphrey de Dacre, the seventh feudal baron of Gillesland, and the first Baron Dacre of the North, by writ. See Additional MSS. No. 5530, fo. 17, British Museum, or Nichols's "Coll. Geneal. Topog., Vol. I., 392 and 407, and "Boston Transcript," 8 May, 1905, and p. 460.

FARWELL. Pedigree LXXXV.—After printing this "Pedigree" in good faith, I discovered that the immigrant, Henry Farwell, was not of the parentage given to me. I find that his alleged mother was born in the year he came to New England! And "Henry," a younger son of John Farwell, of Hill Bishop, was born about thirty years after the immigrant came over! I have referred to this "fake pedigree" in the "Boston Transcript," 24 February, 1904.

LYMAN. Pedigree XXXVI.—This claim is reproduced from Dr. Coleman's "Lyman Genealogy." It seems that Sir "William" Lambert, of Owlton, and his wife, Lady Joan de Umfraville, had no son named "Robert," and that the "Robert Lambert, of Owlton," his alleged son, was the son and heir of Sir John Lambert, of Owlton, the son and heir of the said Sir "William," by the Lady Joan. Since printing this claim to royal descent, I find that there is some uncertainty about it, because there is no evidence, and only assumption, by Dr. Coleman, that Henry Lambert, of Ongar, in Essex, 1447, was the son of Robert Lambert, of Owlton, in Durham. I am retaining the claim, hoping that it may be substantiated. See further as to it in the "Boston Transcript," 16 May, 1904.

READ. Pedigree LXXX.—Since printing this claim, I find that William Read, of Woburn, was not the son of Sir Thomas, nor was the immigrant's wife, Mabel Kendall, the granddaughter of Henry and Helen Kendall, as believed by the compilers of the "pedigree;" therefore the claim to royal descent in these lines fails. See further as to this claim in the "Boston Transcript," 29 February, and 16 May, 1904.

WHITING. Pedigree LII.—This claim of royal descent is reproduced from "The Whiting Memorial," and the N. E. His. Gen. Reg., XV., 61. Since printing it I have discovered that Lady Elizabeth St. John, 1605-1677, through whom the Whitings claimed royal descent, was not of all the descent claimed for her. She certainly was the daughter of Sir Oliver St. John, of Keysoe, M. P., d. 1625, but he was the son of Henry St. John, of Keysoe, Gent., and not of Sir John St. John, as on p. 218 (who was of royal descent), as is evident from the will of the said Sir Oliver's mother, proved 7 September, 1616. As the connection of the said Henry St. John with the Lords of St. John, of royal blood, has not been found, this claim may be said to rest in abeyance, and I retain it in the hope that it can be satisfactorily remodeled. See further as to the errors in this "pedigree," the "Boston Transcript," 30 December, 1903.

WILKINSON. Pedigree LXIII.—This was a "pedigree" compiled by Mr. H. G. Somerby, in the American Heraldic Journal, I., 85. Since I reproduced it, I have learned the claim that Lawrence Wilkinson was the son of William and Mary (Conyers) Wilkinson, cannot be substantiated by any evidence, and that there is no proof that the said Mary Conyers, p. 276, through whom the blood royal, was the wife of the said William Wilkinson. I am retaining the claim, hoping that it may be improved. I have given more details as to the unreliability of this claim in the "Boston Transcript," 27 July, 1904.

See pp. 424 and 427, 4th edition.

Page 26.—Pedigree on p. 408 is the corrected version of the descent of Lady Alice Wotton, wife of Sir John Cirencester, or Chichester, of Kanleigh. Her grandfather, Sir Roger Moels, or Moelis, Kt., was the feudal lord of Newmarch and North Cadbury, Somerset. He served in the war in Wales, 1277, and was appointed governor of Llanbadarn-mawr castle, and d. 1295. His wife, Lady Alice, was the daughter and heiress of Sir William de Preux, or Prowse, Kt. His father, Nicholas de Molis, was a great personage in the Court of Henry III., and was ambassador, high sheriff, governor of Guernsey, Jersey, etc., and of the castles of Rochester, Canterbury, Shirborne, Cort, etc.

If Mr. Boyd was aged 62 when he died, in 1798, he was born about 1736, and for this reason the question was raised, could he have been the "James, b. and bapt. 3 and 4 May, 1732," the tenth child of Robert Boyd, of Kilmarnock, 1689-1762, who was m. 25 October, 1714, and had eleven children? I., and excluded his brother, Sir John (d. 1312), and Ralph, and the latter's son, Sir John Bigod, of Singes, Norfolk (d. 1305). Sir John (d. 1312), is supposed to have been the one who had two sons, John, his heir, and Roger, of Settrington, who had John and Roger, and, it is also claimed, was the father of Joan Chauncey (see p. A). See Cauci or Chauncy Genealogy, in Banks's "Stemmati Anglican," pedigrees of families omitted by Dugdale.

Page 67.—As to John Chauncy, who d. 8 June, 1510; From Plea Rolls, de Banco, Easter, 20 Edw. IV., 1481, "Hereford:"—"Walter Patsyll and Rose, his wife, sued John Chauncy, late of Sabrygeworth, gentleman, for illegal entry by force into a tenement at Sabrygeworth. Ralph Gyfford, formerly seized of said tenement, had granted it to John Gyfford and Matilda, his wife, and to the heirs of their bodies. According to an inq. P. M., taken 1448-9, on the death of John Chauncy, the manor of Great Swampford, called Giffords, had descended to John Gyfford, to William, his son, to Margaret, heir, wife of John Chauncy. Margaret had granted said Manor to John Chauncy, her eldest son, and John Chauncy, the elder, by his deed, had granted it to John Chauncy, the younger, his brother, to be held by him and his heirs forever." HARTFORD FAMILY OF WHITING.

For a genealogical account of the descendants of Col. William Whiting, the founder of Hartford, Conn., and his wife Susanna, who came over here probably in 1633, see "Goodwin's History" of the family; also "Hunter's Tract," 3 Mass. Hist. Coll., "Farmer's Register," and "Savage's Genealogical Dictionary." The descendants of this eminent progenitor are very numerous, and several of them have been distinguished. Many, if not most, of the families of this name, in Connecticut and in Western Massachusetts, have sprung from him.

Inquiries have frequently been made, whether any connection could be traced between the three Whiting families of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn, Col. William Whiting of Hartford, and Nathaniel Whiting of Dedham. Thus far no relationship has been discovered between them. The family of Rev. Samuel Whiting belonged to Boston, in the county of Lincoln; that of Col. William Whiting of Hartford, and of Nathaniel Whiting of Dedham, according to Mr. Hunter (3. Mass. Hist. Coll., x., 71), belonged to Boxford, in the County of Suffolk. Mr. Savage (in his Geneal. Dict.) conjectures that this stock might include that of Rev. Samuel Whiting, although, he says, he came last from the county of Lincoln. Mr. Savage was probably not aware that this clergyman, instead of having come "last" from Boston, belonged to a family which had been settled there for several centuries before the first Pilgrim came to these colonies. Although no connection between these ancient contemporaries has yet been shown, it by no means follows that none exists. It will be left for other genealogists to make further examinations in the English records, and to ascertain whether they were descendants from the same ancestor.

There is some reason to believe that the Virginia family of Whiting are of the same stock as that of Rev. Samuel Whiting; but the proofs have not been sufficiently developed to warrant a positive assertion of that fact.

Dear Sue,

I have finally gotten around to sending you the Whiting-Selleck material we talked about at church. Our son Tom in Chicago is married to Virginia Selleck. For professional reasons she still goes by her maiden name. They both have their Ph.D.'s in counseling psychology, and they both work for Thresholds, a psychiatric rehabilitation center.

I've done some work on Virginia's genealogical background, but I've struck a few snags, as you can see from the enclosed sheets. We have her Selleck ancestry back to her great-great-grandfather, Joseph Whiting Selleck, born in 1799 in Syracuse, N.Y. I also have Selleck records that show two Selleck brothers, Peter and Abraham, married to two Whiting half-sisters, Martha and Deborah. Since these are not overly common surnames, I have assumed that Joseph Whiting Selleck is probably the grandson of either Peter or Abraham. However, I have very few records on either of their descendants, so I cannot make the connection.

Back to the Whiting line, you will see that Martha and Deborah were daughters of Joseph Whiting by different wives. Since you have quite a bit of information on the Whitings, I'm hoping that you might be able to discover the parents of this Joseph Whiting. You might also have something further on the descendants of Peter Selleck and Martha Whiting or the descendants of Abraham Selleck and Deborah Whiting.

I probably shouldn't be sending you so much material, but personally I like to have enough related information to put it all into context. At any rate, you don't have to read anything you don't want to!

Thank you for checking into this. We'd be very pleased and grateful if you should happen to discover the ancestry of Joseph Whiting or more about the descendants of his daughters Martha and Deborah in your records. You might even turn out to be related to Virginia.

Yours sincerely,

David G. Witheridge

WHEELER, Benjamin, m. 1794, March 4, Polly Fitch.

WHIPPLE. Matthew Whipple, of Ipswich, m. Jemima Lane, dau. of Job, 1, and had a son Matthew, b. 1685, Oct. 20, who inherited one-fourth of the Winthrop farm from his grandfather. His share extended from the Two Brothers on Concord river to the road and along the river, including 375 acres. The records furnish no evidence that he ever occupied this farm. He was prob. father of John, who with wife Susanna, had children: John, b. 1722-3, Jan. 5. Susanna, b. 1726, Aug. 19.

WHITE. 1. John, is on tax-list 1736; m. 1741, Sept. 23, Mehitable French, dau. of William, 6; d. 1796, April 11. He lived east of Fox hill. No children recorded. He perhaps had Daniel, 3, and Nancy, who m. 1778, Aug. 2, Josiah Orne.

2. John, "Esq., formerly of Charlestown," d. 1811, Nov. 23, aged 93. He was son of Isaac, of Boston, as appears from the following inscription in the South burying-ground: "Mrs. Rebecca White, widow of Mr. Isaac White, late of Boston. When the British Troops took possession of the town of Boston, she went to her son, John White, Esq., of Charlestown, and continued in his family till she died in Billerica Sept. 17, 1782. Age 94." He lived on Woburn street, near Dr. Wilson's.

4. Nancy, m. 1742, Dec. 19, John Brown.

WHITFORD, William, son of William, was b. in Hillsboro', N. H., 1799, Oct. 5. He m. Sarah ——, and 1832, May 13, Mary Stearns, dau. of John, 13. Ch. Martha Lucy, b. 1826, May 14; m. Charles H. Hill, 40. William Benjamin, b. 1828, Jan. 9. George Henry, b. 1829, July 24. Edward Bacon, b. 1831, May 13. John Stearns, b. 1833, May 22. Edward Lorenzo b. 1836, July 23. Mary Eliza, b. 1838, April 18. Francis Owen, b. 1843, April 21. Addison Bernard, b. 1847, April 29.

WHITING. 1. Rev. Samuel, the first pastor of Billerica, was the oldest son of Rev. Samuel and Elizabeth (St. John) Whiting, and born 1633, March 25, in Skirbeck, very near Boston, in Lincolnshire, England. His father came to America in 1636, and became the pastor of Lynn, Nov. 8. He d. 1679, Dec. 11, aged 82. Our Samuel graduated at Harvard College in 1653. His class was the largest graduated before 1690, and included some of the names most eminent in the colony; and among them was Thomas Crosby, elder brother of Simon so long his parishioner in Billerica. The subject of Mr. Whiting's thesis at graduation was the question, "An detur Maximum et Minimum in Natura?" which he affirmed. He remained at college a year after graduating, and the fact is noted as peculiar that his quarter bills were almost always paid "by silver." He was admitted a freeman, 1656, May 11; and in 1658, as elsewhere related, he came to Billerica, to fill a large and honorable place in the history of the town. On his settlement, the town granted Mr. Whiting "one tenne-acre lott, or single share," with all town privileges. His house-lot was "twenty acres * lying upon the Towneship, on the South side of it, upon part of which his house now standeth. It is bounded by George Willice on the North, the brook highway on the East, by Charnstaffe lane on the South, by John Sternes' feild on the West; also, a highway passing crosse it against the pound, being four pole wide." This highway was and is the Concord road, and Mr. Whiting's house stood north of Charnstaffe lane just where it descends to the brook, in the field now owned by Miss Susan Hill. He had another small grant near, "one acre, more or less, lying on the West side of John Sternes' feild, bounded by the feild on the East of it, by the River West, by George Willice North, by George ffarley South, a highway on it," etc. This highway was Charnstaffe; and in 1685 we find this record: "Granted more to him, that part of y^e^ highway called Charnstaffe lane, which lyeth Westward of y^e^ country road to Concord, to take it from s^d country road untill you come down to George ffarley's land that he purchased of John Sternes (deceased); they only reserving the priviledge of a private highway toward Concord river." This westward extension of Charnstaffe, beyond the point where the road to Bedford turns south from it, is still a private lane. Another grant on the township touches in its description several points of the local geography. "Granted more to him, one parcell of land conteining twelve acres, more or lesse, bounded by Jn^o. Sternes on the South, by a small skirt of land w^ch he had of the towne (for highway damage) on v^e towneship, joyneing to his farme line; bounded on the East by John Marshall, in y^e old Township line; and ther his S. W. corner is a white oake standing on the East side of y^e ash swamp, w^ch white oake is the N. E. corner of Mr. Dudley's farme; bounded by the country road on the West; and by land (yet lying in comon to y^e use of the Towne) reserved for the ministry on the North." This description compared with the corresponding grant to Stearns (see under Stearns, John, 1) proves that the north-east corner of the Dudley farm and the south-east corner of the township were at the same point, on the east side of Ash swamp, where Charnstaffe lane and Tufts lane extended, would meet. Mr. Whiting received twenty-three grants in all the various parts of the town, and different divisions, amounting to more than 200 acres. He was one of the seventeen ministers who bore testimony against the settlement of Rev. John Davenport over the First Church, in Boston; and he preached the Artillery Election sermon in 1682. But he published nothing. His descendant, Rev. Moses G. Thomas, formerly of Concord, N. H., had a volume of his MS. sermons, but it shared in the dispersion of his library, in Missouri, some years since, and no clue to its place of concealment has been found. A similar fate seems to have befallen afolio MS. mentioned by Farmer as in his possession, containing notes of his sermons by Jonathan Danforth. He m. 1656, Nov. 12, Dorcas, dau. of Leonard Chester, and b. in Wethersfield, Conn., 1637, Nov. 1. Her father was a nephew of Rev. Thomas Hooker, D.D. He lived a year or two in Watertown, and assisted in exploring the Connecticut valley and selecting the locations there, when Dr. Hooker and his company removed from Newtown to Hartford. He d. 1648, Dec. 11, and his widow Mary m. Hon. Richard Russell, one of the foremost citizens of Charlestown. She d. a widow, 1688, Nov. 30, aged 80. The happy union of Mr. and Mrs. Whiting continued 56 years, and they were separated by death only 13 days. She d. 1712-13, Feb. 15, and he d. Feb. 28. Ch. Elizabeth, b. 1660, Nov. 6; m. 1702, Oct. 14, "Mr. Thomas Clerk" (Rev. Thomas Clark) pastor of the church in Chelmsford from 1678 to his death, 1704, Dec. 7. She had one dau., Abigail, b. after her husband's death, who m. Samuel Green. Among her descendants are President Porter of Yale College, and George B. and Charles E. Butler, eminent lawyers of New York. Samuel, 2, b. 1662-3, Jan. 19. John, b. 1664, Aug. 1; graduated H. C., 1685; ordained pastor of the church in Lancaster, 1691, Dec. 3; and was there killed by the Indians 1697, Sept. 11, leaving two young daughters, who died the same year. Oliver, 3, b. 1665, Nov. 8. Mary, b. 1667, May 28; m. —— Burchstead, of Lynn, and d. at Lexington 1740, Nov. 13. Dorithy, b. 1668, Sept. 23, and d. 1740, Jan. 31. Joseph, b. 1669-70, Feb. 7; grad. H. C., 1690; d. 1701, Sept. 6. James, b. 1671, Aug. 20, and d. Sept. 1. Unis, b. 1672, Sept. 6, and d. Sept. 20. Benjamin, b. 1675, Sept. 26, in Charlestown, and d. Oct. 18. Benjamin, b. 1682, Nov. 5, and d. Nov. 20.

2. Samuel, son of Rev., Samuel. 1, b. 1662-3, Jan. 19. John Whiting, esq., mayor of Boston, in England, and brother of Rev. Samuel Whiting, of Lynn, advanced £50 in aid of the Massachusetts colony. In return, the General Court granted him 500 acres of land, which he transferred to his American brother, who gave it to his son, the Billerica pastor. The grant was located on Salmon brook, in Dunstable, and passed into the possession of Samuel Whiting, jr., who became one of the first settlers of Dunstable, and a leading man in that town. He was taken a prisoner by the Indians, in 1704, and carried to Canada, but escaped; and in 1713 received £10 from the colony for his wounds and sufferings. His house was a garrison in 1710. He d. 1714–5, March 8, and is buried in Billerica. His wife's name was Elizabeth. She m. 2d, William Patten, 5. Ch. Samuel, b. 1687, Oct. 22; was in Lovewell's fated expedition in 1725. He received his father's farm in Dunstable; was living there in 1747, and prob. d. there. He had a son Joseph, town clerk in Dunstable, 1774, who had 10 children; perhaps James, of Hollis, and others. Elizabeth, born 1689; m. Rev. Samuel Ruggles. 2. Catherine, b. 1691; m. John Lane, 2. Leonard, b. 1693, Aug. 12. Joseph, b. 1695, Dec. 14. [These two sons were "out of the province" in 1718 when their father's estate was settled.] Mary, b. 1702. Dorcas, b. 1703; m. Rev. Benjamin Ruggles, Y. C., 1721, pastor of Middleboro' and of New Marlboro' from 1754 to his death, 1782. He was brother of Rev. Samuel Ruggles. John, b. 1706, March 11, and d. before 1718.

3. Oliver, son of Rev. Samuel, 1, b. 1665, Nov. 8; m. 1689–90, Jan. 22, Anna Danforth, dau. of Jonathan, 1. He was a representative, town clerk, selectman, and justice of the peace: an active and useful citizen. He d. 1736, Dec. 22; his widow d. 1737, Aug. 13. Ch. Oliver, 4, b. 1691, March 29. Dorcas, b. 1692–3, March 21; m. Dea. Joshua Abbot, 1. Mary, b. 1695, May 4. John, b. 1697, Nov. 11, and d. Dec. 17. John, 5, b. 1699, Oct. 14. Samuel, 6, b. 1702, Sept. 6. Anna, b. 1705, April 15; m. Jonathan Pollard, 7. Mary, b. 1736, July 7.

5. John, son of Oliver, 3, b. 1699, Oct. 14; m. 1726–7, March 9, Sarah Hunt, dau. of Thomas, 5. She d. 1745, Nov. 17, and he m. Anne ——. He lived in Tewksbury. Ch. John, 9, b. 1727–8, Jan. 7. Sarah, b. 1730, Aug. 5, and d. Aug. 6. Sarah, b. 1731, Dec. 21. Leonard, b. 1734, March 27. He was in the French and Indian war; was taken prisoner and compelled to run the gauntlet, escaping with only his life and a shirt-sleeve. At the surrender of Quebec, in 1759, he was in command of a company. When the Revolution came, he was charged with loyalty to the crown, and became very obnoxious to the patriots of Hollis, where he then resided; but he held his ground and remained there until 1798. His son, Gen. Henry Whiting, published a volume, Revolutionary Orders of General Washington, consisting of selections from papers preserved by Gen. John Whiting, while acting as adjutant of the second regiment of the Massachusetts line. He had preserved most or all of the orders which it was his duty to record, and from these the volume is made up. He belonged to the company of minute-men in Billerica, 1775, and with his father and brother shared in the running fight, as the British retreated from Concord. He joined the army at Cambridge; was under Arnold on Lake Champlain in 1776; and with Gates through 1777, receiving a commission that year. The remainder of the war he was with the main army, until Washington went to the command in Virginia. His record after is thus stated: "Lieutenant-Colonel 4 Infantry, 8 July, 1808; Adjutant and Inspector of the Army, 17 July, 1809; Colonel 5 Infantry, 31 Dec., 1809; died 3 Sept., 1810, at Washington." Samuel Whiting

12. Samuel, son of Samuel. 10, b. 1758, Dec. 12. Of this good man we give a portrait believed by his grandson, Dr. John S. Whiting, who has kindly furnished it, to be a very good one. Dr. Whiting also contributes this sketch, which affords so pleasant a picture of Deacon Whiting and his times, that it must be given nearly in full. He says: "In 1840 I went to school in Billerica and lived with my grandfather. * He was then 82 years old, somewhat infirm, but able to attend to his usual round of duties. He went to church regularly twice a Sunday, locking up the house, and taking his whole family with him; he riding with one of his daughters in his 'one-hoss shay'; the others walking after with me and the foot-stoves.

It was in that winter, I think, that he resigned his deaconship. After communion, when this fact was announced, Mr. Preston moved that the church give him a vote of thanks for his 40 years of duty, during which time he had not been absent a single service; which motion, in a few appreciative remarks, my grandfather deprecated as unusual and improper, whereupon it was withdrawn. In 1776 he was drafted into the army and served about eight months as a private and sergeant, acting as clerk of his company. He was at the battle of Stillwater and at the taking of Burgoyne. I delight in recalling his narrative of incidents of the campaign as drawn from him by the questions of neighbors and friends, some of whom sat around his walnut fire nearly every winter evening. I well remember a boyish question of mine: 'Grandfather, did you ever shoot a red-coat?' and the very solemn answer, which I did not then understand: 'I hope not.' Also, I recall how with moistened eye he told of taking deliberate aim and firing at that famous scout, Harvey Birch, the hero of Cooper's 'Spy,' but happily without effect. How he managed to get an education, I never knew, but he was well versed in mathematical science, — I knew of his calculating eclipses, — and became Mr. Pemberton's assistant at his academy as instructor in the English branches. One of his pupils, Hon. Thomas G. Cary, spoke of him at the Bi-Centennial, in 1855, as 'that brave old soldier of the Revolution and servant of God, Deacon Whiting, who had practised the hand-writing which he taught us, in making out rolls and returns with benumbed fingers on the drum-head.' Like his ancestor, Jonathan Danforth, he became a surveyor, and many of his plans of Billerica farms are now preserved among the records at East Cambridge. I have in my possession a barometer, marked as 'made by W. & S. Jones, No. 35, Holbron, London,' which hung beside the tall clock in the family room for I don't know how many years before my time. I doubt if there are many older in the country still in 'going order.' There was also an improvised sun-dial upon the window-sill arranged scientifically so as to indicate 12 o'clock M. at any season of the year. For him I had and have the greatest veneration as a thoroughly good man, living a simple and blameless life, and doing kindness wherever it was in his power. Not less do I revere the sainted name of his eldest daughter, my aunt Harriet, then a maiden lady of fifty-one, and the good angel, it seemed to me, of the whole town. Were any seriously ill, she was always ready and first called to 'watch' with them and furnish those little comforts and delicacies which sick people are supposed to require; and if any died, it was she who was expected to prepare tenderly the remains for the last solemn rites.

The actual money paid for living by a family of such few wants and simple tastes as my grandfather's could have been little compared with what are now considered necessary expenses. Flour, coffee, tea, taxes, church-rates, and clothing, I believe, were the chief items which were paid for in money. I do not recall any visits to dress-makers or tailors, and much of the bedding was of home manufacture, made, perhaps, in the house a half century before. The table was largely supplied from the farm. A hog was killed in the fall and prepared for present and future use; a calf in the spring, and fowl and turkeys, as occasion required, which, with milk and eggs, furnished the animal food, while the common vegetables, with Indian and rye meal, cranberries, barberries, shagbarks, apples, and a few other fruits, supplied a sufficient variety to make the changes of one's daily food conducive to good health. In my time at Billerica there was no settled clergyman, the pulpit being supplied every Sunday by candidates, who always, as I recollect, dined at my grandfather's, invariably on baked beans, baked potatoes, brown bread, suet pudding, and apples, which I was led to believe, by the praises put upon it by the polite clergymen, was a repast worthy of a king. But I have rambled enough. Of my grandfather's personal appearance I cannot speak very definitly. He was of medium stature, of a venerable aspect, with white hair worn in a cue tied up in a black silk ribbon, not an eel-skin." Deacon Whiting lived south of Charnstaffe lane, west of the brook, and opposite the place of his ancestor, the first Billerica pastor. 14th October, 1643; he married a second wife, Susanna ——, who survived him; he died 11th September, 1650. His son, Samuel, was instructed at Harvard College, but did not graduate; he was ordained 26th March, 1650, and died in Boston (N. E.), 30th March, 1662. He left a son, Samuel, whose two sons, Samuel and Atherton, both died before middle age.[1]

REV. SAMUEL WHITING.

The family of WHITING was very early connected with Boston and the neighbourhood. William Whytynge, of Boston, is mentioned in the Subsidy Roll of Edward III. (1333). William Whyting, of Deeping, occurs in DUGDALE, under the date 1352, and John and Robert Whiting, of Thorpe, near Wainfleet, are named by the same authority as living in 1560. The arms of the family were quartered with those of Hunston, Sutton, Stickney, Gedney, and Enderby, in a shield on a mantel-piece in the chantry of St. Lawrence,[2] at Leake; and, in another shield in the same place, with those of Hunston, Sutton, Stickney, and Smith of Elsham. The earliest mention of this family in the Corporation Records is in 1590, when John Whiting was a member of the Common Council, and Erection bailiff; and the first record of the family in the Parish Register is the baptism of John Whiting, son of John, on the 4th of June, 1592. John Whiting was Mayor of Boston in 1600 and 1608; he was the father of Samuel Whiting, who was born at Boston, 20th November, 1597, and who was entered of Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1613, and took his degrees of A.B. and A.M. in 1616 and 1620 respectively. He soon after received orders and became chaplain in a family which was connected with the Bacons and Townsends of Norfolk, and continued in that position three years. He was afterwards settled as a colleague with Mr. Price, at King's Lynn, in the same county. He remained three years at Lynn, but complaints being made to the Bishop of Norwich, of his nonconformity in administering the services of the Church, he removed to the Rectory of Skirbeck, near Boston, where his nonconformity was also complained of, and led subsequently to his emigration to the American colonies. The name of his first wife has not been discovered. He was married to his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Oliver St. John, own cousin of Oliver Cromwell, and afterwards Chief Justice of England, at Boston, on the 6th of August, 1629. His brother, John, was Mayor of Boston in 1626, 1633, 1644, and 16[illegible]5.[3] James, another brother, was Mayor in 1640. Robert Whiting surrendered the office of Sergeant-at-Mace, 28th June, 1631, and was elected Marshal of the Admiralty, which office he resigned 17th November, 1632. The Rev. Samuel Whiting resigned the rectory of Skirbeck in 1636, and emigrated to America; he arrived in Boston (N. E.), May 26; and, in the following November, removed to Lynn, in Massachusetts, where he officiated as minister until his death there, on the 11th December, 1679, when he was eighty-two years of age; his wife died at Lynn in 1677, aged seventy-two. Mr. Whiting's second son, John, was a graduate of Harvard University. He returned to England, and was appointed Rector of Leverton: he died in 1689.

We believe the male line of the Whitings in this neighbourhood became extinct by the death of the Rev. Samuel Whiting, Rector of Fishtoft, in 1781. The American branch of the Whiting family is, at present, represented by William Whiting, Esq., an eminent jurist, and President of the New England Historical Society.[1]

EDMUND QUINCY.

The QUINCY family is a very ancient one in Lincolnshire, branches of which may be traced in Fishtoft, Long Sutton, Walcot, near Falkingham, Aslackby, &c. They bore arms at the Herald's Visitation in 1564.[2] Edmund Quincy, who went over to America with John Cotton in 1633,[3] is traditionally said to have resided at Fishtoft. He lived a very little time in America, dying in 1636, at the early age of thirty-three. He left a son, Lieutenant-Colonel Edmund Quincy, who died in 1698; and from him descended, in the male line, Josiah Quincy, junior, who was very prominent, and of highly-deserved celebrity, during the revolutionary period; and, in the female line, JOHN ADAMS, and JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, and the late Chief Justice CRANCH, of the district of Columbia.

HUTCHINSON FAMILY.

This family lived at Alford, in Lincolnshire, but it was probably connected with a family of the same name which long resided in Boston.[4] The HUTCHINSONS of Alford

"were there intimately acquainted with Mr. Coddington and Mr. Cotton the minister, who sympathised in their religious opinions and persecutions. The family which emigrated to America consisted of an aged widow, four sons, and a daughter, the wife of the Rev. John Wheelwright.[5] William, the eldest son, was the husband of the celebrated Mrs. Ann Hutchinson,[6] and he and his brother Richard took out adult families to America. Edward the third son, and his nephew Edward, the son of William, are said to have accompanied Mr. Cotton in 1633."

The remainder of the family followed in 1635 or 1636. They purchased land at Boston (N. E.), and engaged themselves in the civilisation and conversion of the Indians. The early career of this family in America was greatly influenced by the part which Mrs. Hutchinson took in the Antinomian controversy which then prevailed. A religious persecution, and some very severe acts of the Colonial Government, induced the family to remove to Rhode

We do not know whether Richard Whiting, the last abbot of Glastonbury, was connected with the Lincolnshire family. He was far advanced in life at the time of the Reformation; he was too old to relinquish his long cherished opinions, and too firm in renounce his religious principles. He offered a decided opposition to the proceedings of Henry VIII., and was condemned to be "hanged, drawn, and quartered," which sentence was most cruelly executed; LELAND, in his MSS. preserved in the Bodleian Library, calls Abbot Whiting, "Homo sane candidissimus, et animus meus singularis:" but he afterwards scored the line with his pen.—MERRYWEATHER'S Bibliomania, p. 144.

Dear Virginia:

Your letter just arrived and I am glad to give you what little information I do possess concerning the Selleck ancestry. It would seem very likely that your Joseph Whiting Selleck is a descendant of either Peter or Abraham Selleck. I would favor Peter slightly for geographical reasons. Martha Whiting was a daughter of Joseph Whiting. I do not have any information about Abraham Selleck or Deborah Whiting.

The information that I have on the Sellecks was given to me by a friend who works for the New York State Geneological Society, so many of the sources of information are not in my records, unfortunately. I do know from my own visits to the library of the Society in New York City that there is a rather complete book on the Sellecks there.

All the information that I possess on my ancestors is in the process of being computerized, so this letter may be delayed as I am still entering my notes on the Sellecks. I have enclosed copies of the data on the Sellecks that would probably be of interest to you. Also enclosed are xerox copies of a couple of sources about the Selleck forbearers.

Your Joseph Whiting Selleck's birthdate of 1799 would make him probably the grandchild of Peter and Martha (if indeed he is their descendant) since Peter died in 1753. My Great-great grandfather Ebenezer Lockwood Selleck born in 1796 would have been almost his exact contemporary. He was the son of a Peter Selleck, a Revolutionary War veteran, son of Peter and Martha. Peter Selleck (son of Peter and Martha) received free land in up-state New York and died in Paris Township, Oneida County which I believe is not too far removed from Syracuse, N.Y.

I am sorry that I cannot be of more help. Good luck in your research. Let me know if you uncover anything!

Yours truly,

John Hugh Selleck

The Sellecks of Early Stamford

Editor's Note: Mrs. Edward C. McLean is president of The Darien Historical Society of Darien, Connecticut. She is also a former president of the Garden Club of Darien. Gardening has been her consuming interest until she recently discovered the fascinations of historical research. This article first appeared in The Darien Historical Society Annual in March, 1961. It is reprinted as a piece of general interest to Connecticut antiquarians.

NOT long ago I chanced upon a few dates and records which seemed to be fragments of an interesting story concerning two families among the early settlers of Stamford — the Laws and the Sellecks. When set against the background of colonial history, the story of these people brings vividly to life the picture of Stamford as it was three hundred years ago.

About 1660 two ambitious young boys arrived in Stamford, probably from Boston where their births are recorded. Jonathan Selleck was twenty years old and his brother John only seventeen. Their father, David Selleck, had apparently engaged in the shipping trade out of Boston, for he is known to have sailed back and forth to Barbados. When he died in 1654, he left "a fair estate in sum, yet very little beyond debts." After his death, his eldest son David probably continued the Caribbean trade, for there is a record of his being in Barbados in 1663.

However, his younger brothers John and Jonathan obviously decided to set out for themselves, and so came to Stamford to make their fortunes. They did very well for themselves as the years went on, in spite of the disturbing and unsettled times in which they lived.

The first homes had been built in Stamford in 1640, when twenty-nine courageous families had come from Wethersfield to set up their own church in the western wilderness. Theirs was an outpost of New England rather than a suburb of New York as Stamford is today. The town was politically affiliated with the New Haven Colony and also bound by ties of familiarity to the larger Bay Colony at Boston. Many of the settlers of Standford (as it is written in the early land records) had lived in Boston briefly on their arrival in New England, and had left friends and relatives behind when they moved on to the west. For some years the colonists looked almost entirely to Boston for supplies rather than to New Amsterdam only forty miles away. The reason, of course, was that New Amsterdam remained in hostile Dutch hands until 1664, and the Dutch also claimed all the land to the shores of the Connecticut River. Hostility was further aggravated by the attitude of the puritanical English who thought the easy-going Dutch a godless people.*

So Stamford was an isolated outpost with a foreign country to the west, a wilderness full of unfriendly Indians to the north, and only a scattering of English settlements to the east, best reached by ship along the Sound. The Selleck brothers, arriving only twenty years after the first settlers, had come to the frontier.

From the start, they were undoubtedly partners. Jonathan wrote many years later of being "a partner with him (John) in trade." How soon they owned a ship of their own is uncertain, but the records all speak of John Selleck, mariner, or John Selleck, "Captain" or "Commander." So his was the adventurous life at sea.

In 1663 Jonathan married Abigail Law, a girl four years older than he, and in 1669 John married her sister Sarah, also his elder. The father of the girls was Richard Law who had brought his young family to Stamford with the very first settlers. He himself was a man of education, a "king's attorney," and was considered the "first civilian" after the minister, to whom people turned for advice and counsel. The earliest town documents are in his handwriting, for he was the town clerk for twenty-four years. He also represented Stamford at the sessions of the General Court or legislature in New Haven. For a time he was also a judge of the local court, and in later years, after the New Haven Colony had united with the Connecticut Colony, he was occasionally a deputy to the sessions of the General Court at Hartford.

Clearly, the Selleck brothers had married well. Richard Law gave each of them a house and lot on his marriage as dowry for his daughters. John's house, according to the deed, was adjacent to that of his father-in-law. The deed also states that John could not sell it without his wife's consent. Later (1677) after the town had granted to John Selleck "ye peece of wast land lying within ye fence by ye landing place to set a dwelling house or warehouse upon," Richard Law also gave to him "ye creek or cove yt lyes by ye landing place to ye southeast of ye warehouse." So Captain Selleck, sailing the perilous seas, brought back his cargoes to the warehouse in Stamford.

The dangers on the high seas were countless in the seventeenth century. Aside from wind and weather, English and colonial sea-captains risked capture by Spanish, Dutch or French ships depending on the war of the moment. Above all was the danger from hijacking pirates, for this was "the Golden Age of Piracy." The coastal waters of the Atlantic were infested with pirates, who even swarmed from hidden coves at the mouth of the Hudson River to attack shipping that ventured into the harbor or started up the river toward Albany. Pirate captains of wealth and fame strolled unafraid in their finery along the streets of New York, protected by the influence of the merchants to whom they sold their cargoes. So history repeats itself, and the pirates in one age are "bootleggers" in another.

*An illuminating statistic: In 1660, one-fourth of the buildings in New Amsterdam were inns or groghouses.

The Selleck place on Long Island Sound was called "a favorite resort of the merchants doing business with the Madagascar pirates." Moreover, the New York Colonial Records contain a letter that flashes so bright a beam on the Selleck enterprises that it should be quoted. The letter is dated November 28, 1700, and was written by the Earl of Bellomont, then Governor of New York, to the Lords of Trade in England:

> "There's a town called Stamford in Connecticut Colony, on the border of this province, where one Major Selleck lives, who has a warehouse close to the sea that runs between the mainland and Nassau [Long Island]. This man does us great mischief with his warehouse, for he receives abundance of goods from our vessels, and the merchants afterwards take their opportunity of running them into this town [New York]. Major Selleck received at least £10,000 worth of treasure and East India goods brought by one Clarke of this town from Kid's sloop, and lodged with Selleck."

Although the true story of Captain Kidd is too long and involved to relate here, it may be noted that until the last two or three years of his life, Kidd lived on Liberty Street in New York, and was a most respected and prosperous merchant and sea captain. The Sellecks may have known him well.

If John and Jonathan took part in the bootlegging mentioned in Bellomont's letter, they did so with some justification. Even at that early date customs duties in the Colonies were evaded whenever possible. There was no outcry against "taxation without representation," as there was to be later. The citizens of New York, like all men everywhere, resented taxes and seized upon a technicality to declare customs duties illegal. Governor Andros had instituted customs regulations there in 1677 that were to expire three years later. By some chance, these regulations had never been officially extended, although the succeeding royal governors tried to continue their enforcement. Since the people of New York disliked the "abominable tariff acts" anyway, they seized this excuse to make their case a righteous one.

It would be fascinating to know whether John Selleck himself ever encountered the pirates. The meager records I have found prove only that he had his troubles with ships of foreign powers. Early in his career (1673) he set out from Stamford in the small boat "Catch" to cross Long Island Sound for a cargo of lumber. At this time, England and Holland were pursuing their third war of that century, and in August a Dutch fleet of twenty vessels suddenly sailed into New York harbor and retook the city from the unprepared English without a shot being fired. John Selleck unfortunately ran into some part of that Dutch fleet, was captured, and carried off boat and all to New York. Though he was released before long, the boat remained in Dutch hands until the following year when the war ended.

By 1679 John was "Commander" of yet another ship, "Brothers Adventure," recorded in Barbados as bound for New York with passengers aboard. The ship's name suggests that the Sellecks well understood the risks they took.

There is no doubt that the partners prospered for almost thirty years, until John Selleck's luck ran out. On a trip to England in 1689, when he was only forty-six, he and his ship were captured by the French. John was taken prisoner and never returned. This inconclusive remark in the records leaves so much unsaid and unknown. In May of that year, the French king Louis XIV declared war on England and Holland. One wonders if word of the war had reached the colonies before John Selleck set out.

His large estate was not settled until 1700, when it was distributed among his wife and five children. The inventory lists many parcels of land, including a house and lot "at ye waterside" (Stamford proper), a farm and a house at Runkenheag (Tokeneke in Darien), a mill at Five Mile River, and a house, land and saw mill at Noroton River.

Jonathan Selleck's career was quite different, although in his youth he too must have had some adventurous moments. He was an Indian fighter. From lieutenant in the Stamford "train-band" (infantry), he was promoted to captain in July 1675, and six months later he was commissioned a captain in the Fairfield County Troop (cavalry).

This was at the height of King Philip's War, when the New England colonists were fighting their most desperate Indian war. Connecticut was spared the appalling ravages of fire and massacre, but loyally sent troops to western Massachusetts and Rhode Island to defeat the Indians.

Perhaps Jonathan was wounded, or possibly the authorities were merely preparing for contingencies when they appointed Joseph Judson in 1676 as alternate captain to Selleck's troop "if Captain Selleck be disenabled." In any case, by midsummer King Philip was slain and the war practically over. Jonathan was given a larger grant of land by the town of Stamford as a reward for his services against the Indians.

By October of that same year (1676) he was back in civilian life and representing the town at the fall session of the General Court at Hartford. He may have feared some emergency at home in his absence, for he left a power of attorney with John, "my trusty and well-beloved brother," to act in all ways for him "only excepting the alienating of my real estate."

Ever since 1670 Jonathan had served regularly as a deputy at the semi-annual meetings of the General Court. Like his father-in-law, he became a man of some influence in Connecticut politics and even for some years a member (called Assistant) of the Governor's Council. An historical detective may trace his career easily in the Colonial Records of Connecticut. He had the honor and pleasure to be appointed to several interesting commissions.

The first appointment came at the end of the English war with Holland in 1674, when he was sent with others as a peace messenger to the Dutch garrison that had captured New York. Ten years later he was chosen to meet with representatives from New York to lay out the boundary line that had finally been agreed upon by the two colonies.

The dispute over this boundary dated from the earliest settlements, and continued to be an issue for years, for Jonathan's son Jonathan was commissioned to a group nearly twenty years later to renew the boundary. This was a time when wealth was measured in terms of real estate, and men bought and sold land as they deal in stocks today. The exact boundary lines between individual properties or between towns or colonies were important and often in disagreement.

By 1696 when Jonathan Selleck had been made a major of the Fairfield regiment, the General Court granted him two hundred acres of land "to be taken up so as not to prejuduce any former grant of any township or particular person." He was also appointed to yet another committee to revise a law passed at the preceding session concerning the valuation of money.

The next year he was further honored by being appointed to a commission with the Rev. Mr. Gurdon Saltonstall and the Hon. Major-General Fitz John Winthrop (later Governor of Connecticut). All three were "desired upon notice of the arrivall of his Excellencie the Earl Bellomont to travail to New York in the name of the Governor . . . to congratulate the happy arrivall of his Excellencie."

Having for several years served also as Commissioner (judge) of the local courts of Stamford and Greenwich, Major Selleck was appointed in 1698 as Judge of the Fairfield County Court with an alternate judge to serve in his absence. Although he was only fifty-seven, he must have found it difficult to commute to his court in Fairfield! In consequence, the May session of the General Court only two years later relieved him with this statement:

> "Upon consideration that the Honored Major Sellick is ancient and his living remote from Fairfield the countie town, and he not able to attend the countie courts there; for the ease of said Major Sellick . . . this Assembly order Captain Nathan Gold" — to be made judge."

Nathan Gold, Jr. was the son of Major Selleck's old friend and contemporary.

Although Major Selleck retired from public service, he continued to be active in his own affairs. Presumably, he had carried on the sea trade after his brother's disappearance at sea. He, with his son Jonathan and three other men, had purchased a pink called the "Blossom," built in Stamford by John Mills, "shipwrighte." She was a good sized vessel of seventy-odd tons, and the deed of purchase was dated with a flourish "1691 in the third year of the reign of William and Mary King and Queen of England: Scotland: France and Ireland, etc."

In addition to his shipping trade, Jonathan's extensive real estate holdings must have required increased attention. He and his brother had acquired many acres in Stamford proper and also in the eastern outskirts (now Darien), particularly at Long Neck Point and the Tokeneke area. This was part of the land bought by Stamford (1645) from the Indian chief Piamikin at a cost of four coats and some "tobaca." Richard Law and Andrew Ward signed the deed for the town.

Much of the property acquired by the Sellecks was allotted to them by the town, some was granted by the colonial legislature, and still more acquired by purchase. The pages of the Stamford land records in the 1680s are peppered with sales to John and Jonathan in Runkinheag or Short Rocks, which is now the Tokeneke area. This became known in later years as Sellecks Farms.* The present Tokeneke Road runs through Selleck Woods, so known at the time the trolley line connecting Norwalk and Darien was built. It is doubtful whether John and Jonathan themselves moved from their homes in Stamford to this section, although some of their descendants certainly did.

The Selleck properties were increased and consolidated on the death of their father-in-law, for Richard Law also owned many acres in Darien. These he left evenly divided between his daughters.

Richard Law's documents concerning his property reveal something of the personalities and relationships of this interesting family. They are written in long involved sentences, the compositions of an old and disappointed man. Richard's wife had died and his only son Jonathan had moved from Stamford to Milford, contrary to an early agreement "that my son is unmoveable." The father had given to his son when still a young man (1666) his portion of land, "but meant he should take it on his (Richard's) death." Though "understood by some to be a deed of gift yt cuts myself off from my own land which I never intended" (until after his death). In spite of the quarrel with his son, the father decided later to bequeath more property to him, but requested that he must share with his sisters Abigail and Sarah, a double portion going to the son, a single portion to each daughter "the which is according to divine rule."

By 1686 the old man decided his son should not inherit according to divine rule. He signed an agreement with John and Jonathan dividing all his remaining property between his daughters. In return, the Sellecks "shall keep and maintain him" with all things necessary . . . "conducing to ye comfort of his naturall life so long as he shall live." Mr. Law still "having ye use or benefit of his estate." He must have died within a few months, leaving his daughters' husbands to come to an agreement with Jonathan Law on the settlement of his estate.

That same year (1686) will long be remembered in Connecticut as the only time before or since, when its citizens were forced to abandon self-government. James II had succeeded to the English throne and sent Sir Edmund Andros at once to govern New England, New York and New Jersey as a royal province, and while revoking the early charters, laws and land titles, to substitute arbitrary rule.

This was a thunderclap that aroused tremendous indignation, especially in Connecticut. Getting no cooperation from the colony, Governor Andros himself arrived in Hartford in late October 1687 and called a special meeting of the General Court, which had adjourned only two weeks earlier after its usual fall session. The minutes in the Colonial Record state succinctly that he "took into his hands the Government of this colony of Conecticott, it being by his Majesty annexed to the Massachusetts and other colonys under his Excelencies Government." Andros did not, however, take into his hands the treasured Connecticut Charter. It was whisked from his sight in a moment of darkness and hidden until better times, perhaps in the famous Charter Oak.

There is no record of deputies from Stamford being present at this meeting of the General Court, nor of those in the two preceding years, although Jonathan Selleck and Jonathan Bell had gone to the spring session two years earlier. Was Stamford trying discreetly to avoid taking part in the controversies with Governor Andros?

When news came of King James' flight from England and the coronation of William and Mary early in 1689, Andros was thrown into prison in Boston and all New England rejoiced. Cannon boomed, bells rang and bonfires blazed. This brief taste of royal tyranny was more than enough for independent freemen.

To the confusion of historians, Major Selleck had two sons whom he named Jonathan and John. The former became known as Captain Jonathan Jr. and was probably a sea captain, for there is no record of his being in the militia. He must have spent a good deal of time ashore, for he developed an interest in local affairs like his father and grandfather. For many years he was a Justice of the Peace for Fairfield County. He was also appointed surveyor for the County, and on several occasions was an auditor of the Colony's accounts. Later he served two terms as a deputy from Stamford to the Assembly.

Like their father and his brother, Jonathan Jr. and his younger brother John married sisters, Abigail and Martha Gold (Gould) of Fairfield. As mentioned earlier, the Golds were old friends of Major Selleck and his family.

Before his marriage, young John Selleck had graduated from Harvard (1690). Undoubtedly his father hoped for great things from him. A college education was a rare privilege and usually a preparation for the ministry. But unfortunately John died soon after his marriage. Long afterward, in his will, Jonathan Senior left his library of books, including his son's Harvard textbooks, to the Rev. Mr. John Davenport of Stamford, who was probably almost like another son to the Major, since he had married young John's widow.

Perhaps the clearest picture we will ever have of Major Selleck comes from a delightful letter written by the Rev. Mr. Jeremiah Peck of Greenwich to President Increase Mather of Harvard recommending John Selleck for admission to Harvard:

"Sir, the occasion of the addition of these few lines is to request your favour towards the Son of Captain Jonathan Selleck of Stamford. The Captain himself is a well wisher to good men, and a courteous Gentleman, especially to Ministers, a friend to learning; a man of a good estate, and therefore the better advantaged to carry on such a designe as he hath in part undertaken, that is, the good education of his second Son, in the colledge. There are few set apart for that in these times, especially in our western parts, wherefore, Sir, I make bold to request that encourage [ment] may be given what may be."

Jeremiah Peck felt that he knew the father better than the son, although, as he went on to say:

"The young man hath dwelt in my family a consider[able] time, and I, instead of a better, helped him in his instruction into the Latine tongue: but he hath been from me for severall years partly with Mr. Watson of Hartford, and partly with Mr. Hartiman of New Haven. I hope, Sir, he hath made so good a progress that admission to his fellows in the Colledge may be granted to him. I doe not know nor have I heard that the young man is given to any vice: but I take him to be of a good naturall temper: and seems to have a good affection for learning . . . ."

The biographical sketch of John Selleck that follows this letter in Sibley's "Harvard Graduates" notes that he received an A.B. degree, while his twenty-two classmates received M.A. degrees. Moreover, John offended frequently against the laws of the college, and in a single quarter had to pay five shillings ninepence for broken windows. What a disappointment to his father, "the friend to learning"!

Jonathan Selleck outlived all of his own immediate family except his sister-in-law. His wife died in 1711, as did his son Jonathan and also his wife. According to Cotton Mather, there was in 1711 "the raging of a mortal sickness in the Colony of Connecticut and the many deaths of our brethren there. Perhaps this epidemic reached the Sellecks. When Jonathan himself died in 1713, he left only grandchildren to inherit his considerable estate.

For their many descendants John and Jonathan Selleck left also an example of courage, resourcefulness and enterprise. They belonged to the first generation of New England born, from whom stems the Yankee tradition.

Dear Virginia: [Selleck]

I have finally been able to go through the material sent by John Hugh Selleck of Scarborough, Ontario, and compare it with what I already had. As I said when you were here, we are fortunate to have made contact with him, and he is very likely some kind of cousin of yours.

I have Xeroxed his letter and all the materials he sent you. Some of this information I had, but some is new information. The most valuable item is the one about his ancestor Peter Selleck (#61), the son of Peter Selleck and Martha Whiting. At least we now have a descendant of the Sellecks and Whitings who moved to Oneida County, New York, though we don't know whether this Peter is your ancestor, as well as his. I'm too busy to work on it now, but when I get a chance, I'll have to find out everything I can about Peter and his family.

When you write to Mr. Selleck, you should ask him for other information he has about Peter. Does he have an obituary or a will? Does he have a copy of the material in his Revolutionary War Pension file?

I'm also wondering if he could get for us the title and author of the book about the Selleck family he saw at the library of the New York State Genealogical Society.

As you see, I have sent you two copies of my "family group sheets" on the Selleck line back to David, the immigrant, and a few sheets on the presumed Whiting connection. One set is for you, and the other is for John Hugh in Ontario. I have an idea he will find several new items here he does not have. You might give him my name and address, in case he wants to correspond with me about some of these matters.

Now on another subject, I've begun to read The Chalice and the Blade, but I've only finished the introduction and the first chapter so far. It is very interesting, and I do want to finish it, but because of all the extra work in connection with our trip to England, I'm afraid I won't be able to do so until we return. When do you need it back? Do you want me to send it to you before May and then get it back again later? Just let me know.

Love,

[DEW]

The SELLECK Family and the Clay Industry

About the middle of the last Century a Mr. Phillips who had pioneered the first effort to produce China Clay in Devon, decided to dispose of his works and interest at Lee Moor, Shaugh Piror, then a small hamlet perched high on the southern slopes of Dartmoor about 10 miles north of Plymouth and surrounded by granite hills. The brothers William and Thomas Martin having learnt that the works were in the market, sent their representative John Diamond Cobbledick of St. Austell to investigate the possibilities: having received a favourable report they acquired the option to carry on the business.

The Devon Family Historian, No. 36, Oct, 1985

Very quickly, the production and sale began to rise, and from a few tons per annum, as a result of bold imaginative planning, the works were producing many thousands of tons per year by the end of the century. Full advantage was taken of the natural facilities consequent on geographical position. The clay bed (or sett as it is sometimes called) was sited high and known as Black Alder Mire. Advantage was taken of the altitude and a level or adit driven from the Tory Coombe valley deep into the bed; the clay (in solution) channeled to the refining micas, then on to settling tanks and the Drys or Kilns, all of which were built of the granite hewn from the hills surrounding the site.

Much ingenuity was shown and the law of gravity exploited not only in the washing of the clay from pit to Drys but also in transport to the Port of Plymouth. A light railway was constructed from Lee Moor to Laira Wharf, Prince Rock, Plymouth. The drop in altitude was too great to get a graded run right through, so means had to be devised to negotiate the steep gradient between Cann Wood and Plym Bridge, here a simple, but effective plan was put into operation. By means of a large winding drum with about two miles of rope wound around it, one end being attached to the trucks about to descend, the other end to those at the bottom of the incline — thus the down load hauled the up load. Horses were then used to haul the trucks to the Wharf, or to the Railway siding. (The line is still in being, but has been out of use for many years). All wagons and most of the material effectives for the construction and maintenance of these light railways were designed and built in the workshops at Lee Moor, where a staff of men were housed and employed carpenters, and smiths, who took pride in turning out a really efficient standard job and were also versatile in their various trades and expected to be equal to emergencies, which from time to time arose during the development of the industry.

Distance from the foundries and engineering establishments, made it almost imperative for the firm to be practically self-contained. This necessitated the bulk buying of timber for the many and varied needs of the works and the maintenance of communications of the Port. Teams of horses driven by men experienced in the art of timber hauling were employed practically full time, to bring trees to the saw mills, all of which were selected and measured for payment by the Architect — Engineer — Surveyor — Manager — Capt. John Diamond Cobbledick and later by his trainee Mr. James Bettes: 'Necessity', or was it 'opportunity?' brought out the sterling pioneering qualities in these men. Lee Moor thus became in every sense a self-contained community and the Martin brothers with their staff, executive and operative, trained on the spot put Lee Moor on the China Clay Map for all time.

Situated as it was, three miles respectively from Cornwood to the east and Shaugh Prior to the west, five from Plympton to the south with the wide open spaces of Dartmoor to the north, it will be realised how complete was its isolation in the days when the only means of transport were horse drawn vehicles. All food supplies had to be brought by road. The firm traded with the employees for a time, but eventually a Cooperative Store was opened, sponsored by the men themselves and run by a committee of men, whose names are remembered to-day — Plymouth Co-operative Society now run the business.

A Methodist (Wesleyan) Chapel and a Mission Church (Anglican) were built on the site of what was once the old Phillips brick making works; underneath the Wesleyan Chapel on the ground floor is the Day School, all these buildings within a stone's throw of each other.

Having recorded this brief history of the development of the industry, I now propose to give a description in perspective, of life in such a community. I crave the indulgence of my readers (and especially my contemporaries) should I overstate or understate any particular subject under review and in the language of Lincoln — 'With charity to all and malice toward none': I propose in a conversational, informal manner to proceed.

Lee Moor was a wonderful place to live in those days - well over a hundred children attended the Wesleyan Sunday School with a staff of over twenty teachers taking bi-weekly turns 10 to 11 a.m. and 2.30 to 4 p.m. Over sixty men could be seen at the morning service at 11 o'clock and at the evening service often 150 people crowded into the little Chapel to hear the preacher who was usually a 'Local'; we had a regular Minister about once a month. The choir stalls were always filled and did they sing! James Bettes, Joe Manhire, George Selleck, Peter Phillips, Dick Short, Bob Gulley, John Selleck, Jack Tope, in the Bass section; James Bray, Chris Selleck, Jack Quest, John Lavers — Tenor section. Dear old Simeon Lavers with his violin, and all those wonderful girls in the treble section. I was privileged at a very early age to sing in the Alto section with Maud Manhire, Bessie Loram and others. What a wonderful time we had Anniversary Sunday then 'June Tay' (Tea) on the Monday following. Sunday School Anniversary services were a real Festival of Praises — Chapel packed to capacity, aisles, pulpit steps, choir steps, every inch of space occupied and often an overflow of scores of people too late to get inside. What a day! All the little 'tackers' — boys and girls, the older lads and lassies and the courting couples, parents and friends from the surrounding villages all united to swell the glad song. Most of the parents contrived to fit us little ones out in new suits and dresses for that day. What a show! Picture hats for the girls and usually a wide stiff collar stuck under our chins for the boys. I remember we sang 'Brightly gleams our Banner pointing to the sky' (my collar certainly kept me looking in that direction), another which always lives with me was 'Love is the Keynote, Life is the Song'. We always had the first prize Yorkshire tune for each year and to the lasting credit of Mr. and Mrs. Bettes (Choir Master and Organist respectively) — that they produced a wonderful result in the training of children and choir. Then with intense longing and excitement we waited for the dawn of the next day — Anniversary Monday and June Tay was the great social event of the year. The children paraded through the village. Sitting after sitting of people would satisfy their appetites and tell their tales. Then the younger ones would go down to the Green (just above Tory Coombe Gate) to indulge in games — 'Kiss in the Ring' and 'Two's and Three's' were the first favourites, and many a romance had a beginning in the twilight of 'June Tay' day. We youngsters would strain our eyes to see the various arrivals, somebody from Tory Coombe would report that they had seen 'Cheap Jack', 'Penny Dip', 'Coconut Shies', 'Oliver's Sweet Stall outfit', or 'Lyons' with his fruit stall — Billy Dip in later years. Someone else with the 'Hobby Horses' —another with what was called 'Ladies Teasers' — (tubes made of lead filled with water) with which the more adventurous 'roughs' of about nine would bombard the 'Kiss'N Ring' — needless to say obstructing kissing operations. Sad to say, it was a much depleted choir which gathered for the Monday evening Service especially in the soprano and alto sections. (I learned why as the years rolled on) These Village Methodist tea drinks had to be experienced to be appreciated. How we looked forward to the time when we were old enough to be 'Appointed' by the Sunday School Committee to carry the hot water in those tin kettles around to the various tea tables at which presided Mrs. or Miss Blackler, Lillicrap, Beable, Bawden, Lee, Colton, Loram, Manhire, Hore, Bray, Trethewey, Bettes, Phillips, Head, Elford, Jenkins, Lavers, Pillage, Quest, Ryan, Wilcox, Brooking, Luscombe, Osborne, Hicks, Hambly, Short, Servombe, Mumford, Selleck, Tall, Roberts, McBean, Gill or Solomon were 'Appointed' to preside. These scenes were repeated in a lesser measure at Whitsun and Easter: 'Band of Hope' and 'Mission Band' teas, then Harvest Festival tea. What a glorious time was this. Saturday afternoon and evening; the fruit and vegetables, flowers etc. would be received by the ladies who had just the knack of arranging so beautifully those gifts of our Heavenly Father. I still retain the memory of the aroma from the apples, pears and the other fruit and flowers. We lived very near Heaven in those grand moments when those glorious traditional Harvest hymns were sung. The full throated resonant bass of Lee Moor choir in 'Come ye thankful people come' and the unison and heavenly harmony was something I do not expect to hear the like of this side of Heaven. 'There were Giants' in those days in the pulpits of Methodism, not 'Preacherettes' giving 'sermonettes' to 'Christianettes'. The Ebenezer Circuit of which Lee Moor was one of the outposts could boast of wonderful men of God. Among the Ministers outstanding were —J.S Hicks, C.T. Horne, Isaac Shimmin Clifford Caddy, T. Caddy and many others. The local preachers too, could hold boys' and girls' attention for 45 minutes to an hour. There were Isaac Foot Senior, Henry Lawry, W.W. Lucas, James L. Nash, young 'Ikey' Foot, (now the Rt. Hon. Isaac Foot P.C.) Andrew Skardon, Messrs. Skinner, J. Motley, W. Gerry, who played the organ and also preached the sermon when Mrs. Bettes was on holiday. Then the Lee Moor men: Lot Hoare, James Bettes and Sam Trevan — that theological notable John Mumford — these men all by their faithful testimony helped to shape and direct under God the lives of others who followed in their steps.

'Ikey' Foot was always outstanding in insistence on the rightness of practical Christianity in national as well as local Church life and the story of Lee Moor would not be complete unless we recorded the impact of his preaching, speeches, lectures, and example. When he preached we were uplifted spiritually. When he lectured we were benefited educationally. If he came to the district to speak on a political subject, even opponents were informed and edified. His lecture on Abraham Lincoln gave a distinct bias to my political thinking. The Boar War which people thought started as a brief military operation but ended by being perilously near a major war clouded our horizon. The political rendezvous in those days was the Co-op store. I remember when the newspapers arrived in the mornings the older men would discuss the news and the respective merits and demerits of 'Daily Mercury', or 'Morning News'. Mr. Harris the Co-op Manager would act as Chairman, while a wordy dual would proceed. Ben Trethewey, John Mumford, 'Ganger' Lilicrap and others would argue in favour or against 'Imperialism'. The more adventurous spirits would run the risk of being called 'pro-Boers': and we small boys were rather mystified when John H. Mumford was said to have 'abdicated Piety' in favour of political expediency, when he came out as a Liberal Imperialist. In the late 1890's Mr Reader Harris Q.C. founded the 'Pentecostal League of Prayer'. My father became the first leader of the 'Centre'. This was designed to be an interdenominational and international organisation with the object of strengthening spiritual life in all the Churches. A Centre was formed by something over a dozen praying Christians, the meeting of the League took place at 8 a.m. on Sundays. This proved to be a great Spiritual asset to our Church and was certainly a Spiritual 'Power House'. I think of many outstanding Christians who were members of this Centre. One of the most memorable personalities was Jack Quest 'Click' as he was affectionately known. As a young man, he was exceptionally strong and we small boys would wonder in real amazement at the weights he could lift. He was, however, destined to become one of the 'strongest' examples of patience: in sickness and adversity it was ever my privilege to witness. Early in his young manhood he developed a malady known as Rheumatic-chalk-gout, which rendered him immobile. He lay like a human log for years with a face radiant with the joy of the Lord despite the excrutiating pain he must have suffered. The chalk would ooze from every joint and knuckle in the form of a paste. Sometimes he would become unconscious as the brain was temporarily affected. I remember very vividly when my friend Frank Trethewey and I kept vigil through the night, how with the breaking of the dawn Jack roused suddenly from his state of coma and exclaimed: 'Frank Arthur, Rays from the Sun of Righteousness have healing in his wings' — his face shining his voice ringing with an heavenly ecstasy. He had a cheery word for everyone who came to see him. What an example of love and fortitude was his dear wife who consistently and continually ministered to his needs, and those of their three children — the effect of the impact of the life of Jack Quest on the spiritual life of many beside myself cannot be assessed by us. As we have already stated Lee Moor was then an isolated and self-contained community. Most of the workmen who lived in the twin villages of Lee Moor and Tory Coombe had their garden and allotment. Almost every householder kept pigs and poultry — many others kept a cow — the Dartmoor pony was also bred and kept in quite large numbers. Nearly everybody possessed a quite smart pony and turnout either Dogcart or Jingle. In the old days it was quite an occasion when the farmers led by Farmer Tom Selleck drove the ponies 'Drift' of Shaugh Moor to Neil Gate and then corralled them in one of the fields where indentification by the various owners took place. Many scores of these animals were then driven by the Lee Moor owners back to the village for a branding mark to be applied and to those which were turned out on the moor again for breeding. Some being retained for sale to dealers who came to buy them for use in the coal mines etc.

August Bank Holiday for many years — a great day for Lee Moor. The local pony show took place in a field known as 'Company Park.' Classes for trotting, riding or driving pony would be well filled and competition keen and some outstanding animals were always to be seen, despite of course the fact that a fair proportion were something like 'Modbury Dancing' — not very neat but strong. The musical programme on these occasions was provided by 'Tinker Bray Band'. The 'Bombardon' as we were told it was called — that is —the Big Bass, was blown by 'Tinker' himself. His son George, the cornet, his son Ned, the trombone — these were all outstanding performers. 'Tinker' could always be depended on to produce that deep resonant bass note from the bowels of that weird instrument which had been bruised and dented over most of its surface — making any attempt at polishing impossible. Although some of his Lee Moor critics insisted that he was sometimes a scat behind the rest. One of the fascinating things to me was to watch Ned Bray blowing the trombone. How marvellously his cheeks would stretch — he seemed to distend his facial features to such an extent that we small boys would wonder when he would burst. But he would go on serenely producing those rolling notes. George Bray was a great hero because every small boy wanted to blow the cornet and as we listened to him he always seemed to come in at the right time to save an awkward situation and to us he was only second to Gabriel. There were of course quite a range of other players filling in the harmony. There is a story that on one of the very rare occasions the band was engaged away from home to supply music at the celebrations at Plympton of the local Friendly Societies. The big drummer — Bill MacBean who was small of stature went on flogging the drum for quite a distance towards Plympton St. Mary Bridge while the band turned left at Dark Street Lane, but I could not vouch for the veracity of this report. However, 'Tinker' Bray's band was quite an institution and the Band of the Royal Marines could not have been more important to us. 'Tinker' Bray and 'Jubal Cain' (Genesis 4 v. 21 & 22) as they were artificers in metals and also music makers.

This Bray family was not related to that of Capt. John Bray who became works manager at the time of my Grandfather Cap'n John Diamond Cobbledick passed from this scene of action in 1891. The above Cap'n John Bray was appointed to take his place; my father Christopher Robert Henry Selleck — lately returned from America but previously trained at Lee Moor — became second in the management. The senior of the firm 'Martin Bros.' Mr. William Martin also died about this time and so the old order changed. At the turn of the century there was a greatly increased demand for china clay and investors were very keen to acquire 'setts'. The Lee Moor group was producing every increasing quantities. The main Lee Moor Pit then 40 acres in area, the Cholwichtown Pit and the New Whitehill-Yeo Pit was then in full production but the Wotter Pit on the western side had been abandoned. In September 1901 my father re-opened Wotter which caused rather more than a 'nine days wonder', that he should have the audacity to re-start a works declared uneconomic, redundant and worked out by his former employers; they said he was heading for disaster and they were nearly right. The 'Epic Struggle' began. Father Chris, C.R.R. or Cap'n Chrissy as he was variously known packed his belongings on the carts behind Shamrock —the old grey mare — and Tommy horse (the latter a family friend for many years after) — and trundled over Highboro' hill together with nine of us — 6 boys and 3 girls — Mother who was the most wonderful home-maker soon settled us in at Wotter House, for a time we shared the house with the Elliott family who went to Perks Farm, Shaugh Prior. My father, who soon found his slender capital stretched to capacity, acquired a second-hand traction engine and trucks from a local firm of brick-makers to haul the clay to the Railway Station. A few other oddments of equipment: then with about four or five men and his own family got down to the job. Then trouble came on trouble. As already indicated china clay production depends on adequate supplies of water. The water for the group (Cholwichtown, Whitehill Yeo, Lee Moor and Wotter) was drawn from the upper reaches of the Cad near Trowlesworthy. We found the life line was cut — the stream had been diverted at Lee Moor. Means were then devised to collect water on our own limited watershed: ponds (reservoirs) had to be constructed to try to meet the situation.

Our next major problem was difficulties of transport. The roads over Dartmoor in those days were little more than bridle paths, and to drive a traction engine laden with two ten-ton trucks of clay was asking too much and were thus landed into trouble with the Plympton R.D.C. Our local neighbours also. In seeking alternative routes we tried the roads to Bickleigh, Cornwood and Plympton Railway Stations. (The law required us to employ a man with a red flag to walk in front.) I remember one memorable morning going out to play from the school at Lee Moor when we all rushed out to the road to see our engine complete with guard and red flag coming down the road toward Tory Coombe — quite an impressive crowd had gathered when Cap'n Bray acting under orders forbade the driver, my brother Chris to proceed any further over that section of the road. But necessity called for desperate measures and after what was mostly unintelligible conversation, Chris 'naughty boy' after opening the cylinder drains which enveloped Cap'n in a cloud of steam drove on his desperate journey. Cap'n when thus forced to retire was heard to remark: 'They'm do'n it in defiance'. Needless to say the name of that engine from that time was 'Defiance'. However, a few years afterwards the two families celebrated the marriage of my brother Chris to Cap'n Bray's daughter Mabel so time healed the breach. We then stuck to the Cornwood road — but what a shambles! My father now had to face a hostile district council and when challenged as to what he proposed to do about this four to five miles of road he promptly replied that he proposed to repair it — to say the least this seemed an impossible task, but we tackled it; and literally thousands of tons of stone of 'Stent' as it was locally called were raised by us — hauled and rolled in by our engines over this section from Wotter to Cornwood free of charge to the R.D.C. With such traffic strain on our engines break-downs were frequent and it seemed as if the limit must soon be reached. One evening on his way home through Lee Moor my Father was led to go and see bedridden Jack Quest. Jack had not been able to meet at the Sunday morning 8 o'clock Prayer Meeting for some time so, Father felt it his duty to see him. Jack relates the conversation:

'Well Chris, how is it with you.' 'Not too good Jack, bit of a headache (small wonder). Engine broke down today.' 'You're going through it Chris —wish I could help. Never mind Chris (reaching for his Bible) read the 37th Psalm.' So he read as far as verse 25. 'I have been young, and now I am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread.' Said Chris to me some time after — 'I don't know exactly why but he seemed to have a lump in his throat and couldn't read on for a little while.' I know and we all know that things had become so tight that we had not the power to stave off poverty much longer. Frugality and thrift had been the order for five long years — but he read on, prayed on and worked on, he was not forsaken and those who knew them, will know that his seed are not begging bread. But how dark was that hour before the dawn. Only those who went through it will ever know. We members of the family were variously employed on jobs where we could contribute most to the common good. My brother John trained at Lee Moor in all branches of the Smith's trade in addition to making necessary ironwork for the development of the works, continued to earn something extra by making and repairing implements and shoeing horses for local farmers; there was no eight hour limit to our days. Chris had to spend most of his time as a mechanical engineer, repairing engines, designing gadgets to make things run more smoothly on the works. Will at 15 years of age went on the Traction as driver. I have known him work the 24 hours round the clock if it happened we had to load a cargo boat. Our problems piled up as we proceeded, one of our particular problems at this time was how to use the water at our disposal, the old Cornish way was to let the water trickle over the top of the 'Stope' (clay bed) having broken the surface with 'Dubbers' (wide bladed picks) at an angle of about 45 degrees from bottom of the pit to the top edge of the 'Stope' one man would break a 'Strake' of say 10' to 15' in width. We found at Wotter that our 'Stope' was getting very thin, and the clay touch, (not friable). The water would run clear instead of taking away the clay in solution.

My father by this time has been elected to Plympton Council, came home from Plympton, having made a few observations on the pressure needed to send water from a fire hose to the top of a burning house, expressed the opinion to my brothers that water pressure was the answer to our washing problems. Chris got to work on this and I remember the water was impounded in earthenware 2½" drain pipes for quite a long distance then fed into iron pipes on the lower levels where pressure was highest making the best of the materials (a job lot) at his disposal. The experiment proved successful and we established the method in common use today. Within two years we were repeating the stream by centrifugal pumps at 100 lb. pressure per square inch. thus again; 'Necessity was the mother of invention' or shall we say Application. The above related incident took place in 1905. My Father had formed a limited company Selleck & Sons Ltd. but economic necessity made confusion worse confounded and our policy was shaped accordingly.

Then suddenly on a Sunday morning, came the answer to our prayers. For some unaccountable reason (to us) 'Cap'n Chrissy' was called out of the Sunday Morning service at Lee Moor. Was someone ill? What had happened?

It happened on this wise:-

Messrs. Punchard, Stewart and Vivien, three successful speculators in Malayan Rubber were looking for a China Clay 'Sett' and wished to do business with my Father on the spot. He respectfully but firmly refused to do this on the Lord's Day, but arranged to meet them on the morrow. They met, the die was cast, the deal was made, and the new era for Wotter began in 1906; the 'Dartmoor China Clay Co.' was formed. This marked the beginning of a great advancement. China Clay (Kaolin) was found to have much wider potential uses than merely as a filling agent in cotton manufacturing, paper making, or the actual making of china or pottery, chemical research proved the possibility of the production of colloidal clays which were in ready demand. Wotter was soon producing this particular brand in this field known as 'Catalpo'. Drys were constructed at Marsh Mills near Plymouth and a pipeline laid to convey the clay in solution. The scheme instituted by my Father, obviated the further use of expensive mechanical transport — there was of course a period of years during which we had to continue hauling clay over the long and tortuous route to Cornwood Station.

This great burst of activity made it necessary to build houses for the workmen, thus we witnessed the birth of a village; (previously only three houses existed between Shaugh Prior and Lee Moor. They were Wotter Farm, Wotter House and Collard Tor. The period 1906-14 was one of great prosperity in the industry, in Lee Moor District, all the pits in full production; Cholwichtown, Whitehill, Yeo, Lee Moor, Wotter, Hemerdon, Smallhanger, Headon and Shaugh Lake.

It will be seen from the above that the Selleck family made many contributions to the Clay Industry. A Summary of those would include the following:-

1901 Formation C.R.H. Selleck & Sons. This Company was registered to produce China Clay from a disused works at Wotter previously owned by Martin Bros. Ltd. The latter still owned the Lee Moor Works. C.R.H. Selleck and his six sons were directly responsible for the following developments -

1. The use of road transport (i.e. the steam engine) to convey the clay to the rail head at Cornwood Station.
2. The patenting of the C. Selleck (second son) patent steam cylindrical valve which was an improvement on the slide valve fitted to the Aveling engine first used.
3. The use (in 1905) of a pressurised water system to extract the clay. The shortage of water necessitated the re-use of the supply. This was the origin of the present system of centrifugal monitors and even at this early stage a pressure of 100 lbs. per sq. in. was achieved.
4. About 1906 the Dartmoor China Clay Company was formed with C.R.H. Selleck and Sons as Managers. Will Selleck, 3rd son later became the sole Manager and continued in that capacity for approximately 25 years. For the first time ever clay was piped. The pipe ran from the Wotter Works to Marsh Mills and is stil in existence today.
5. Shortly after the 1914-18 War the fifth son, Claude Selleck, moved to Cornwall and at the age of 15 took over the running of Carbis Clay Works followed by Great Treverbyn. His main contribution to the industry was the devising of a process for bleaching clay. This proved extremely valuable and, after considerable negotiations, it was purchased by E.C.L.P. and Claude Selleck became a Director of that Company.
   This had far reaching results as Selleck Nicholls was taken over at this time and consequently the parent Company found itself involved in the post war housing crisis which Selleck Nicholls' 'Cornish Unit' did so much to solve.

As is well known the then Minister of Housing — Aneurin Bevan —leant heavily on Claude Selleck to enable his housing target to be reached and when this was achieved a knighthood was bestowed on John Keay, the Chairman of the parent Company.

The Early History of Southampton, L.I., New York, with Genealogies, Rev. Rufus Howell 1866

Pp. 106 & 107

"5. Joseph Whiting.

"Mr. Whiting was the son of the Rev. Mr. Whiting, the first minister of Lynn, Mass. He was born April 6, 1641, graduated at Harvard in 1661, and assisted his father several years and was installed as his successor in 1679. He was twice married — first to Sarah, d. of Hon. Thomas Danforth, Deputy Governor of Mass., and president of Maine; and again to Rebecca, who died April 21, 1726.

"On the 27th day of June, 1682, a committee were appointed to go to Lynn, Mass., to invite Mr. Whiting to come over and preach to the Southampton people on trial. It is not certain when he first came, but probably in 1683.

"In 1684 we find an 'agreement' with him in relation to his salary, an abstract of which is here given.

"1. £100 per annum to be paid in same manner as Mr. Taylor's.

"2. Use of the Parsonage and four acres and a 150 of commonage.

"3. If he continue till his decease, in the ministry in this Town, then his widow is to have from the town £100 in money and marchantable produce,

"His labors in the ministry must have been acceptable to the people since he continued with them till the infirmities of age demanded a cessation of labor. His pastorate covered about 33 years, and his death occurred April 7th, 1723, in the 82nd year of his age. He sleeps among his flock in the old burying ground, and with them awaits his resurrection to eternal life."

Pp. 99-100

"The church of Southampton, as might be expected from the character and associations of the settlers, was at first Independent. - - - - The church continued under this form of Independency until 1716. - - - -

"In Sept. 1716, a call addressed to the Rev. Samuel Gelston was laid before the Presbytery of Philadelphia, which was the only ecclesiastical body of that denomination in this country at that time, and had been organized about 1706. Doubtless the Rev. Joseph Whiting, who at this time retired from active duty in the ministry, and who still lived among the people of his charge in Southampton till his death in 1723, assisted in leading the congregation to make this change of connection. In this call the congregation of Southampton promise 'to subject themselves to the Presbytery in the Lord.' - - - The church of Southampton having thus united with the Presbyterian body has remained ever since in connection with the same."

agreed "that such men of our inhabitants as doe goe to cutt hay on the other side Five-Mile river the town will stand by." Two years after this, Sept. 30, 1668, Norwalk voted that the Deputies "shall do their best indevor" to bring about a settlement of the vexed subject. Stamford reciprocated and empowered Richard Law, Francis Bell and John Holly to "treat" with Norwalk men. Two years later Norwalk made advances toward a "loving and neighborly issu and agreement." Stamford's title ranked in point of age that of Norwalk, and the final outcome was that that sister settlement gained the day, and Norwalk's southwestern line was left about as Partrick had established it. North somewhat from this southwest point the ancient line took a northwesterly course, embracing what is now West Norwalk, and from thence still northwest, passing to the west of Haynes' Ridge in Canaan parish, and continuing until Pound Ridge was entered and embraced where the line ended in that of the province of New York.

THE OBLONG.

This term is the designation of the debatable lands that lay north of the present boundaries of the townships of New Canaan and Stamford, and west of the Ridgefield line. The ownership-dispute of this romantic region was first occasioned through failure on the parts of the Dutch and English to definitely establish the separation line between the New York and Connecticut colonies. There seemed to have been some Dutch and English understanding in 1654, in which Norwalk was interested, in so far as its "twelve miles north" possessions were concerned. On Oct. 13, 1664, the Court at Hartford sent the Connecticut Governor, with four attendants, to congratulate the English upon their occupancy of what had heretofore been Dutch territory and to, if possible, come to an agreement New York and Connecticut boundary-wise. The parties met, and on Dec. 1, following, signed articles that conveyed to Connecticut all the land east of a north and south line drawn twenty miles east of the Hudson River. This appears to have been a piece of bungling, as it was subsequently ascertained that on account of the course of the Hudson, such a line would give Connecticut possession, at one point, to the Hudson's very banks. The Dutch, after a time, regained a footing in New York, and now all previous agreements were null. In 1683 another agreement was made, and 61,440 acres went to Connecticut. This was not entirely satisfactory either, and for two hundred years there has been more or less dispute.[1] Finally, the matter has been settled, and as Norwalk had parted with that portion of its territory bordering upon the so-called Oblong to its daughter all this the caller at the house to-day will discover the chimney, from the crane of which hung the kettle of always ready "steeping" water.

[1] In 1717 New York was asked to define just where the line lay, and Norwalk, at a town meeting held Feb. 1, 1726, granted liberty to such of its Oblong citizens "that had lands taken away from them" by this new line, "to take up ye same in any of the unsequestered common lands in the township of Norwalk." Alexander Ressigue was effected by this recent New York change, and on Feb. 19, 1729-30, John Stewart relinquished three-and-a-half Norwalk acres cut off "nigh unto York line on ye Pound Ridge." Pound Ridge now belongs altogether to the State of New York.

A portion of what is, in 1896, known as the Selleck house, on West Avenue, is of ante-revolutionary date. It was originally Belden property, and belonged to the fourteen acre homestead of John and Rebecca (Bartlett) Belden. After the parents' day, it fell to the ownership of their children, four of whom, Mary Esther, Sarah, Amos and Henry, sold on March 18, 1796, their share in the estate (two-thirds) to their brothers Isaac and John, who divided the fourteen acres between themselves, Isaac taking the south half and John the north portion. Isaac married the daughter of one of Norwalk's principal men of those earlier and more simple days, Matthew Reed, and lived in what is now known as the DeKlyn house. John was unmarried and resided in what is to-day the Selleck house. After John Belden's use of the premises, his brother Henry occupied the same for a time, and he, at the instigation of his wife, erected the milk-house addition which is to-day observed on the north side. The back roof at that time ran almost to the ground, and under its west section, floored with stone, was kept the wood for winter, but the space was reserved in summer for a "cooling" place in a hot day. The Beldens' rights in the property were finally bought out by Frederick St. John, son of William St. John and brother of Mrs. Col. Buckingham Lockwood. He had married Harriet, daughter of John Cannon, but had no children. He there lived and died, when the house and lot became the purchase of the widow of Zalmon Selleck, the mother of the present owner of the property, Mrs. Wm. K. James.[1] Mr. Selleck died in the South, leaving a widow and two children, one of whom, Henry, also died away from home, and the fine old place fell, consequently, to the mother and daughter, who there resided in great comfort. The building was set on fire by Garth's wing of Tryon's army, but as the men were hastening to cross the stream-rocks (site of iron bridge on Cross Street 1896) to join Tryon's forces, the house was probably left as soon as the torch had been applied, and was on that account, partially saved. After the conflagation a small building that stood on the Westport road was moved and made to become a part of the original Belden building.

Another existing ante-revolutionary home is that of the lower Main Street Hoyt sisters and brothers. On May 15, 1764, Goold Hoyt, Sr., paid Capt. Josiah Thatcher, who then owned the old Whitney mill, £47-15s. for a lot of one-half acre and fifteen poles area and situated on "mill plain," now Main Street. Here Mr. Hoyt was to build the homey

[1]Mrs. James was there born. After her father's decease, and before her mother came permanently to occupy the house, it had a succession of professional tenants. Lawyer Alfred Apollos Holly, of Stamford and his wife Charlotte, daughter of Judge Chapman of Litchfield, resided there. Dr. John Adams McLean and his first wife, Catherine Hawley of Bridgeport, followed Mr. Holly. Subsequently David C. Sanford, a lawyer and his wife, a daughter of Ozias Seymour of Litchfield, and a sister of Judge Origen S. Seymour of that place, there tenanted, and Mrs. Seymour died there. (Mr. Sanford married,2d., a sister of Rev. Edward Bull, once rector of Christ Church, Westport.) After Mr. Seymour's occupancy of the house, Moses Craft and his wife Esther Mary (Cannon) Craft there lived, and after Mr. Craft Rev. Sylvester Eaton, the seventh Congregational pastor of Norwalk.

For Sension or St. John, English descent, see Home-Lot No. 22.

It will be observed that Mark St. John had only one son, Joseph 1st. It is through Joseph 2d. (son of Joseph 1st.) who married into one of the strongest families of New England, that the Norwalk Buckingham Lockwoods, Buckingham St. Johns, Sherrys and Skiddys derive their Hooker blood, and it is through Sarah, sister of Joseph 1st, who married Samuel Keeler, that the Seymour's and Van Buren's of this town, and the New York Chancellor, John Ray[1] affinity, derive their St. John blood. All of Mark St. John's children were by his first wife. He married, second, the widow, Dorothy Hall, of Stratford. The widow Hall was a daughter of Rev. Henry Smith of Wethersfield, Conn. She had previously married, as his second wife, Francis Hall, one of a company of "select young men," who came in 1639, from Kent County, England, to Guilford, Conn. Mr. Hall made his way eventually to Fairfield, where he founded "Hall's Farm." Here his first wife, Elizabeth, died, and here he married Dorothy nee Smith. Orcutt's History of Stratford mentions that Dorothy Smith married, before the Hall union, John, son of Rev. Adam Blakeman of Stratford. If so, she was three times wedded, as after Mark St. John's death, in 1693, she married Isaac More, once of Norwalk, but now of Farmington, the same from whom Mr. St. John bought his Home-Lot No. 16. She herself deceased in 1706.

[1]He was grandfather of the wife of Rev. Geo. W. Nichols of West Avenue, (1896). Chancellor Ray married Elsie, daughter of the Knickerbocker Jacobus Roosevelt, and had a daughter Elsie, who married Henry Lott. It was for this daughter's inheritance in the extensive Norwalk Keeler estate that the Chancellor interested himself and his friend Gov. Tompkins of New York. His two Lott grand-daughters, Elizabeth (Mrs. G. W. Nichols) and Helen (Mrs. Richard Schell) were accustomed in earlier New York days to have their horses put under saddle, and to join an afternoon party, the members of which would gaily gallop down Broadway to the East River, and thence, after ferriage, resume their ride to the Flatbush, Judge John A. Lott's family seat, from whence, after partaking of supper at tables silver spread, would return, at delightful summer nightfall, to town again. Elsie, Mrs. Lott, was wont to tell her children of the dwelling of a descendant of one of Norwalk's distinguished mothers, which stood in Queen, now Pearl, and not far from Pine Street. It was one of a trio of structures which, because of their marking a city architecture-period, Mrs. Lott would describe as before said. The buildings were of brick, expensively finished in hard wood, and one of them in black walnut, having its parlors on the second floor, reached by a stairway and balustrade that would grace any abode to-day, and its breakfast-room leading from the first-story hall, that opened on Pearl Street. The three residences were the abodes of comfort-elegance, and the head of the one that has been more particularly mentioned, was Capt. Isaac Bell 2d., a patron of Dr. Reuben Sherwood's Norwalk School, and himself of ancient Norwalk blood. Isaac Bell 1st., born Sept. 20, 1736, son of James and Sarah Bell, and great-grandson of Lieut. Francis Bell, the Stamford settler, married, first, Jemima Holly, and had two children, Katharine 1st., who died young, and Hannah. Hannah was a trifle over two years old when she lost her mother. Between one-and-a-half and two years after that event, her father, on Sept. 14, 1761, married, second, Susannah Smith, grand-daughter of John and Elizabeth Bartlett, and great-grand-daughter of (see Haynes lineage) Mr. William Haynes of "Haynes' Ridge," Norwalk (now New Canaan).

Mrs. Susanna Bell's grd. father (John Bartlett, the father by his second wife of Mrs. John Belden, who was mother of John, Isaac and Amos,) was a large land owner, and had three distinct Norwalk land parcels bearing his name. Her gr.-grandfather, William Haynes, was a colonial "Mr." but one of the titled New England gentlemen whose early pedigree is mystery-shrowded. He came to Norwalk from the vicinity, evidently, of Albany, but thence from whence,

The St. John-Hall ante-nuptial covenant is recorded in the Probate Register of Fairfield County. The following is the text:

"THIS INDENTURE, made between Mark Sension and Dorothy Hall of Stratford, widow, Witnesseth, That whereas there is a purpose of marriage between Mark Sension and Dorothy, they have consented and agreed, in case of marriage, as followeth: Imprimis. That Mark Sension will lay no claim to the estate that Dorothy Hall now possesseth, whether in lands or movables, but that it shall be in the power of Dorothy Hall, after marriage, to improve it, as she shall see cause, without any let from Mark Sension; but in case Dorothy Hall shall see cause to carry with her any part of the movable effects, Mark Sension binds himself and his heirs to return the same at the full value thereof, to her or to her executors, when either of them shall dye.

"Dorothy Hall doth covenant with Mark Sension that she will not, at his death, lay any claim to any part of his estate that he now possesseth, as a dowry, but will, when a widow, return to her own that she hath now in possession in Stratford.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, both parties have affixed their hands and seals. Dated this twenty-fifth of January, sixteen hundred ninety-one or two.

Signed, sealed and delivered in presence of

JOSEPH CURTIS, MARK SENSION,
EBENEZER BOOTHE. DOROTHY HALL."

A MARK ST. JOHN DESCENT MENTION.

The young Matthew Marvin,[3d.] (Matthew, Jr., Matthew Sr.) brought up in the to-day no one as yet seems able to positively determine. The forefather of the bankers Fitch of Milwaukee, Wis., who are also of Haynes descent, claims, in a record now about a half-century old, that William Haynes of Norwalk and John Haynes of Copford Hall (afterward Gov. John Haynes of Hartford) were connected if not related, but Grant Fitch, of Newton, N. J., seventh son of Haynes, nephew of Gov. Thos. Fitch of Norwalk, presents no authority for the assertion.

The father of Mrs. Isaac Bell[1st.] was one of the sons of Ebenezer and Abigail (Bouton) Smith, and of the line of Lieut. Samuel Smith, the 1634 settler of Windsor. He was some few years the senior of his wife, she having been born after 1705-6. They had a family of well known Conn. and N.Y. descendants, and their daughter, after her marriage to Isaac Bell,[1st.] removed to the provinces. Mr. Bell's son Isaac (Capt. Isaac) born Feb. 16, 1768, married Mary Ellis, daughter of old-time merchant Ellis of New York, and these were the occupants of the Pearl Street premises before mentioned. Mrs. Isaac Bell[2d.] spent considerable time in Europe. She occasionally came to Norwalk to visit her son. Isaac[3d.] and his sister Mary E. were pupils at Rev. Dr. Reuben Sherwood's academy in this town. The sister was somewhat delicate, but her brother's physical strength and glowing health are to this day here remembered. The young Isaac Bell[3d.] of Dr. Sherwood's day, was the more immediate ancestor of the present N. Y. City Bells.

Hannah Bell, born Dec. 10, 1758, daughter of Isaac Bell and Jemima Holly, married Fitch, son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth (Fitch) Rogers (see Haynes lineage) of Norwalk. These had a son, Fitch Rogers, Jr., who married Mary, daughter of Rev. Daniel Smith, long the Congregational pastor of Stamford. There were no children by this union. Fitch Rogers, Jr., had a sister Catherine, who married Rev. Reuben Sherwood, D.D., rector of St. Paul's Church, Norwalk, from 1818 to 1830. Mrs. Sherwood was a woman of presence and character, and highly graced her position. Her daughter, Miss Catherine Sherwood, now resides at Hyde Park on-the-Hudson. Henry, second son of Fitch and Hannah (Bell) Rogers, died unmarried. Her sister Harriet married John Winthrop, one of the two sons of whom, Henry R., has recently died in New York City. Henry Rogers Winthrop was a Norwalk school lad, and is represented to-day by his son Buchanan Winthrop, of N.Y. City. Chas. and William were unmarried sons of Fitch Rogers, Sr. Their sister, Emily Sophia, married her cousin, Henry Rogers, Jr.

Catherine Bell,[2d.] born Feb. 11, 1770, step-sister of Hannah, and fourth child of Isaac[1st.] and Susanna

Nehemiah Rogers 2d., next of mention to Moses, married at the age of twenty-six, one whose progenitors' possessions were but a few miles remove from those of the Rogers'. The name of his wife's father, Isaac Bell,[1] is perpetuated to-day, and the Capt. Isaac Bell Cove home site is a fond Norwalk and Stamford memory of the past.

Fitch Rogers, who had barely entered his teens when his father died, was attracted to Stamford from whence during the war troubles he departed to New Brunswick where we find him at thirty years of age numbered among the incorporators of the city of St. John's in said province. His name is to this day familiarly repeated by the older people of Norwalk. His daughter Catharine married Rev. Reuben Sherwood, who was for years the rector of the parish of the welfare of which the Rogers brothers had been so mindful, the venerable cure of St. Paul's, Norwalk.

Henry Rogers, the last mentioned brother, who, at the decease of his parent, Nehemiah, had just passed his seventh birthday, lived to become a man of signal integrity and influence. His greatly esteemed daughter, recently laid to rest, the relict of Rev. Smith Pyne, D. D., and who has been the care of devoted children, was a queenly lady. She took a deep interest in the family history, and contributed to its story.

As to Moses, Nehemiah, Fitch and Henry Rogers' mercantile careers, it may be affirmed that they accomplished a signal work. They possessed extraordinary business qualifications, were discreet, experienced, sagacious and ranked high among their commercial contemporaries. An "old New York merchant" is a proud designation, and without abating one jot of the praise to which modern enterprise is entitled, still one cannot call to mind the well kept up reputation for method and management excellence of the Nexsens, Livingstons, Hoffmans, Murrays, Beekmans, Crugers, Lispenards, Ludlows, Desbrosses, Bogarts, Gracies and Woolseys of old merchant fame, without holding the remembrance of the same in regardful estimation.

The Rogers brothers had three sisters, Susannah, Esther and Elizabeth. Their

[1]Norwalk and other well kept records define the Bell ancestry as mentioned in foot note, page 94. Catharine Bell (Mrs. Nehemiah Rogers 2d.) was a daughter of Isaac and Susannah Bell. Mr. Bell was a son of James and Sarah (Weed) Bell. He first married Jemima Holly and had a daughter, Hannah, born Dec. 10, 1758, who married Fitch, oldest son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth Rogers. Mrs. Bell died Feb. 23, 1760, and Mr. Bell married, second, Sep. 14, 1761, Susanna, daughter of Ephraim and Isabel (Bartlett) Smith, and grand-daughter of John and Isabel (Haynes) Bartlett, and great grand-daughter of "Mr. William Haynes" of "Haynes' Ridge," the Haynes property comprising the to-day spreading and splendid Dr. Parker New Canaan acreage. Ephraim Smith, father of Mrs. Isaac Bell, was the sixth son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Bouton) Smith, which Ebenezer Smith, born July 11, 1668, was a grandson of Lieut. Samuel Smith, an "ancient sergeant" and Wethersfield "Deputy" 1640-61, and "Deputy to the General Court Colony of Massachusetts Bay" 1661-1673; also a commissioner to negotiate with the Mohawks 1667. (See Society of Colonial Wars Year Book 1896.) Lieut. Smith was born in England and his character may be inferred from this clause of his will bearing date June 23, 1680: "I bequeath to each of my children a bible. My executors are to cause to be written, plainly and legibly, in each bible, the last verses of the eleventh Chapter of Ecclesiastes and the first verse of the twelfth Chapter." Isaac and Susanna (Smith) Bell had James, born April 14, 1762; Henry, born Nov. 25, 1765; Isaac (Capt. Isaac of New York see page 94), born Feb. 16, 1768; Katharine, born Feb. 11, 1770, and Thomas, born March 9, 1774. Their daughter Katharine married Nehemiah 2d., son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth (Fitch) Rogers of Norwalk.

CHILDREN AND GRAND-CHILDREN OF NEHEMIAH AND ELIZABETH (FITCH) ROGERS.

Fitch, oldest son of Nehemiah and Elizabeth Rogers, having reached majority, married Hannah, daughter of Isaac and Jemima (Holly) Bell of Stamford, and had:

Fitch 2d.; married Mary, daughter of Rev. Daniel Smith of Stamford.

Catharine; married Rev. Reuben Sherwood.[1]

Henry; died unmarried.

Harriet; married John Winthrop.

Charles; died unmarried.

William; died unmarried at sea.

Emily Sophia; married Henry F. Rogers (son of Henry 1st.) her cousin.

There are grounds for believing that after the decease of Joseph Ketchum 3d. his widow (Elizabeth Hurlbutt) may have married Capt. Phineas Chapman of her former home vicinity. It is certain that Morris Ketchum claimed Chapman kinship and the second marriage theory will solve the problem. Mr. Ketchum, when a lad, visited Westport where he seems to have attended school. The bright Saratoga County boy soon after obtained a position in one of the metropolitan commercial houses, the heads of which had achieved enviable fame, and he, who in the dew of industrious youth made himself rurally useful, ripened anon into one of the business princes of the land. Norwalk, to the end of its history-chapter, will probably furnish a no more remarkable finance-trio than that composed of her descended three prosperous sons, Moses Rogers, Morris Ketchum and Legrand Lockwood. Two of Mr. Ketchum's sons, Charles J. and Landon, married sisters, Phœbe and Augusta, daughters of Francis Burritt. Mr. Burritt's home at the father's "Rocky Neck" (Saugatuck), was a lovely spot. Mr. Burritt was an invalid for some time and his son Frank (now "Commodore") was likely to be out in his boat or off with his gun, but Mrs. Burritt's cordial presence and the agreeable manner of her cousin, Mrs. Anna P. Ketchum, who was a visitor at the Burritts, added to the charming spontaniety of the daughters, Phœbe and Augusta, made this water side chatteau truly inviting.

Katharine, oldest child of Morris Ketchum, married Israel Corse. Her brother, Grosvernor, died young.* There was no issue by Mr. Ketchum's second marriage. The children by the last marriage were Franklin, Charles J., Landon, Edward, Morris, (died young at "Hokanum"), Miller and Margaret (Mrs. Dr. Willard Parker 2d.)

After the improvements upon the lower Norwalk and Saugatuck highway the Ketchum carriage and the Burritt landau were seen along its picturesque route. Mr. Ketchum, (waited upon, often, by his faithful, gray haired and bearded colored service-man)* on his way to take an express train at South Norwalk and the Burritt's establishment with occupants on health and pleasure bent, arrested attention and commanded admiration. A touching tribute to the excellence of Morris Ketchum and Francis Burritt was paid, a little before his decease, by the late Horace Staples of Westport. The venerable citizen, after a prolonged interview, was weary, but he desired to add his testimony to the worth of his departed friends, which he warmly did, relating, substantially, at the close the following incident: On the day that Francis Burritt's obsequies were attended Hiram Ketchum (brother of Morris) and himself met in the city. Either a little before or after the service the wires suddenly flashed to the city the intelligence of a Union and Confederate engagement. Falling into the embrace of Mr. Staples, Mr. Ketchum, with much feeling, burst forth "We are one."

It would be amiss, if not unjust, to bring this Parker-Ketchum note to a period before referring to the great work accomplished in the ancient Norwalk parish of Canaan through the interest and influence of Dr. Willard Parker, Sr. None knew better than he the potentiality of elevation, and the distinguished physician had by masterly sagacity, enterprise and activity and by liberal decreeing and doing, proven a benefactor to that healthful and desirable and delightful summer haunt. It is far from rash to affirm that his memory merits exalted praise.

[1]Reuben Sherwood, D.D., belonged to the old Sherwood family of Fairfield, and was a Yale man, class of 1813. He was ordained by Bishop Hobart of

*Benj. Adair, brought up by the Ketchums, was a useful and respected in-waiting attache of the family. In due time he married a Modoc Indian from the south of Long Island who also proved a domestic acquisition and was an earnest christian woman. These two were valuable accessories to the "Hokanum" establishment. Many summers and winters attested to the liveried Benjamin's fidelity and he never grew to become an age-disenchanted Westport and Norwalk form. His wife survives him and dwells with a daughter, graduate of the New York Normal School.

Matthew, son of Thomas Sherwood of Fairfield. There were six children, but no Norwalk descent from this union. The wife died on Christmas Day, 1730.

Ann, daughter of Thomas Fitch 1st, married John Thompson of Farmington, and had no Norwalk descent.

Sarah, daughter of Thomas Fitch, married John, son of John Burr of Fairfield. There was no Norwalk, but there was noticeable Fairfield descent from this union. John and Sarah (Fitch) Burr's daughter, Sarah, married June 29, 1692, Rev. Charles Chauncey, grandson of President Charles Chauncey, second president of Harvard College, and their son Samuel was for many years Master of the Charlestown, Mass., Grammar School.

The 1650 Hartford Samuel Fitch may possibly have been the brother of Thomas 1st of Norwalk. He married Susannah, the widow of William Whiting, and had by her Samuel, who went to Milford, and Thomas, born in 1652, who married, in 1680, Abigail, daughter of Ensign William and Sarah Goodrich, which Sarah was a daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Marvin of Norwalk. The Thomas and Abigail (Goodrich) Fitch children were:

Thomas; born July 20, 1680, died young.
Sybil; born Nov. 2, 1684, died an infant of a few weeks.

The children's mother died at the close of 1684.

The widow of Samuel Fitch (Mrs. Whiting) married third, Alexander Bryan of Milford, but well known in early Norwalk, and her son Samuel Fitch married Sarah Bryan, daughter of Richard, who was the son of Alexander Bryan. Samuel and Sarah (Bryan) Fitch had only one child, Sarah, who married Zachariah Whitman, which may account for the introduction of that name into the later family of Samuel and Elizabeth (Platt) Fitch.

Thomas Fitch 1st makes no mention of his daughter Sarah in his will, neither of any Hartford Fitch relationship or connection. He appointed his son John sole executor, who gave to the children of his deceased sister (Sarah Burr) "as much as his father gave the other children."

The Norwalk Fitch mother (wife of Thomas 1st) is claimed to have been a daughter of Richard Platt 1st. One sentence in the will of her husband reads thus, "my loving cousin Sergeant John Platt." "Cousin" should here, it is probable, read nephew, but in the absence of documentary evidence, inference should be drawn with caution.

Thomas 1st overlived, by several years, his son Thomas 2d. The senior Thomas' residence was somewhere near the present Enos Osborn East Avenue home, and Thos. junior's home was originally on the opposite side of the street, a little to the southeast of "Goodman Hoyt's," now Earle's Hill.

Thomas Fitch 2d bore in early days the title of Sergeant. He died in the prime of life, leaving a widow (who was twice married after his day), and a son not yet out of his teens, who was to be a Governor's father. His widow was the sister of Mrs. Abigail Pierson (wife of the first rector of Yale College), and of Sarah, wife of the renowned Indian fighter,

John Platt[3d.], son of John[2d.], married Sarah Hickox (see page 234),[1] and had John[4th.], born Mar. 20, 1736, who married Sept. 3, 1758, Charity Morehouse, from which union descend the so-known "Silver Mine" Platts.[2]

Samuel[2d.], son of John[3d.] and Sarah (Hickox) Platt, married, March 2, 1757, Ann, daughter of Jabez Raymond, and had:

Justus[1st.], born Dec. 4, 1757.
Jabez, born Nov. 22, 1761; (died young.)
Esther, born Aug. 11, 1763; (Mrs. I. Hyatt.)
Joseph, born June 25, 1765.
Justus[2d.], born Sept. 10, 1768.
Hannah, born May 24, 1771; (unmarried.)
Betty, born Nov. 27, 1773.
John, born Dec. 17, 1777.
Ann, born Feb. 6, 1781, (Mrs. John Sturges.)

"Aunt Betsey" was an early inmate of the Newkirk family, the seat of which household was where Noah Bradley has, in more recent years, resided. This beautiful water-view home now belongs to the Eno family. It has had a succession of well-known tenants—the Newkirks, Ketchums, Sillimans, Judahs and Bradleys have all found it a goodly spot. It was, in pre-English times, an Indian haunt, evidently. The Norwalk pioneers recognized this fact, and gave the name of a prominent red ruler to its neighborhood It is to be presumed that the Ludlow covenant of 1640 was made not far from its spray-sprinkled shore. A handsome portrait of one of its early admirers adorns Greenfield Hill walls, and in the care now bestowed the home and its environments, is exhibited a taste befitting the felicitous situation.

[1]The New Haven records read "John Platt of Norwalk and Mrs. Mary Smith were married Nov. 20, 1722." This may have been an early marriage, followed by early decease, of John Platt[3rd.], son of John[2d.].

[2]The cradle of the Platt's of Silver Mine, is the (1896) yellow painted building called the "Marvin-Raymond" house (last house, on the west side of the street, before is reached the turns in the Silver Mine road, one toward New Canaan and the other in the direction of Winnipauk.) This house was built in the day of John Platt[3d.], born in 1702, and probably by the same John[3d.].

John[4th.], son of John Platt[3d.], married, as stated in the text, Charity Morehouse. Both parents rest in St. Paul's churchyard. The husband, John Platt[4th.], was the "master carpenter" employed in the building of the St. Paul's Church which was taken down in 1841.

John Platt[4th.] had two sons, Joseph and Jonathan, and five daughters—Sarah, Hannah, Anna, Susan and Esther. Of these daughters, Sarah was the mother of Nathan Beers, whose son Frank now occupies the Beers (formerly Sherman) house in Main Street, (see plate, page 129) and the husbands of the others were named Nash, Richards, Glover and Mix.

Joseph, son of John[4th.] and Charity Platt, born 1774-5, was the next older child than Jonathan, the youngest. Joseph married, first, March 7, 1800, Nancy McAllister of Troy, N. Y., and had:

Alfred M., born Oct. 6, 1800.
Jonathan[2d.], born Sept. 11, 1803.
Laura, born Jan. 21, 1806 (Mrs. Lemuel Bronson).
Esther Sally, born Mar. 21. 1808 (died young).
Joseph, born July 8, 1811.
Nancy Jane, born Nov. 10, 1813 (died young).
Charles, born Mch. 15, 1816 (died young).
Esther, born Sept. 7, 1818 (died young).
Susanna, born Feb. 19, 1821 (Mrs. Samuel Beers).
Emily C., born Dec. 17, 1825 (Mrs. Levi Brown).
Chauncey Cook, born Dec. 20, 1827.
Minerva, born June 28, 1832 (Mrs. John Wesley Dickens).

Joseph Platt, father of the immediately foregoing children, was familiarly called "Governor". He married, second, Oct. 1, 1837, Mrs. Olive Gregory.

Alfred M., son of Joseph and Nancy Platt, married Hannah Smith of West Norwalk, and had: Giles (married Mary Couch); Amanda (Mrs. Samuel Comstock); Cornelius (married Caroline, daughter of John Quigley, and had Charles); Sarah (Mrs. Royal Miller); Martha (Mrs. Joseph Gilbert); Ann Elizabeth (Mrs. John Lambert*); Mary Jane (Mrs. Sydney Guthrie); Frederick M. (unmarried); LeGrand (died young).

Jonathan[2d.], son of Joseph and Nancy Platt, married, Apr. 6, 1828, Laura Parmely, daughter of Wm. and Esther (Squires) Taylor of Wilton, and had: David M., born Jan. 2, 1830; Augustus, born Dec. 10, 1831; Mary E. (Mrs. Wm. H. Holly),† born June 6, 1834; John Henry, born Sept. 13, 1837; Harriet L.

*John and Ann E. Lambert had one child, Carrie, who married Geo. F. Lockwood, and had Ellsworth and Mary Jane.

†The children of Wm. H. and Mary E. Holly were: Wm. Henry, died young; Orris Starr, died young; Mary G., (Mrs. Arthur T. Evans); Jennie F., (Mrs. Edward B. Butler); Chas., died young; Estelle, died young.

married, Sept. 15, 1840, Mary E. Bishop, and had Alfred B. Beers, at the present time a Bridgeport lawyer.

The late Ambrose A. Beers of Lewisboro, born Oct. 30, 1812, (died June 11, 1897) was a son of Jonathan and Anna Beers, and brother of Alfred of Bridgeport. He married, first, Loretta Brown, and had Oscar; Alonzo; Lester and Emmet G. Oscar married Mary Waterbury, and had one child; Alonzo died young. Lester, intended for the ministry, died in the army, unmarried, at Newbern, N. C. Emmet G. married Lucy J. Caldwell, and had Edith Loretta and Ernest, the first of whom married Wm. Mackay of Ridgefield.

Ambrose A. Beers married, second, Jan. 30, 1850, Betsey Ann, born Sept. 22, 1825, daughter of Samuel Monroe. The children by the second marriage were: Emogene Waterbury, born March 7, 1851 (Mrs. Alexander St. George);[1] Harriet Frances, born Dec. 28, 1852 (Mrs. George Edward Raymond); Clarissa Ada, born Dec. 8, 1854; Ida Lavinia (Mrs. Elmer Ellsworth Holly) born March 13, 1857; Franklin Babbitt, born May 1, 1859; Julia Anna (Mrs. Herbert William Kemp) born Nov. 16, 1861; Arthur, born July 1, 1864 (unmarried); Lester Irving, born July 10, 1869.

HOME-LOT XXVII.

THOMAS LUPTON.

Thomas Lupton of New Haven early appears and almost as early disappears as a factor in Norwalk concerns. He was made a freeman in 1664, but the ancient Town Records make name-mention of him prior, by a few years, it would appear, to that date. His home-lot was at the rear, somewhat, of the main line of hearthstone appropriations, but one emanated from thence who became the progenitress of a large family. His daughter Hannah married Ebenezer Blakeley, and had a daughter, to whom was given the mother's name, Hannah, who married John Nash 2d. John Nash 2d. and his brother Nathan, were the only sons of John 1st. (son of Edward Nash 1st.). Nathan, it is believed, had no children, which fact would constitute John Nash 2d. (whose wife's mother was a Lupton), progenitor of all of Norwalk Nash name.

A grandson of John Nash 2d., viz.: Abraham 2d. (son of Abraham Nash 1st.) was the Abraham Nash of Troy, N. Y. fortune-fame. He married Sally Benedict of Ridgefield. His brothers were Jared and Samuel Nash, and his sisters were Sally (Mrs. Silas St. John)

[1] Alexander and Emogene W. St. George were married April 21, 1873, and had: Elmer Leland, born June 6, 1874; Harold Beers, born July 15, 1888.

George E. and Harriet F. Raymond were married Aug. 29, 1878, and had: Percy Edward, born May 30, 1879; Howard, born April, 1881.

Elmer E. and Ida L. Holly were married July, 1883, and had: Bessie Ida, born Aug. 22, 1886; Anna May, born June 27, 1890; Alice Winnifred, born Sept. 1891.

Franklin B. and Mary Jane (Livesay) Beers were married Oct. 1888, and had: Mabel Clarissa, born Dec., 1889; Earl Livesay, born Dec. 1895.

Herbert William and Julia Anna Kemp were married Dec. 6, 1885, and had: Herbert Oliver, born Oct. 14, 1886; Julia Marjorie, born Mar. 8, 1889.

Lester I. and Ida M. (Keeler) Beers were married Feb., 1890, and had: Myrtle, born June 6, 1891.

Elmer Leland St. George married, Sept. 7, 1896, Ada Street, and had: Leland Elmer, born Oct. 23, 1897.

Abraham, baptized September 25, 1698;

Pierre[1st], born January 14, 1699–1700.

The last two sons, Abraham and Pierre, were baptized in the French Church in New York.

Pierre[1st], or Peter, as he came to be called, married Jeanne, daughter of Jaques and and Jeane (O'dart) Ballereau (born July 3, 1708) of New York. On May 18, 1731, said Pierre or Peter[1st] was admitted a freeman and recorded as a goldsmith. He came to Norwalk in about 1637–8, and made several land purchases, appearing to select for his home seat the meadows somewhat north of the present Marshall Street in South Norwalk. His children were:

Jaques or James[1st], born February 6, 1723–4, no record;

Marie, born May 23, 1726;

Pierre or Peter[2nd], born July 22, 1732;

Jane, born October 24, 1738.

Pierre or Peter[1st] Quintard married, second, Deborah, daughter of John Knapp of Stamford, and had no issue.

Peter Quintard[2nd] married, first, and had James[2nd], Peter[3rd], born 1765, Evert[1st] and Isaac. He married, second, May 23, 1774, Ruth Stevens of Stamford and had Rebecca (a Mrs. Raymond of New York), Lewis Y., and Clarissa (Mrs. Stephen Mott).[1]

James[2nd],[2] son of Peter Quintard[2nd], married, first, Sarah, daughter of Deacon Raymond,

[1]Stephen, born October 24, 1771, son of Reuben and Phebe (Tuttle) Mott, married Clarissa, daughter of Peter[2nd] and Ruth Quintard. Mrs. Reuben Mott was from New Canaan. Her husband was probably of the Long Island Mott family. The children, other than Stephen, of Reuben and Phebe Mott, were Jesse, born December 17, 1764, Grace (Mrs. Thomas Trowbridge), born July 14, 1766, Sarah (Mrs. Johnson), born June 30, 1769, Polly (Mrs. Smith of Ridgefield), Fanny (Mrs. Curtis Whiting of Stratford), Betsey, born April 23, 1776 (Mrs. James Jarvis of New York).

The children of Stephen and Clarissa Mott were Eliza (unmarried), Marietta (Mrs. Rev. Dr. Humphreys), and Langdon.

Langdon, son of Stephen Mott, married (see page 275) Harriet, daughter of Captain Joshua and Margaret Bouton. Their son, Charles B., married Emily A., daughter of Edwin and Eliza (Smith) Hoyt (see page 359), and their daughter Harriet married Henry, son of Dr. Emmery C. Bissell of Norwalk.

The children of Thomas and Grace Trowbridge were Nancy (Mrs. Jacob Jennings[2nd]), Betsey (Mrs. Uriah Johnson), and a son who was accidentally shot at Sag Harbor.

The children of Jacob[2nd] and Nancy Jennings were George W., Jacob, Julia Ann, James.

The children of George W. and Esther (Hoyt) Jennings were George, Jacob, William, James, Hannah (Mrs. Captain Nathaniel Clark), Hattie (unmarried), and Mary Elizabeth (Mrs. Allen Betts).

Jacob Jennings[2nd], who married Mary Trowbridge, was born April 22, 1779. He was a son of Jacob[1st] and Grace (Parks) Jennings (see page 43), and had a sister Anna, who married, first, a Munson, and second Edwin Van Antwerp[1st], whose son, Edwin Van Antwerp[2nd] formerly owned the East Avenue property afterward occupied by Charles B. White of New York. Anna Jennings married, third, Hezekiah Whitlock, the father by another wife of Mrs. James Stevens (Fanny Whitlock), and of her brother Lewis Whitlock, for may years a keeper of the Norwalk Island lighthouse.

[2]James Quintard[2nd] lived in the last house, east, on the north side of the present Marshall Street in South Norwalk. He there kept an "Inn" which bordered the old "Quintard Dock." This dock in the days of the Vanderbilt-Peck steamboat opposition was the landing place of the Vanderbilt boat. The Peck line moored its boat at the "Day Dock," foot of the present Washington Street. It was because Messrs. Vanderbilt and Drew failed to influence the Norwalk stage coach proprietors to first drive their vehicles to the Quintard pier before proceeding with passengers for the Peck line that Mr. Drew determined to plant a coach line of his own. Horses and carriages were brought from the city and the Vanderbilt patrons were provided for.

The Quintard Inn was the only public house at

Stamford Town Records.

1. SAMUEL HOLLY was born in England, supposedly about the year 1593. He died at Cambridge, Massachusetts Bay Colony, between 22 October 1643, the date of his will, and 5 December 1643, when it was recorded. His wife's given name was Elizabeth. If she was the Elizabeth Holly who sailed from London in June 1635 in the ship Blessing, she either gave an incorrect age (30 years in one account and 20 in another) or she was not the mother of Samuel's son John, known to have been born about 1618. She may have been Samuel's sister, niece or wife — or perhaps not even related to him.

The first reference to Samuel in the New World is found in The Regestere: Booke of the Lands & Houses in the Newtown, 1635, page 71:

> This Entrie ffolloweing made by us, who are appointed for this worke for this present Yeare 1639; Richard Jackesone, Josheph Isake, Robert Saunders:
> Samuell Holley — one Dwelling house w'th Eightene Acars of Land on ye South side of Charles River Within Cambridge Bounds, Bounded upon ye Southeast side upon Bush, Charles River Northeast, John Jacksone North west, Southwest Joineing to ye Comon sett out by Stakes.

Samuel Holly's land was beside the ancient road to Roxbury, in that part of Newtown (Cambridge, later Brighton), now a part of the City of Boston.

The will of Samuel Holly was recorded 5 December 1643 in the probate register of Suffolk County, Massachusetts. An abstract reads:

> Because it is appointed for all men once to dye, & the dayes of men in this world are but like a shadowe yt soone departeth, Therefore I, Samuell Holly, doe make this my last will. Effects to my loving wife, except Tenn acres of land to my soone, according to a former writing, and the remaining part of the inclosed lott to goe to my soone & his heirs, to goe after ye decease of my wife, but she to have ye use & possession thereof during her life. To my soone, one blue stuffe Sutte of apparall, one hatt, one p'r of shoos; all other of my lands & goods I give to my wife, whom I doe make my sole Execut'r. This 22th of October 1643. Witnesses: John Jackson, Edward Jackson.

Although the names of his wife and "soone" are not stated in the will, they are identified by subsequent records of the sales of the property bequeathed to them.

Samuel's widow, Elizabeth, married John Kendall. On 8 September 1646 Elizabeth and John Kendall sold to Edward Jackson "one dwelling house, late Samuell Holleyes. . .and Ten Acr of Land" (The Regestere, op. cit.: 120). Genealogists have considered Elizabeth to have been that Goody Kendall who was executed on an absurd charge of witchcraft. The Rev. Hale, a minister of Beverly, Massachusetts, wrote in his A Modest Enquiry into the Nature of Witchcraft:

> . . . .a woman of Cambridge, against whom a principal evidence was a Watertown nurse, who testified that the said Kendal (so was the accused called) did bewitch to death a child of Goodman Genings of Watertown; for the said Kendall did make much of the child, and then the child was well, but quickly changed its color and dyed in a few hours. The court took this evidence among others, the said Genings not knowing of it. But after Kendal was executed (who also denyed her guilt to the death), Mr. Rich. Brown, knowing better things of Kendall, asked said Genings if they suspected her to bewitch their child; they answered, No. But they judged the true cause of the child's death to be thus, viz., the nurse had the night before carryed out the child and kept it abroad in the cold a long time, when the red gum was come out upon it, and the cold had struck in the red gum, and this they judged the cause of the child's death. And that said Kendal did come in that day and make much of the child, but they apprehended no wrong to come to the child by her. After this the said nurse was put in prison for adultery, and there delivered of her base child; and Mr. Brown went to her and told her it was just with God to leave her to this wickedness as a punishment for murdering Goody Kendal by her false witness bearing. But the nurse dyed in prison, and so the matter was not further inquired into.

In view of the fact that the parents of the allegedly bewitched child were not even called upon to testify at the trial, Charles A. Hoppin, in his The Washington Ancestry. . .: 533-5, upon which this account of Samuel Holly is based, wrote: "One must wonder what manner of men were the judges who accepted the strange testimony of a disreputable woman, intent upon hiding her own faults, and then decreed the death penalty upon that evidence of lies and superstition. Further evidence is necessary to confirm the time, manner and place of death of Elizabeth (———) Holly-Kendall."

Samuel (1) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth, had one child:

2. i. John Holly, born about 1618.

2. JOHN HOLLY, son of Samuel (1) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth, was born in England about 1618, for "Mr. John Holly, in ye 63d year of his age, dyed May ye 25, Anno. 1681" (Stamford Town Records, 1:74). He married, presumably in Cambridge, Massachusetts, about 1640, Mary, whose maiden surname is unknown. She died at Stamford, Connecticut, as his widow, 7 April 1714 (ibid., 1:126).

In his History of Stamford, Connecticut: 25, the Rev. E.B. Huntington states that John Holly was one of its proprietors before the end of 1642, but this compiler has been unable to find any evidence of Holly being there so early. He was certainly in Stamford before 22 October 1645 when, as shown below in the record of his land holdings, he purchased property from Richard Hardy of Stamford.

Another early reference to John Holly is an entry in Stamford Town Records: 18, stating "John Hollye chosen marshall, Whilla. new [i.e., William Newman] choyse of deputy." The item is undated but follows one dated 3

December 1648. Entries were not always made in chronological order, however, and since John was only 30 years old in 1648, a rather tender age for a position of such responsibility, his election may have taken place some years later.

Mr. Holly became one of Stamford's most valuable citizens. The Rev. E.B. Huntington, in his History, op. cit.: 274-5 states, "John Holly was one of the most prominent of our early settlers. He was from the first employed in the almost constant service either of the town or of the colony." Among the town offices filled by Mr. Holly were those of marshall, noted above; fence viewer, 1664, and lister, 1666-7 and 1676. Stamford Town Records, 2:215 report "yt Rich'd Lawe, Francis Bell and Jno. Holly are chosen to make the cuntry, Mr. Bishops and towns rates for the present ye[ar]," at a town meeting held in 1665. At the town meeting held 24 March 1666, John was elected one of the five townsmen, "chosen by papers [i.e., paper ballots] for ye ordering of towns besenes for ye yeare insuing." Huntington's History, op. cit.: 470, states he had been elected for four terms, the records of such elections having been lost for the period 1641 to 1666. Holly was again elected a townsman in 1671, 1673-4 and 1678. He was a juryman in 1667, and in 1669 "John Holly senior is Chosen recorder of all bills, sales, deads, inventorys, wills, ct. [i.e., etc.] for Standford." Huntington states (ibid.: 472) that John Holly Sr. served as town clerk from 1668 to 1670. He was made a surveyor of highways for the East Field in 1671. In 1672 Mr. Holly served as an auditor "to take in the invoice of the town," and in the following year was asked to draw up the list of amounts due by the town to "each piticular man." Finally, in 1676, Mr. Holly was "chosen a town treasurer for ye yeare insuing or till a new be chosen."

John Holly was elected as a deputy to represent Stamford at the General Court in New Haven in the years 1654-5 and 1663 (Records of the Colony or Jurisdiction of New Haven, 1653-1665: 96, 147, 477, by Charles J. Hoadly). In October 1670 he was one of Stamford's two representatives to the General Assembly of the Connecticut Colony, Hartford (History, op. cit.: 463).

The General Court at New Haven on 26 May 1658 appointed John Holly of Stamford, and others, "to receive the customs & excise of wines & liquoures in ye severall plantations wherein they live." He was reappointed as collector of customs in the following year and was allowed "30 s. (besides his charges now at New-Haven) for his paines & care in gathering in the customs & excise of the towne of Stamford the yeare past." In 1662 the General Court again appointed him collector of customs (ibid.: 236, 293, 300).

At a Court of Elections held at Hartford 9 May 1667, after the absorption of the New Haven Colony by the Connecticut Colony, it was resolved that "Mr. Richard Lawes & Mr. John Holly are chosen Commissioners for the Townes of Standford, Greenwich & Rye, to assist in the execution of justice at the courts at Fayrefeild for the yeare ensueing" (The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1665-1677: 63, by J. Hammond Trumbull). These courts were the Inferior Court of Common Pleas and the Probate Court. It appears that in this capacity Mr. Holly became a judge. He was reappointed in 1670, 1678-9 and in 1681 (ibid., 1665-1677: 132; 1678-1688: 5, 25, 76). During his term as commissioner, Mr. Holly was freed from taxation (ibid., 1665-1677: 59).

On 14 October 1669 John Holly Sr. was propounded as a freeman of Stamford (ibid.: 118). The Rev. Huntington, in commenting on Mr. Holly's election as commissioner on 9 May 1667 (History, op. cit.: 274-5), wrote:

> It seems to have been a singular appointment, as he is next year, 1569 [sic, 1669 was intended] propounded for freeman in the Connecticut jurisdiction, where he is distinctly indicated by the title of senior. It would seem that he had shown himself so competent and useful under the New Haven administration, that he was appointed to the most responsible offices before the usual form of enfranchisement. Mr. Holly seems to have been as active in ecclesiastical as in civil and judicial matters.

Stamford Town Records are full of references to Mr. Holly's services on town committees, most of them dealing with real estate matters. In 1667 he was placed on one which obtained from the Indians Taphance, son of Ponus, the sagamore of the Toquams, and Powahay, son of Onax and grandson of Ponus, confirmation of prior conveyances from Ponus to the town. Taphance, incidentally, had been implicated in the murder in 1649 of John Whitmore, but was released on his promise to try to locate Toquattoes, another Indian, who was suspected of having committed the crime. No later development of the case is of record.

Also in 1667, John Holly served on committees to determine areas of the town suitable for planting, to allot commonage to proprietors, and to determine where fences should be placed. He was assigned to eight committees during the period 1670 to 1678 to make layouts in general land distributions of commonage to proprietors, and served on other committees in each of the years 1669 through 1674 charged with making layouts of land granted to proprietors in individual actions. In one of these, "Mr. Holly and Left. Francis Bell" were appointed 23 December 1670 to lay out a house lot for Mr. Matthew Bellemy, the new schoolmaster. This was the first instance found in Stamford records of John Holly being styled "Mr.," the title of high standing in the community, and thereafter he was always so distinguished in the local records.

Mr. Holly participated in the long continued boundary dispute between Stamford and Greenwich. At a town meeting in Stamford held 25 February 1668/9, he was made a member of a committee formed to "treat w'th Grenwitch men about runing the line between ye too towns, & if thay se y't thay can advantage our towne by allteration of ye former agreement, thay have power to improve thayer best skill thereunto." Again, on 16 January 1673/4, Mr. Holly was one of the three requested by Stamford "to rune the lines between Stanford and Greenwidge."

The boundary line between Stamford and Norwalk was also an object of considerable dispute. On 18 May 1670 John Holly and four other Stamford men were appointed "to mark our bounds at Rowatton (or by ye English called five Mile) river, & ye same p'sons sent are impowered to cut out & deface whatsoever markes they find upon trees or otherwise, set by Norwak men or any other, on this side ye five mile river afforsaid, as bound mark, without ye approbation of this towne." Norwalk was in no mood to take this unilateral action lying down, and in June of 1670 Holly and two others of the earlier committee were empowered by Stamford to settle the location of the boundary. At a meeting with the Norwalk representatives it was agreed that Five Mile River would constitute the boundary line between the two towns.

At a town meeting held at Stamford 22 March 1669 it was decided that a new meeting house should be built of stone. A committee of five, including Goodman Holly, was appointed in the following October to procure workmen and to oversee construction. If "thay can'ot git a house built w'th stone, thay have liberty to get it dun w'th timber. . . .These orders about ye meeting house are now repealed." The retraction reflects a conflict of opinion as to the construction of the proposed new meeting house. For more than two years the size, shape and material for construction of the building were subjects of controversy. Goodman Holly was named 26 October 1670 to a select committee of five having "full power com'ited to them to procure a ston new meeting house. . .to be for ye publick worship of God in this place," but the dispute still persisted. On 29 March 1671 Mr. Holly and one other man were "chosen to take ye minds of ye town conscerned in the meeting house, to know their mindes. . .for what forme & figure they have a mind to build." Apparently no consensus was possible, for six days later, at a town meeting, "it was agreede that the finall desition & diference respecting the forme or figuer of the new meeteing house is to be done p' a solem ordinance of God, in drawing of lott; & ye reason of this way is because the towne being not capable to desyde it. . . .The solem ordinance being as above voted, the lott carid it for a square meeteng house as above. . .[to] be thirty & eight foott square & the height of ye wall to be twelve foott. . .[with] a teurett on ye tope, & for dementions of it, is left to ye comity & carpenders to order itt." On the following day "the towne doth chuse, conferme and apoynt" Mr. Holly and four others "to be a comity for ye caring on ye work about ye new meeteing, as above." Mr. Holly and Lt. Francis Bell then resigned as townsmen, "The reason is because they are chosen to be of the comity for the meeteing house & desyerd theire relese."

Mr. Holly was signally honored by the Connecticut Colony when, on 9 May 1672, he and three others were commissioned by the Court of Elections in Hartford "to measure on an east northeast lyne from Mamorenack River to the west bownds of Fayrefeild, and to make report to this Court in October next, the distance twixt the sayd places and the quantitie of miles belonging to each of those plantations. This to be don at the charge of the townes of Norwalke, Standford, Greenwich & Rye" (Trumbull's Public Records, op. cit., 1665-1677: 174). This sensitive task, involving as it did the determination of oft disputed boundaries between the towns, was one requiring tact, responsibility and good judgment.

On 7 November 1672 Mr. Holly and three other Stamford men were requested to determine what land should be offered by the town to induce Mr. Eliphalet Jones of Greenwich to become a minister at Stamford to assist and relieve the Rev. John Bishop. The town agreed 3 February 1672/3 that he be offered 16 acres of upland and meadow, a part of which was "that peice of land at Wescos which was improved by the Ingins, in case it be cleare from all English and Endgins" claims. Greenwich seems to have been disturbed at the prospect of losing its minister, for Stamford appointed a committee of three, including Mr. Holly, "to treat with Grenwidg men about theire compliance with Stanford for the uphoulding of the minister in this place." Apparently it was decided that Greenwich residents could attend church services at Stamford, for the minutes of the town meeting held 23 February 1674/5 at Stamford record that "Ye town by vote do judg it meet that Grinwich, while thay have the benifit of the ministry amung us, yt thay allso should pay to ye ministry."

Mr. Holly on 2 May 1673 was put on a Stamford committee to consider obtaining a house and meadow for Mr. Jones, and in July of that year was named to another committee directed "to provide either upon the towns common land, a home lot, and to build a comfortable house thereupon for the use of the ministry; Mr. Jones to have the use and benifit of the same as long as he continues in the work of the ministry amongst us."

Other committee work involving real estate in which Mr. Holly participated included the drafting of a covenant with Goodman Webb regarding the operation of the mill, 1670; his services in 1672 "to consider in some waye aboute the uplands lyeng betweene pine or stony brooke & five milles river for ye prevention of any Indians (or others). . .who [the committeemen] are to manifest their consent or deniall to the same"; "to treat with ye Ingens in order to theire setling upon Long Neck," 1673, and to "lay out and rectifie the common highways about the town," 1676. Perhaps Mr. Holly was not well in the spring of 1675, for he was not elected to be a townsman in February and the minutes of the town meeting of 4 May 1675 note, "Mr. Jonath. Selleck is added unto the committee in Mr. Holly, his roome, for the worke about the towne house."

One of the most delicate and sensitive undertakings was the periodic revision of seating assignments in the meeting house, for the location of seats represented a public judgment of social status, from high to low. In 1670 John Holly and two others were given "power to seat or remove men in the meeting house according to thayer discretion," and in 1673 Mr. Holly was placed on a committee of five instructed to rearrange the order of the meeting house seating.

On a number of occasions Mr. Holly was requested by the town to supervise younger men in the performance of their duties. For instance, at the 6 August 1679 town meeting, Daniel Weed and Joshuah Hoyt were chosen "to take in the list of the town's estat and they, with Mr. Holly, to fit it for the Court." At that same town meeting a committee of three was named, "with the help of Mr. Holly,. . .to order where this fence at Shiphand may most conveniantly be set."

Greenwich Early Records contain a few entries involving John Holly. On 20 September 1659 he witnessed a deed to William Hubbert (ibid.: 4); and on 14 March 1669/70 he was a witness to the conveyance by which Daniel Patrick, as heir of his late father, Capt. Daniel Patrick, transferred to the town of Greenwich any rights he might have had in the Patrick-Feake purchase, on which property Greenwich was originally settled. The consideration given to the younger Patrick was "fifty pounds & a horse, bridle & sadle & halter" (ibid.: 14).

At a town meeting in Greenwich held 30 December 1670 it was "granted that Mr. John Holly Sen'or is exsepted of to be an inhabitant, and in order thereunto, the afore sayd mr. holly is granted liberty to take up a home lot whear hee can find it most convenient, with the aprobation of Sargent lockwood and angell huestead, who are apointed to lay it out to ye quantitee of two accrees or three" (ibid.: 15). The minutes of a town meeting held 13 days later record that "Sargant Lockwood, John Hubby, Joshua knap, John Renelds, together with mr. holley, are appointed" to survey "horseneck and land ther about" as to its suitability for "encouragement for the settleing of a township, . . .to goe forth ye seacond day to tak a survey of the aforesayd land. . .and in case any three of the first fower men do go forth it shall be as effectual as the fower, only Mr. holley is to be one if it can bee, and if the day appointed be not a comfortable son son [sic], then the first next good, comfortable day they are to atend the work" (ibid.: 16).

Greenwich persisted in trying to induce Mr. Holly to move from Stamford. A resolution was adopted 13 May 1672 at a town meeting: "that parsell of land in the nut plain which was formarly Joseph Meads, the sayd parsell of land is granted unto mr. holley to mak a home lot of, uppon this condition, that mr. holley do com and be a personall inhabitant in ye settleing of ye above sayd land, and it to be within a twelve months tim, and that if mr. holley pleas to accept of this grant as above, then the formar grant of a hom lot unto mr. holley is to cease" (Greenwich Early Records: 20). Almost a year later, on 27 March 1673, "the conditions of yt grant of ye nutt plain unto mr. holly is now relinckwisht and the grant of ye nutt plaine is to stand firm and good to mr. holley, and what condition was inserted in ye grant by ye town in ye 13 of May 72 is now made voide, meaning only that condition of mr. holleys personall settleing ye nutt plain."

Mr. Holly may have temporarily succumbed to the blandishments of Greenwich, for the town minutes of May 1675 record that "mr. holly is chosen to manag and oder ye business respecting what lots ar to be drawn" in the allotment of the land between the Mianus and Byram Rivers, and south of the Westchester Path. Nevertheless, in the only deed recorded in Greenwich Land Records, 1:19, in which he was a principal, John Holly Sr. "of Stanford. . .set over" to Joseph Ferris of Greenwich, on 14 May 1679, the land in Greenwich which had been unconditionally granted to him by the town.

In 1656 John Holly and John Waterbury took the inventory of the estate of Vincent Simkins (Huntington's History, op. cit.: 42) and in the following year John Holly and Richard Law inventoried the estate of Clement Buxton (Jurisdiction, op. cit.: 293). With Daniel Scofield, John witnessed the 1660 will of George Stokey of Stamford (ibid.: 486), and in 1669 Holly was one of the witnesses to Daniel Scofield's will (Stamford Town Records, 1:118).

A listing of Stamford proprietors stating their intention of using the town's horse pasture, dated 22 April 1667, shows John Holly as registering one horse.

Cornelius Jones Sr. of Stamford, presumed to have been the father-in-law of Hannah (Sherwood) (Bradley) Jones, was addicted to strong drink, as noted in the Francis Bradley section herein. His fourth official offense was recorded ibid. under date of 26 March 1667: "In ye night, a complaynt ag't Cornilues Jons sen'er, by Jon Holly [one of the townsmen], of ye s'd Jons miscaring of hemself in abusing his wif and his neighbors in ye night tim, ye s'd Jons being over com w't drink, in so much y't he was bereaved of his understanding and void of reason, as appeared by his words and caridges, witnessed by Eleaser Slawson and Obadiah Selly, and confesed by ye s'd Jons." No account of his punishment appears in the record.

Stamford Land Records show purchases of land by John Holly from Richard Hardy in 1645, William Newman (1647), Thomas Sherwood (1648), Francis Bell (1661) and from the estate of John Pettit Sr. (1664), and grants to him from the town of Stamford in 1651, 1672 and 1681. Additionally, Stamford Town Records reveal Mr. Holly requesting the grant of a house lot in 1675, his being granted one in 1677, and on 1 February 1677/8 the meeting minutes state, "Ye town grants that Mr. Holy and Jonathan Bells hous lots shall lye next to Sam'l Weeds on ye west of his lot."

In March 1651 Mr. Holly had a record of his real estate holdings registered in Stamford Town Records. Years later he took the precaution of recording them in Stamford Land Records, A:50:

> The housing & lands of John Holly Senior, colected out of ye ould Booke of Records, with ye bounds & buttes as they stand therein recorded to him Anno. March 1651. And now this 20th of May, Anno. 1672, ye records of ye said housing & lands renewed unto ye foresaid John Holly & his forever as full evidenc of there right & title. Ye contents as followeth, viz.:

> Also three accres of meadow at Norwaton river, ye fresh hassaky meadows, so called, p'te of ye lands sold by Richard Hardy unto John Holly. . .ye 22 of October Anno. 1645.
> In Shiphan in ye East Feeld, twelve accres of upland. . . .

The two recordings are similarly worded except that there is no mention of the three acres near Noroton River and twelve acres in Shippan in the Stamford Town Records listing nor, of course, of the subsequent purchase from Francis Bell. That listing, however, includes two and one-half acres of meadow in Rocky Neck, purchased in 1650 from Edward Jessup, not recorded in the later listing in Stamford Land Records.

Despite these substantial holdings, there is no record of Mr. Holly having sold a single parcel of Stamford real estate during his lifetime. He did, however, exchange land with Joshua Hoyt in 1672 and 1680; and in 1679 John Holly conveyed properties to his sons John Jr., Samuel and Increase. On 2 April 1679 he gave to John Holly Jr. various parcels of land in Rocky Neck, Shippan and "ye Oxpaster (formerly so called)," and also one-half of his home lot containing three quarters of an acre, "reserving ye one half of ye fruit & benefit of ye orchard to ye use and benefit of me & my wife during our naturall lives" (ibid., A:75). Mr. Holly on the same day gave to his son Samuel a house and home lot of one and one-half acres and several tracts of land in Rocky Neck, North Field and in Shippan. A postscript to this deed provided, "If I shall at any time hereafter see cause to dispose to my pp. [i.e., proper] behalf, one acre & half of ye land in Rockey-neck, at southward end, yn I reserve liberty & power so to doe" (ibid., A:75). To his son Increase Holly, John on 28 July 1679 gave about six acres of upland and salt marsh in the East Field (ibid., A:76).

The General Assembly at Hartford on 14 October 1669 propounded John Holly Sr. as a freeman at Stamford (The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1665-1677: 118, by J. Hammond Trumbull).

The will of Mr. John Holly Sr. of Stamford was dated 14 April 1681 and proved 28 June 1681 (Fairfield Probate Records, 3:62). It left "unto my Dear and Loving Wiffe Mary Holly, The use of my now dwelling house and of the remainding part of my home lot," various house furnishings and parcels of land to her "use and Sole disposal, her bible. . .and thirty pounds of my personal Estate." To his son, Samuel Holly, he gave various parcels of land and confirmation of deeds of gift previously made. To sons John and Increase, land. Unto "my Son Elisha Holly, my house Lott granted by the Towne, Lying on the West Side of the Mill River, west next Sam'll Weeds Lot; and half my peece of meadows in the South feild, two Acres. . .and half the upland and point adjoyning; alsoe, my peece of upland in the South feild right, or Ten Acres," plus several other minor parcels. To his son Jonathan Holly he left "the house I dwell in, and the garden and Land between the barn and the Street; and the peece of upland in Rocky Neck," and other tracts of land. Also, "he paying Twenty pound to my Estate, then I give him the barn and grass Lot behind the barn, when Twenty pounds he Shall pay within Two years after he is possest of the said barn and Lot." The testator bequeathed 12 pounds, in addition to what they had already been given, to each of his daughters, Elizabeth Turney, Bethia Weed and Hannah Hoit, and to his daughter Abigail he left the sum of 20 pounds. His wife, Mary, was named sole executrix.

The will was witnessed by Abraham Ambler and Francis Bell, and signed by "John Holly Sen." The inventory of his estate, appraised at a value of £312:01:06 (a very substantial amount, considering the previously made gifts of property to his sons), was made 14 June 1681 by Francis Bell, Abraham Ambler and Daniel Westcott, and given to the Probate Court upon oath by the widow (ibid., 3:79).

Mary Holly, widow of John Holly and executrix of his estate, in 1687 gave to "my two sons in law, viz., Samuel Hait & Jonas Weed, as part of their portion," a tract of land to be laid out in the ox pasture based upon her late husband's right of a £99:15:00 taxable estate assessment (Stamford Land Records, A:161). In 1692 "Mrs. Mary Holly, widow, being execatrixe to ye will of her husbande, Mr. John Holly, deseased, doth order & dispose as part of legacy unto her daughter, Abigail Cross, & now record unto her A sartain parsell of medow containing three acres lying in Noroton fresh medows, called the round fresh medow" (ibid., A:113). Mary signed both deeds with her mark.

On 31 August 1695 Sarah Newman, widow of Daniel Newman, agreed with her "Brothers" Thomas Newman (Daniel's brother), David Waterbury (husband of Daniel's sister Sarah), and Increase and John Holly (husbands respectively of Daniel's sisters Elizabeth and Hannah), to convey to them her rights to lands and meadows, with the house, barn and all appurtenances, all formerly belonging to her late husband, except "two acres of fresh medow in & nere the littell fresh medow," in exchange for the life use of the house and lot, one acre of meadow and part of the barn, the four men agreeing to shingle the house and repair the barn (ibid., A:254). Three months later the four men agreed to divide Daniel's estate (ibid., A:268).

John (2) Holly and his wife Mary had nine known children. Dates shown parenthetically are taken from a manuscript entitled Holly Family in America, compiled prior to 1861 by Charles Moses Holly and deposited with The Ferguson Library, Stamford. References shown parenthetically, unless otherwise noted, are to Stamford Town Records:

i. Samuel Holly, for many years the town clerk of Stamford, was born about 1642, for he died there 13 May 1709, aged 68 years (1:74). On 25 June 1668 he married Mary Close (1:102), daughter of Goodman and Elizabeth Close. Mary Holly, widow, died 7 April 1714 (1:126). Ancestors of J.A. Close, a typescript by Joseph A. Close owned by The Ferguson Library, deduces quite reasonably that Goodman Close's given name was John since Greenwich Early Records reveal the 14 July 1699 marriage of a "John Close Second." Mr. Close also notes that Mary, widow of Samuel Holly, died 7 April 1714, aged 72, so was born about 1642.

ii. (Capt.) Increase Holly, born (20 August 1643), died 20 May 1732, the entry identifying him as "Capt. Increase Holly" (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:21). On 2 April 1679 he married (1:113) Elizabeth Newman, born about 1654, who died 5 December 171- (1:143) or (5 December 1713, aged 59), daughter of William and Elizabeth Newman of Stamford and sister of Hannah Newman, who married Increase's brother John.

iii. Elizabeth Holly, born say, 1646, married (Capt.) Robert Turney, q.v., baptized 13 June 1663 at Fairfield, who died there about January 1690, son of Benjamin and Mary (Odell) Turney of Fairfield (The American Genealogist, 13:142; 14:224).

iv. John Holly Jr., born (3 November 1649), died 22 September 1716 (1:108). On 2 April 1679 he married Hannah Newman (1:54), born 29 January 1657/8 (1:74), died 24 January 1712 (Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths of Stamford Families: 42, by the Rev. E. B. Huntington). She was a daughter of William and Elizabeth Newman of Stamford and a sister of Elizabeth Newman who married John's brother Increase. This is an instance of a double wedding of two brothers to two sisters.

v. Hannah Holly was born 18 April 1651 (Bates, Selleck and Allied Families of Stamford, Norwalk and Fairfield, Conn.: 155, a typescript by Henry S. Gorham at The Ferguson Library, Stamford). She died 7 December 1710 (1:130). On 16 November 167- (1:113) or (16 November 1672) Hannah married (Deacon) Samuel Hoit or Hoyt, q.v., son of Simon and Susanna (Smith) Hoyt.

vi. Bethia Holly, born (6 January 1655), married 16 November 167- (1:113) or (16 November 1672), Jonas Weed Jr., q.v., son of Jonas and Mary Weed. As did their brothers Increase and John, Bethia and Hannah solemnized their marriages in a double wedding ceremony. Bethia Weed, widow, died 29 December 1713 (1:126).

3. vii. Elisha Holly, born 6 March 1659/60 (1:74).

4. viii. Jonathan Holly, born 1 March 1661/2 (1:98).

ix. Abigail Holly, born about 1665, was mentioned in her father's will. According to Gorham's Allied Families, op. cit.: 150, 150a, she married Nathaniel Cross, who died 28 October 1714

(1:126). History and Genealogy of the Families of Old Fairfield, 1:167, gives Nathaniel's first wife as Abigail, surname unknown. Nathaniel married second, 6 November 1696, Hannah Knapp (1:104).

3. ELISHA HOLLY, son of John (2) Holly and his wife, Mary, of Stamford, Connecticut, was born there 6 March 1659/60 (Stamford Town Records, 1:74) and died there 28 October 1719 (ibid., 1:132). On 2 December 1686 he married Martha Holmes (ibid., 1:130), q.v., daughter of Stephen and Martha Holmes of Stamford.

Elisha Holly served the town of Stamford in many capacities. In 1689 he was one of two agents named to dispose of corn owned by the town. That same year, and again in 1692, he was made one of two collectors of the tax levied to pay Mr. John Bishop, the minister. Elisha was elected a pounder in 1687 and 1690; fence viewer, 1689-90, 1709 and 1715; constable, 1694; townsman, 1695, 1700 and 1704-8; surveyor of highways, 1698; lister, 11 times between 1702 and 1714; collector of town taxes, 1707; town clerk, pro tem., twice in January 1709, and three months later the town minutes state: "Elisha Holly is chosen town clerk & recorder for ye time being & during ye pleasure of s'd town, who was sworn accordingly"; sealer of weights and measures, 1711, and moderator of the town meeting held 20 April 1719, the year of his death. Additionally, Mr. Holly was named an auditor in 1700, 1703 ("to adiate or probaters [i.e., to audit or verify] of ye bills where the town are charged debters"), 1704, 1706 ("to take account of ye money rate formerly raised in ye towne for armes"), and in 1715 ("to auditt & clear accompts with ye town treasurrer, collect'r or any other persons or person with whome there is remaining any money due or belonging to ye said town"). In 1713 his name appears in the records as a justice of the peace.

Elisha Holly was frequently called upon to serve Stamford as a committeeman. He was named to committees requested to lay out or to correct layouts of land, highways or fences twelve times between 1687 and 1718; to supervise the allotment of land to individual proprietors, 1698, and to consider requests for land grants in 1701. Elisha Holly and two others were designated in 1699 "to examin and se whether or no there hath bine no wrong dun in peoples takeing up more land the' they should have dun for their heads right & medow wrights, according to laying out of Newfield." A "head right" was the claim a man had to a distribution of commonage when such right was to be based on the number of "heads" in his household (sometimes including livestock) rather than on the assessed value of his taxable property, the customary method; a "meadow right" was a claim to an allotment of meadow land as distinguished from other types of land (swamp, upland, woodland, etc.).

One month after its formation this committee was authorized by the town to use all lawful means of recovering from individuals any excess acreage taken up by them in the Newfield, and in the following month to prosecute any inhabitant found guilty of so doing. In 1704 Mr. Holly was one of a committee of five to investigate "exstravegant mesurs of lands," and in 1706 he was on a committee charged with investigating the two divisions of the Long Lots and to correct inequities, "upon ye encouragement of three shillings p' day to be paid to each member."

In 1700 Elisha Holly and one other man were asked to decide whether or not Stony Brook, Middlesex parish, Stamford, was suitable for a fulling mill. One year later Elisha was placed on a committee asked to treat with the Indians and purchase land. He was on another in 1708 "to prosecue those that have not theire fences vewed aboute theire closes acording to ye towns voate."

Mr. Holly became involved in the Stamford-Norwalk boundary dispute. In 1709 the town, "by vote, agree to deffend Jonath. Bates in his right of land where he now lives, against Norwake town, & do choose. . .Mr. Jonath Bates & Elisha Holly as plenepotentiaries in behalf of s'd town [i.e., Stamford] to defend ye s'd land or any other land on ye west side of five mile river yt may be controverted by Norwake town." Mr. Elisha Holly and two others were appointed to represent the town in claims relating to the boundary dispute with Norwalk, the appointment being confirmed at a town meeting held 10 March 1712/3. Two years later the committee was empowered "to mannage ye case depending between ye towns of Stamford & of Narwalk. . .[and] to prosecute in ye law all or any such persons or person as do or shall improve any of ye lands. . .lying between five miles river & ye perambulation line, so called."

Elisha Holly was put on a committee in 1701 "to gett ye worke done of making galeries or conveniencies in ye metting house, for seating." At that same meeting he was named to another committee "to seate people anew in ye meeting house," and on 28 June 1710 "Mr. Elisha Holly" was one of five charged with a like responsibility. This was the first instance found in local records of his being dignified with the title of respect, "Mr." Thereafter he was so styled in local records.

Chopping firewood was apparently considered undignified for men of the cloth, for ministers were invariably provided with a supply as a part of their compensation. Elisha Holly was named to committees of two charged with supervising the provision of firewood for the Rev. Mr. John Davenport in 1700, and 1703-6. Mr. Holly was in 1715 asked to serve with two others to settle an unspecified misunderstanding between the town and Mr. Davenport.

In 1704 Elisha Holly was named with two others "to treat with & agree with a person to keep schoole this yeare."

Stamford Town Records, 1:208, has an entry for "Elisha Holly, his father's ear mark, viz., a halfe peny under ye offe ear & an [illegible] s'd half peny under ye same ear. June 1681."

The records of a Town Court sitting 16 April 1686 in Stamford tell of a suit brought by "Jonas Seelly, plantife, ag'st Elisha Holly, defendant; entre his action to ye damage of 15 s. [number of pence illegible] damage; we find for the plantiff and ye defendant to pay two shillings in oats to [the] estate of Obadiah Seely, deseased, w'ch Jonas Seely is to receive as overseer."

In 13 of the semiannual sessions from 1700 to 1714, Stamford elected Elisha Holly as its deputy, sometimes alone and sometimes with one other, to represent the town in the General Assembly at Hartford (The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1689-1706, 1706-1716, by Charles J. Hoadly).

The General Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut appointed Mr. Elisha Holly in May 1704 to a committee of five "to auditt the Colonie accounts with the Treasurer." He was reappointed in 1708, 1709 and 1711. In the October 1711 session the General Assembly appointed "Peter Burr, Esq., forthwith to assist the gentlemen now upon the audit of the Colonys accompts with the treasurer, in the room and stead of Mr. Elisha Holly, who is sick and not able to attend it." Mr. Holly had been chosen at the May session as one of the seven Justices of the Peace for Fairfield County, a position he appears to have filled for some years (ibid.).

The May 1711 session of the legislature also adopted a resolution that "Mr. Elisha Holly, Mr. Samuell Hanford and Mr. John Ambler are appointed to return the thanks of this Assembly to the Reverend Mr. Stephen Buckingham for his good service in preaching the election sermon, and also to request of him a copy thereof, that it may be printed."

Stamford Land Records include many deeds in which an Elisha Holly was a principal. Assuming that all such deeds not identified by indexing or analysis and dated after 10 November 1708 (when Elisha Jr. attained his majority) relate to Elisha Jr., his father was grantor in 37 and grantee in 47 deeds and 12 layouts by the town during the period 1682 to 1719.

Of interest is the conveyance in 1692 from Elisha Holly to his father-in-law, "Stephen Homs" of Stamford, of one acre of meadow "commonly called the Reedy hole" (ibid., A:230). In 1703 Samuel Holmes of Stamford granted one acre of meadow in Shippan to his brother-in-law, Elisha Holly (ibid., A:379). Elisha in 1713 "granted unto my respected son in law, Cary Leeds, & martha his wife, in part of his & her portion of my estate, a certain parcel or tract of land. . .eastward of noroton River. . .containing by measure, Ruff & smooth, fiveteen or Twenty acres or more, be it more or less" (ibid., B:203). Four months before his death Elisha, on 24 June 1719, "of my own free will & Fatherly affection towards my son Israel Holly of s'd Stanford, do give. . .a certain tract or parcel of Land. . .near Amblers Ridge . . .forth [sic] acres" (ibid., B:343). This land had been laid out to Elisha in 1700 (ibid., A:230). Other layouts from the town to Elisha Holly included 1 1/2 acres, 23 rods on Long Neck, 1688; 21 acres, 3 roods in Amblers Ridge, 1700; 27 1/2 acres beside Pine Brook, 1699 and 1700; 2 acres near Elbow Plain, 1709; 30 acres between the Mianus and Mill Rivers and below the Eight-mile Line, 1710; 2 acres on the east side of Stony Brook, 1715, and 1/2 acre near the Little Fresh Meadow, 1717. Additionally, recorded in Stamford Town Records under date of 5 March 1699/1700, was a grant by the town to Elisha Holly of 6 acres of land.

On 30 May 1716 Elisha Holly gave two acres on the east side of Stony Brook and below the Country Road to the town of Stamford (ibid., B:498), and in the following March conveyed to the town one-half acre near the Little Fresh Meadows, "on this proviso, yt said parcel of Land Ly comon & be to ye publick benefit & advantage of ye Inhabitants of s'd town" (ibid., B:310). These gifts were referred to in the minutes of town meetings held 8 December 1722 (Item 36) and 18 December 1722 (Item 40):

> P. vote, ye town do bind themselves to defend that part of land sequestered by Mr. Elisha Holly that lyes on ye north part of ye littel fresh medows. . . .the town do impower the townsmen or any three of them to agree with Joshua Scofield and to exchaing that peac of land which Mr. Elisha Holly sequestered to ye use of the town on the Easte side of Stoney Brook, as allso a peac of salt marsh on the east side of Richard Scofields mill pond, for ye convenancie of a highway down to Scofields mill or any other way which may be for the best benefit of the town.

The will of Elisha Holly, dated 7 October 1719, was proved 2 January 1719/20 (Fairfield Probate Records, 6:83):

> . . .to my dear and loveing wife, Martha, the use of my house and halfe the Orchard and corn lott as Low as it was planted last year; the use of half my barn & Stouer in it, And all the dung about it; the use of one third of all my field land and meadow and woodland, all my cattell, Jades, Sheep and Swine. . .all my household goods of all Sorts, all the money that is with me, my Smallest plow and pitch fork, my cart, boxes and hoops and all my wheat upon the ground. . .all my turnups, all my corn in the Chamber, & tabaco and all my wheat in Eliphelets barn, And all my oats in my own barn.

mothers decease, all my Mansion house and barn, the Residue of homestead. . .my Orchard and Swamp att the bottom [and twelve described tracts of land] . . . .also a gun that he has of mine. . . .

Also, I give unto my Son Elisha, one acre of Land in the plains Joining to that formerly mentioned; also the house & lott in the South Street that was Samuell Hollys; this last I give him to encourage him to repair the barn and house his mother lives in. . . .

The legacy to his son Eliphalet consisted of land and a gun. Son Elnathan received five parcels of land with the buildings thereon, and "A gun that is called Granedeer gun." To his son Israel he left, in addition to previously made gifts of land, a gun and a two-year-old heifer. Besides what had formally been given to them, Elisha's eldest daughter, Martha Leeds, received five shillings, and daughter Abigail Holly, three lots, household utensils and "A cow that has been in the woods this year that is dry." His daughter Sarah was to have, at the age of 18 years or upon marriage, 12 pounds in money, a tract of land, a brass kettle and a cow, and his granddaughter, Elizabeth Waterbury, upon the same conditions, was to receive a tract of land. Elisha named his wife, Martha, as his sole executrix.

The three witnesses appeared 27 October 1719 before Joseph Bishop, Justice of the Peace, and swore they saw "Mr. Elisha Hawley" sign his will, and on the same day Mr. Holly acknowledged before Justice Bishop that the instrument was his free act and deed.

The "Inventory of the Estate of Mr. Elisha Holly, who deceased Octo'r 27th [sic] 1719," was taken and appraised 2 February 1719/20 by John Hait and John Bell. Included with the usual farm implements and household furnishings were a large number of tracts of land, "A bible dixonary and other book, £3. . .4 guns, £7. . .3 old guns, £2. . .2 Swords, £1. . .14 lb. ledd, £7. . .7 Silver Spoons, £4:07:05; £11:5:7 Silver Money; p'r Silver Shoe Bukles, 10s.," etc., a total of £1,594:13:03, an exceptionally large estate for that period. The inventory was approved by the Probate Court 29 June 1720 and ordered recorded (ibid., 6:88-9).

A receipt dated 1 July 1725 was recorded ibid., 8:29. "Elisha Holly, Eliphelet Holly, Elnathan Holly, Israel Holly, Cary Leeds in Right of his wife, Joseph Whiting in Right of his wife, Eliphalet Seely in Right of his wife, all of Stanford, . . .Children & heirs of our Hon'd Mother, Mrs. Martha Holley, late of Stanford, deceased, . . .acknowledge, . . .Each of us, to have received our full, just & Equall Part & proportion of our s'd Mother's Estate. . . ." The receipt was signed by each of the men but not by their wives, and witnessed by Charles Bishop and Andrew Bishop.

Elisha (3) Holly and his wife, Martha Holmes, had 10 children. Unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references for events dated prior to 1723 are to Stamford Town Records, and subsequent to 1722 are to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

5. i. Elisha Holly Jr., born 10 November 1687 (1:130).
   ii. Eliphalet Holly, born 29 March 1690 (1:130), died 28 October 1744 (1:63). He married, in 1714, Mercy Penoyer (1:145), born 28 September 1693 (1:131), daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Knapp) Penoyer. The inventory of Eliphalet's estate was filed 2 May 1749 by his former wife, "Mercy Holly, alias Gregory" (Stamford Probate Records, 2:9).
   iii. Martha Holly, born 28 December 1691 (1:130), was married by her father, Elisha Holly, J.P., to Cary Leeds on 10 December 1713 (1:129). Cary died 7 June 1730 (1:15).
   iv. Elizabeth Holly, born 28 January 1693/4 (1:130), died 2 November 1717 (1:138). On 26 April 1716 she married Thomas Waterbury (1:106), born 12 May 1687, died 18 July 1758, son of John Waterbury, q.v., and his wife, Mary. Thomas' unidentified second wife died 18 September 1730 and he married third, Hannah, born 23 March 1700/1, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Gold?) Finch and widow of Joseph Hoyt (The American Genealogist, 27:241, 245).
   v. Elnathan Holly, born 20 March 1696 (1:130). On 2 April 1717 he sold to his father a house, five-acre lot and barn "which I had of Cary Leeds. . .on ye Great plains, so called, east of noroton River" (Stamford Land Records, B:294).
   vi. Israel Holly, born 16 January 1697/8 (1:130). He married, 25 February 1724/5, Sarah Cross (1:4), born 15 November 1705, daughter of Nathaniel and Hannah (Knapp) Cross (1:133).
   vii. Abigail Holly, born 8 June 1700 (1:130), married on 21 April 1720, Joseph Whiting (1:96). Abigail, wife of Joseph, died 2 May 1733 (1:23) and was buried in the Noroton, Connecticut, cemetery. Joseph married second, on 25 January 1733/4, Hannah Beachgood, who died in May 1786, aged 85, and was buried in the same cemetery. Joseph died 6 August 1757, aged 65, and was interred beside the graves of his two wives (Gorham's Allied Families, op. cit.: 293). In his Holly manuscript at the Long Island Historical Society's library, William A. Eardeley identifies Joseph Whiting as a son of Joseph and Rebecca (Prescott) Whiting.
   viii. John Holly, born 20 November 1702, died 8 December 1702 (1:130).

ix. Mary Holly, twin, born 5 May 1705, died three days later (1:130).

x. Sarah Holly, twin, born 5 May 1705 (1:130), married on 10 December 1724, Eliphalet Seely (1:3), who died 3 May 1784, aged 83 years, and was buried in the Old Parade Ground Cemetery, New Canaan, Connecticut. He was a son of Jonas and Mary Seely. Beside his grave is that of Sarah, "relict of Lieutenant Eliphalet Seely, died 1 March 1785: aged 81." Charles M. Holly in his Holly Family, op. cit., incorrectly identifies the subject Sarah Holly as the one of that name who married Obediah Seely 20 December 1727 (1:9), but the receipt dated 1 July 1725 and quoted above settles the matter.

4. JONATHAN HOLLY, son of John (2) Holly and his wife, Mary, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 1 March 1661/2 (Stamford Town Records, 1:98). He died there 12 October 1712 (ibid., 1:138). On 2 December 168- (ibid., 1:101) or 2 December 1686 (Huntington's Registration, op. cit.: 41) he married Sarah Finch, q.v., daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Hoyt) Finch. "The ancient widow, Sarah Holly, Being in 88th year of her age, dyed January ye 16th 1750/51" (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:90).

Jonathan served in Stamford as a pounder in 1688, 1693, 1702 and 1706. He was appointed in 1689 as "packer for ye town, & to attend the work as in the law is derected," and in 1702 Jonathan "is chose packer & gager for ye yere ensuing." He was one of the two collectors of the tax for the salary of the Rev. John Bishop in 1693, and was also made a lister in that year. In 1702 and 1710 Jonathan was a surveyor of highways "northward," and was appointed a viewer of fences in Rocky Neck, 1706.

On 18 December 1695 Jonathan Holly and Nathaniel Cross purchased from the town of Stamford, for five shillings, six pence, "ye fort gates, ye wheels of ye great guns, & all the woodwork belonging to ye guns." Jonathan was in 1697 one of those agreeing to postpone the laying out of the Long Lots.

The list of taxable estates "belonging to ye proper inhabitance in Stanford," recorded 28 January 1701/2 in Stamford Land Records, A:376, included that of Jonathan Holly, appraised at £58:10:00.

"Jonathan Holly, his eare marke is two hapencs under ye neare eare & one on the fore side of the off eare; entered ye 14th of Desember 1702."

In comparison with his brother Elisha, Jonathan participated in relatively few real estate transactions. He appears as the grantor in 12 and grantee in 4 deeds, engaged in 1 exchange of land, and was the recipient of 7 layouts of land from the town during the period 1682 to 1710. His layouts included allotments of 9 acres beside Noroton River in 1684; 1 1/4 acres, 8 rods on Long Neck, 1688; 1/2 acre, 16 rods, in the Fresh Meadows, 1688; 19 acres on the west side of Noroton River, 1701; "six acres & a roode & some rods of land south of Hekquch Hill," 1701, and 19 acres "at Shitten plaine," with rectification to 31 1/2 acres of land laid out "at or on ye south east side of a hill called Hecquess," in 1707.

An additional layout to Jonathan Holly, in 1710, was recorded twice in Stamford Land Records, B:320 and 509, described as 7 acres on the west side of Noroton River, of which 3 acres were on account of the right of John Holly Sr., and 4 on the right of Samuel Hait, smith, in the right of his father, Joshua Hait. It is not clear how Jonathan Holly became entitled to this Hait right. The index to the land records does not reveal any such purchase by Jonathan, and it could not have come to him by descent, for Joshua Hait was not an ancestor of either Jonathan or his wife.

In 1695 Jonathan (4) Holly conveyed to his brother, John Holly Jr., "my half of the home lot granted to me by my father" (ibid., A:268 and 276).

Jonathan Holly died intestate 12 October 1712, and an inventory of his estate was taken 11 November 1712 by Joseph Holly, Elisha Holly and Samuel Finch (Fairfield Probate Records, 5:262). In addition to the usual farm and household items, the estate included various tracts of land appraised at £257; livestock and grain, £61; looking glass, 6 pence; two Bibles, £1, and old books, 5 shillings. The total value was estimated to be £375.

The probate record states, "There is Surviving the widow and 8 Children, the Eldest Son, Jonath' Holly, upward of 25 years; ther Son Charles Holly, 19 years; the 3'd Son, David, Son [sic], His age 17 years; the 4th Son, Jabez Holly, aged 13 years; the 5th Son, Increase Holly, aged 9 years; the 6th Son, Nath'll, 4 years old; the Eldest Daughter, Sarah, aged 22 years, the 2'd daughter, Deborah, aged 7 years."

Sarah Holly, the widow, appeared 30 June 1713 before Elisha (3) Holly, J.P., and swore to the completeness of the inventory. The Court of Probate approved the inventory and appointed Jonathan Holly and his widowed mother as administrators of the estate on 1 July 1713. The Probate Court on 3 March 1713/4 ordered distribution:

> the widow to have one third part of the houseing and Lands during her naturall life, and one third part of the moveable estate. . .forever; and there being eight Children of the s'd dec'd: Six Sons and two daughters, the eldest Son to have A double portion and the rest of the children to have equall and Single portions of the S'd Estate, and the Court do desire and appoint Mr. Elisha Holly and Mr. John Holly, Cooper, to distribute the said Estate according to the above order of Court.

Stamford Land Records reveal the details of only three distributions of Jonathan Holly's estate by Elisha Holly and John Holly, distributors. All were dated 6 April 1714 and recorded ibid., B:335, 346 and C:174, each being noted to the effect that the widow's one-third interest in the lands was reserved for her use during her life. Jonathan Jr. received property appraised at £67:16:00, and David and Deborah were each given assets valued at £33:18:00.

Jonathan (4) Holly and his wife, Sarah Finch, had ten children. Unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references for events dated prior to 1723 are to Stamford Town Records, and subsequent to 1722, to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Jonathan Holly Jr., born 16 August 1687 (1:120), married 25 April 1717, Sarah Buxton (1:145), q.v., daughter of Clement and Judith Buxton.

ii. Sarah Holly, born 4 December 1690 (1:120), died unmarried 18 December 1733 (1:24).

6. iii. Charles Holly, born 21 April 1694 (1:120).

iv. David Holly, born 16 January 1695/6 (1:120), died 1 April 1751 (1:91). He married twice; first, on 10 May 1722, Margery Webb (1:112), who died 19 April 1742 (1:55). David married second, at Norwalk, Connecticut, 28 July 1743, the widow Sarah Little of Norwalk (1:73).

v. Bethiah Holly, born 4 February 1697/8, died 20 January 1698/9 (1:120).

vi. Jabez Holly, born 20 November 1699 (1:120), died 11 February 1782, aged 82, and was buried in St. John's Episcopal Church Cemetery, Stamford. On 9 November 1727 he married Waitstill Clason (1:37), q.v., daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Denham) Clason.

vii. John Holly, twin, born 2 December 1703, died 20 December 1703 (1:120).

viii. Increase Holly, twin, born 2 December 1703 (1:120).

ix. Deborah Holly, born 11 March 1705/6 (1:120). The will of Deborah Holly was dated 4 June 1776, signed by her mark and recorded 11 December 1776 in Stamford Probate Records, 5:434. She left "unto my Brother Nathaniel Holly Ten Pounds . . .which I order my Executor to pay my said Brother's debts with. . . .unto my two loving Cousins, namely, to Elizabeth Ayres, wife to Ebenezer Ayres, and Sarah Scofield, Wife to John Scofield, all the remainder of my Estate to be their own forever. I do nominate and ordain Ebenezer Ayres, Executor. . . ."

The witnesses were Abraham Scofield Jr., Thomas Scofield and Benjamin Weed. "Cousins" was used here in the then common usage of "nieces." Elizabeth, wife of Ebenezer Ayres, q.v., and Sarah, wife of John Scofield, q.v., were daughters of Deborah's brother Charles.

x. Nathaniel Holly, born about 1708. His birth is not of record but he was called the 6th (surviving) son, aged four years, in the record of the inventory of Jonathan's estate, taken 11 November 1712 (Fairfield Probate Records, 5:262). Nathaniel was baptized 21 May 1758 as an adult at Stamford's St. John's Episcopal Church. He was still living in 1776 when he was named as a legatee in the will of his sister Deborah.

5. ELISHA HOLLY, JR., son of Elisha (3) Holly and his wife, Martha Holmes, was born 10 November 1687 (Stamford Town Records, 1:130), and died 14 May 1752 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:96). On 24 January 1716/7 Elisha was married to Rebecca Bishop (Stamford Town Records, 1:106), q.v., daughter of Stephen and Mercy Bishop. Inscribed on a wall of St. John's and St. Andrew's Episcopal Cemetery, Stamford, are memorials to Elisha Holly, died 14 May 1752, aged in his 65th year, and to Rebecca, relict of Elisha Holly, died 23 November 1757, aged in her 65th year.

Elisha Holly Jr. was elected one of two sheepmasters in the years 1704, 1705 and 1706. In the latter year the minutes of a sheep owners meeting note, "It is voat that ye sheepe masters shall take diligent care aboute the flock, yt they be not hurried two great a travill, & that they goe not two longe one way" (Stamford Town Records, 1:378). Elisha was named pounder for Shippan in 1710 and 1711, and for the East Field in 1715. Two years later Elisha Holly Jr. was appointed as one of two grand jurors, and was again so honored in 1726. He was a fence viewer for the East Field in 1719 and 1736, and in 1720 was elected "counstable for ye year insuing, and he is ordered to collect ye country rate."

The name of Elisha Holly appears on the 30 March 1734 list of Stamford freemen.

Assuming all Stamford deeds in which an Elisha Holly was a principal, not identified by indexing or analysis as Elisha Sr., and dated subsequent to 10 November 1708 (when Elisha Jr. became of age), to have been those of Elisha (5) Holly, he was the grantor in 29 and grantee in 33 deeds, and the recipient of four layouts, from 1708 to 1751. Additionally, not recorded in Stamford Land Records, was a grant to him of a piece of land at a town meeting held 14 December 1713. Only two deeds are of interest. Elisha purchased from his brother, Israel Holly, 5 acres in the East Field in 1721 and 10 acres on the east side of Amblers Ridge in 1729 (ibid., B:411, C:169).

Elisha Holly's will was dated 18 April 1752 and proved 9 July 1752. For some reason not explained (perhaps overlooked by the probate clerk for 22 years), it and the inventory were not recorded until 20 April 1774 (Stamford Probate Records, 5:170-2):

> . . .all the grain or meat, meal, fat and Soap Left By me In my house at my Decease, Shall Not Be Inventoried, But Shall Be for the use of my famyly & my Son Stephen, under the Care of my Loving Wife, Rebeccah, & the Remainder I give & Dispose of In the following manner. . . .unto my Loving Wife, Rebeccah, the one third part of my personal or movable Estate, to be her own absolutely and forever; and ye use & Improvement of the one half of my mansion house wherein I Now Dwell, and of ye one half of my Barn, and the one half of my homsted and the one third Part of my Land and meadow In the East fild, and the one third part of my interest In the Southern Commons or Sequest Land, So Called, S'd houseing and Lands Being all in Stamford afors'd. I say, the use and Improvement of them So Long as She Shall Remain my Widow. . . .

To his eldest daughter, Elizabeth Holly, he left £387:10:00, and to his daughter Abigail Holly, £337:10:00. In addition to what he had formerly given them, he made bequests of £50 to each of his married daughters: Rebecca, wife of Nathaniel Waterbury; Martha, wife of Ezekiel Smith, and Mercy, wife of Samuel Lines. Elisha's eldest son, Stephen, was to receive three-fifths of the residue of his estate and his son Abraham, two-fifths. Rebecca, Elisha's wife, and their son Stephen, were made co-executors of the will.

The inventory of Elisha Holly's estate was taken 9 October 1752 by John Holly and Alexander Bishop and was presented to the Probate Court 5 December 1752. Real estate holdings, including two houses, were valued at £6,520; livestock, £418:10:00; 57 pounds of tobacco, £7:02:06; a gun, £5; a great coat, £7; a pair of leather britches, £5; a brass kettle, £8:10:00; a warming pan, £5; a pair of silver scales and weights, £1:08:00, and wheat, corn and flax, £170. The inventory shows no total, but approximated £7,500. This very large appraisal and the values shown above reflect an obvious inflation prevailing at this period.

Abraham and Stephen Holly, the surviving sons of Elisha (5) Holly, on 25 February 1757 entered into a partition agreement to divide their share of their late father's real estate (Stamford Land Records, F:357). Abraham took as his share the 301 1/2 acres of land "at a place Called the den," which land had been conveyed to them jointly on 5 February 1754 as part of their father's estate (ibid., F:47), and Stephen received "all the Remainder of S'd Estate" as his portion. On 15 January 1759 Stephen purchased from his sisters and their husbands, for £103, their rights to the real estate of their "Hounoured dec'd father, Mr. Elisha Holly, Late of Stamford" (ibid., F:356).

Elisha (5) Holly and his wife, Rebecca Bishop, had nine children. Unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references are to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Elisha Holly III, born 31 October 1717 (Stamford Town Records, 1:140). It seems certain that he was the Elisha, son of Elisha and "Elizabeth" (sic) Holly, who died 19 December 1717 (ibid., 1:138). There is no record of a marriage by Elisha (5) Holly prior to that with Rebecca Bishop, or of the death of a wife Elizabeth, or of the birth of a son prior to the 31 October 1717 birth of the subject Elisha. It appears obvious that the clerk, in recording this 19 December 1717 death, made an error in writing the mother's name.

ii. Elizabeth Holly, born about 1719. On 29 January 1749 Elizabeth Holly, aged 29 years, was baptized at St. John's Episcopal Church, Stamford. She was called "my Loving and Eldest Daughter, Elizabeth holly," in her father's will of 1752, and was then not married.

iii. Rebecca Holly, born say, 1721, for she died 23 October 1813 in her 92nd year, according to William A. Eardeley's Holly manuscript at the Long Island Historical Society's library. On 29 December 1743 she married Nathaniel Waterbury (1:68), born 2 May 1717, died 8 December 1777, son of Lt. John Waterbury and his second wife, Hannah Cross (The American Genealogist, 27:244).

iv. Martha Holly, born 28 September 1723 (1:0), was married 9 July 1747 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford, to Ezekiel Smith (1:93).

v. Elisha Holly (again), born 21 September 1726 (1:7). He was not mentioned in his father's will of 1752, and presumably died before that date, doubtless unmarried.

7. vi. Stephen Holly, born 19 October 1728 (1:12).

vii. Mercy Holly, born about 1730, married 28 February 1748/9 (1:86), Samuel Lines, son of Benjamin and Esther (Sturges) Lines (Families of Ancient New Haven: 1097, by Donald Lines Jacobus).

On 10 April 1752 Samuel Lines of Stamford sold to his brother-in-law, Stephen Holly of Stamford, for £30, "the Right of nine pounds, fifteen shillings & six pence List of Estate in the Southern Commons. . .Commonly Called ye Sequest Land, it Being a part of the Right which did originally Belong unto Daniel Scofield, Late of Stamford, deceased, according to his List of Estate, Ad. [A.D.] 1687, which I bought of Miles Scofield" (Stamford Land Records, E:462).

8. viii. Abraham Holly, born 12 January 1732/3 (1:23).

ix. Abigail Holly, born 16 June 1736 (1:31), married 29 May 1757, Israel Smith (1:145), born 9 February 1732/3 (1:22), son of Ezra and Mary (Weed) Smith. Abigail, wife of Israel Smith, died 12 April 1758 (1:145).

6. CHARLES HOLLY, son of Jonathan (4) Holly and his wife, Sarah Finch, was born 21 April 1694 at Stamford, Connecticut (Stamford Town Records, 1:120). On 16 January 1717/8 he was married to Elizabeth Bradley, (ibid., 1:145), q.v., daughter of John and Hannah (Sherwood) Bradley.

Charles Holly was appointed as a pounder for Rocky Neck in 1715 and 1718. At a town meeting held 20 December 1743 he was appointed as a surveyor of highways.

Stamford Land Records show Charles as a grantor in six deeds and a grantee in two during the years 1716 to 1728. Of interest are his sale in 1719 to Elisha Holly Sr. of a three-fourths interest in a house and 1 1/2 acre lot, described as "ye three quarter part thereof, together with ye three quarter part of ye hous thereon, & of fences, trees, well & all other priveledges" (ibid., B:357). In 1727 "Charls" Holly sold 8 1/2 acres of land on Newfield Ridge to Elisha Holly and Charles Webb for £24 (ibid., C:113).

No record of the death or probate of estate of Charles Holly has been found. Nor is any record found of a 17th or 18th century birth of a Charles Holly other than the subject one. It is therefore tentatively assumed that Charles (6) Holly was the one of that name who witnessed the 26 May 1750 will of Samuel Finch (Stamford Probate Records, 5:28); and who, on 25 May 1772, with John Holly, took the inventory of the estate of Nathan Selleck of Stamford, deceased (ibid., 3:505), although Charles (6) Holly would have been 78 years old in 1772. The identification seems unlikely, however.

Charles (6) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth Bradley, had five known children (unless otherwise noted, parenthetical references are to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths):

9. i. Elizabeth Holly, born 20 November 1718 (Stamford Town Records, 1:146).

ii. Jonathan Holly, born 13 June 1720 (ibid., 1:132), died unmarried 17 July 1747 at Rye Harbor (1:81). The inventory of the estate of Jonathan Holly Jr. of Stamford (called "Jr." to distinguish him from an older Jonathan Holly) was taken 12 September 1747 by John Holly and James Bell. His brother-in-law, Ebenezer Ayres, was appointed by the Probate Court to administer on his estate (Stamford Probate Records, 1:332, 338).

iii. Sarah Holly, born 28 April 1723 (1:0). On 30 December 1742 (1:56) she married John Scofield Jr., q.v., born 4 October 1716 (1:49), son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Pettit) Scofield.

In her will dated 4 June 1776, Deborah Holly, q.v., sister of Charles Holly, made a bequest "to Elizabeth Ayres, wife to Ebenezer Ayres, and Sarah Scofield, Wife to John Scofield, all the remainder of my Estate. . . ."

iv. Increase Holly, born 2 March 1726/7, died the following day (1:8).

v. Bethia Holly, born 21 April 1733 (1:23). According to William A. Eardeley's Holly manuscript at the Long Island Historical Society, Bethia married Joseph Peney in 1757.

7. STEPHEN HOLLY, son of Elisha (5) Holly and his wife, Rebecca Bishop, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 19 October 1728 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:12). He died after 22 November 1770, the date of his will, and before 4 February 1771, when an inventory of his estate was made. Stephen married twice. On 9 October 1751 he was married in Greenwich, Connecticut, to Hannah Marshall (ibid., 1:94), who died 26 May 1761 (ibid., 1:141). Stephen married second, on 19 April 1762 (ibid., 1:146), Lois Todd, q.v., daughter of the Rev. Abraham Todd (pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Greenwich, who officiated at the wedding) and his wife, Hannah Dickerman. Lois was the widow of Obadiah Mead, born 20 February 1719, son of Benjamin Mead, q.v., and his wife Sarah Waterbury (History and Genealogy of the Mead Family: 389, 414, by Spencer P. Mead).

Stephen was elected as a surveyor of highways at a town meeting held at Stamford in 1752, as a grand juryman in 1755, and as a tithingman, 1761. His death at the early age of about 42 years prevented his having a more extensive record of public service.

Stephen Holly and his wife owned (i.e., agreed to abide by) the covenant of The First Congregational Church, Stamford, 25 September 1757, and on 9 October 1757 the wife of Stephen Holly was made a new member of that church. Four years later, on 8 November 1761, Stephen became a new member.

Stamford Land Records show Stephen Holly as grantor in 19 deeds, grantee in 24, recipient of 1 layout and participating in 2 partition agreements during the years 1751 through 1769. Several of the deeds are of interest. By three of them (ibid., F:293, 294; G:10), Stephen in 1756, 1758 and 1761 purchased from his cousins, children of Eliphalet and Mercy (Pennoyer) Holly, their rights to 5 acres of land in the East Field, south of the Country Road and east of Noroton River. In 1761 Stephen bought from his brother Abraham and their sisters Elizabeth, Rebecca, Martha and Mercy, their rights to land in "Stamford, Commonly Called The Sequest Land or Southern Commons, both Divided & Undivided, which belongs to ye Estate of our Honoured Mother, Mrs. Rebecca Holly, late of Stamford, Aforesaid, Dec'd, & Descended to us As Heirs to the S'd Rebecca, Dec'd" (ibid., G:11, 20). One other deed involving relatives is of record (ibid., G:185). In 1763 Eliphalet and Sarah (Holly) Seely sold to Stephen their interest in three small parcels of land in Stamford. Sarah was Stephen's paternal aunt.

Deeds recorded in Stamford Land Records show Stephen Holly as residing in that town as late as 31 May 1763. By 14 December 1764 he was called "of Greenwich," and was so described in 16 other Stamford deeds dated on or before 10 November 1769, 10 of which were executed in the last mentioned year. Greenwich Land Records do not contain any transactions in which Stephen was a principal. He presumably moved to Cortlandt Manor, Westchester County, New York, late in 1769 or early in 1770.

The will of Stephen (7) Holly was dated 22 November 1770, proved 8 February 1771 and recorded three days later (Stamford Probate Records, 3:429):

> I, Stephen Holly of the mannor of Courtland In the County of Westchester & province of New York in America. . .unto my true & Loving wife, Loiss Holly, one third part of my moveables & the negro Girl pru, & the use of one Third of my Estate During her natural Life, and the use of the Remainder of my Estate untill my Children Come to the age of fourteen years, & as they Come to that age, their part of my Estate to be put out or Let out for their benefit till they Come of age. Item, I Give to my four Sons, Silas Holly, Stephen Holly, Isaac Holly and Jonah Holly, the rest of my Estate Excepting one Hundred Pounds New York Currency, to be Equally Divided between them, only allowing five pounds more to Silas then Either of his brethren. Item, I Give unto my two Daughters, Rebecca Holly & Hannah Holly, fivety pounds a peice, making one Hundred pounds between them both. And I do nominate, Constitute and appoint my wife, Loiss Holly, Together with my Brother, Abr'm Holly, to be the Executors of this, my Last will and testament. . . .

Stephen Holly

An inventory of Stephen's estate located in Westchester County was taken 4 February 1771 by Gould Bowton and Joseph Benedict (ibid., 3:430-2). No total was shown, but the many items aggregated about £1,132 in value, "New york money," including notes and bonds, £175:15:10; Newman's bond and interest on it, £272:10:00; others' notes, with interest, £274:13:00; Jack, the servant man, £80:00:00; the negro woman servant, £65:00:00; one desk, £3:10:00; the woman's saddle, 16 shillings; five dozen sleeve buttons, £1:08:09; the gun, £1:12:00; the brewing tub, 4 shillings; 437 lbs. of pork, £6:17:08; livestock, £106:15:00, and 32 acres of wheat on the ground, £48:00:00.

The inventory of Mr. Holly's estate situated in Greenwich was taken 6 February 1771 by Daniel Smith and Henry Mead. The £57:02:05 total included, "a Slay, £1:10:00. . .34 Sheap, 11:01:00. . .one Heifer, 2:12:06" (ibid., 3:432). .

The executors, Lois Holly and Abraham Holly, exhibited the two inventories 8 February 1771 to the Stamford Probate Court, sitting at Greenwich, which accepted them (ibid., 3:432).

In the probate file, as distinguished from the recording, is "An Inventory of the Estate of Stephen Holly, Late of Greenwich, Dec'd, who had for Sometime until not long before his Death been Resident in Cortlands Manor." The total was shown as £1,132:10:01 1/4. Another document shows the Greenwich property valued at £57:02:05, lawful money, equivalent to £76:03:02 1/4 "in Newyork money."

Lois Holly of Greenwich was on 12 May 1772 appointed by the Stamford Probate Court as guardian of "Stephen Holly, Isaac Holly, Jonah Holly & Hannah Holly, Children of Stephen Holly, Late of s'd Greenwich, Dec'd, upon her becomeing bound to s'd Judg, w'th Abr'm Holly of Stamford, in a bond of fifteen Hundred pounds" (ibid., 3:487). Abraham was the paternal uncle of the children.

On 6 July 1771 Silas Holly, son of Stephen Holly, late of Greenwich, deceased, being 14 years or more old, "made Choice of Stephen Holly of said Stamford for his Guardian" (ibid., 3:445). The recording is in error. As shown by the £500 bond in the file, Abraham Holly of Stamford, not Stephen Holly, was made "Guardian to Silas Holly, Son of Stephen Holly, late of Greenwich, Dec'd, a Minor." Silas' guardianship was correctly indexed in Volume 3.

A calculation found in the file shows a gross estate of £1,208:13:04 (£1,132:10:02 plus £76:03:02), less total debts owing by the estate, £150:13:04 (to 60 different persons, including £65:01:06 due to Nehemiah Mead), plus debts due to the estate of £13:12:00, leaving a "Clear & Divideable" estate of £1,071:12:00. This net amount, less £65:00:00 for "The negro wench, to the widow exclusive of 1/3d." (her "thirds," or legal dower) left £1,006:12:00 as "Dividable to the widow & Children." The widow's thirds amounted to £335:10:08; Silas, as eldest son, received £146:10:04; Stephen, Isaac and Jonah each received £141:10:04, and Rebecca and Hannah were given £50:00:00 each.

Stephen (7) Holly and his first wife, Hannah Marshall, had three children, their births having been recorded in Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Rebecca Holly, born 12 July 1752 (1:99).

ii. Elisha Holly, born 8 March 1755 (1:116). Charles M. Holly's Holly Family, op. cit., records a son "Eliphalet Holly" born 8 March 1754 to Stephen and Hannah, but the given name and year of birth are probably in error.

Elisha died before 22 November 1770, for he was not mentioned in his father's will of that date, nor in the distribution order of the Stamford Probate Court.

iii. Silas Holly, born before 25 September 1757, when Rebecca, Elisha and Silas were all baptized at The First Congregational Church, Stamford.

Stephen (7) Holly and his second wife, Lois (Todd) (Mead) Holly, had four children, their births having been recorded in Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

10. iv. Stephen Holly, born 12 January 1763 (1:146).

v. Isaac Holly, born 24 December 1764 (1:169). He died 9 March 1851. On 14 April 1790 Isaac married, at the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich, Sarah Reynolds, born 3 November 1767, died 2 June 1853, daughter of Joseph Reynolds (The History and Descendants of John and Sarah Reynolds: 407, by Marion H. Reynolds).

vi. Jonah Holly, born 26 November 1767 (1:169). He is said to have moved to Bedford, New York.

vii. Hannah Holly, born 11 February 1770 (1:171). She married at the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich, on 6 January 1791, James Knapp, born at Greenwich "21/27, 1764/5" (sic), died at Genoa, New York, 3 February 1847, son of Uriah and Hannah Knapp. Hannah, wife of James Knapp, died 22 October 1841 (Nicholas Knapp Genealogy: 134, by Alfred A. Knapp).

8. ABRAHAM HOLLY, son of Elisha (5) Holly and his wife, Rebecca Bishop, was born 12 January 1732/3 (Stamford Births, Marriages, and Deaths, 1:23). Charles M. Holly's unreliable Holly Family, op. cit., states he died in 1815, aged 83, but this seems unlikely, for the inventory of his estate was not taken until 1821. His will, however, was drawn in 1815. Abraham was married 12 January 1758 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:127) to Mary Webb, q.v., born 12 March 1739/40 (ibid., 1:44), daughter of John and Mary (Holmes) Webb. The record of death of his wife has not been found, but his will and the record of its probate shows she died before 15 November 1815.

Abraham served as a surveyor of highways for nine annual terms between 1771 and 1803; was a grand juror in each of the three years 1773-5, and again in 1801; lister, 1773 and 1781; selectman, 1777, and fence viewer, 1780.

In the 1767 and 1770 baptisms of his daughters, Abraham was called "of Stanwich," originally a part of Stamford, but later of Greenwich.

Among those listed in Stamford Town Records as having taken the Oath of Fidelity to the new State of Connecticut on 16 September 1777 is "Abr'm Holly."

On 7 December 1789 Abraham Holly made application "respecting a highway from branch bridge runing out by Dr. Isaac Smith's dwelling house; the town voted and directed the Selectmen to make inquiry therein and do as they may judge proper & just." The nature of the application is not stated.

Abraham Holly and his wife were members in good standing of the Stanwich Congregational Church on 25 May 1796.

Stamford Land Records show Abraham Holly as grantee in eight deeds and six mortgages, and grantor in 22 deeds during the period 1760 to 1813. As noted in the section of their father, Abraham and his brother Stephen entered into a partition agreement in 1757 respecting their late father's lands.

Deeds of interest in which Abraham was a principal include the sale in 1765 to the town of Stamford for £5 of a right of way for the construction through his property at Hunting Ridge of a highway to the Meeting House in Stanwich (G:393), and a like sale in 1800, for $11.00, of 30 rods in Long Ridge (M:474). In 1787 Abraham sold 60 acres in Hunting Ridge to his son Stephen for £75 (M:199), and three years later sold a 21-acre apple orchard in Hunting Ridge to his son Elnathan for £120 (L:528). In the year 1802, "in consideration of the affection I bear towards my son, Jared Holly of said Stamford," Abraham Holly of the same place gave 40 acres, 1 rood in Hunting Ridge to Jared, "Reserving to Myself the use and improvement therof During my Natural Life" (0:129). Abraham again deeded the same property to Jared, but without reservations, in 1812 (R:157), and in 1819 purchased from Jared, for $100, "Aboute ten Acres with the building thereon Standing" in Hunting Ridge (T:440).

Greenwich Land Records reveal only two deeds in which Abraham Holly was a principal. In 1788 he purchased, for £20, seven acres of land in Greenwich from Henry Waring of that place (13:359); and in 1792 sold to Henry Waring, for £10, about five acres at a place called Pine Swamp, in Greenwich (13:487).

The will of Abraham Holly was drawn 15 November 1815 and proved 3 September 1821 (Stamford Probate Records, 12:159-160):

> . . .unto my daughters Mary, Rebecca & Lucy, five hundred & twenty five dollars to be divided among them. . . .unto my daughter Chloe, one hundred dollars. . . .unto the children of my daughter Elizabeth, one hundred seventy five dollars, to be equally divided amongst them. Item, the residue & remainder of all my real & personal estate to be divided among my children as follows: my sons to have two parts & my daughters one part, that is, my daughters to have one half as much as my sons, & to be divided among them accordingly. Item, my son Abraham to have only the use of what I have given him during his natural life, & at his decease, to go to his children. Item, John Holly, son of my dec'd son Elnathan, to have one hundred dollars. Item, the children of my dec'd daughter to have as much as one of my other daughters, to be equally divided among them. And I. . .constitute & appoint Jared Holly, my son, as executor on this, my last will & testament.

William Scofield and Hezron Scofield took the inventory of the estate of Abraham Holly 17 September 1821. The total value, not shown but approximately £1,165, included house and land, £1,000; 1 acre of salt meadow, £30; 1 lot of books, 12 shillings, and 1 Bible, 75 shillings. The inventory was accepted by the Stamford Probate Court 20 September 1821 and ordered to be recorded (ibid., 12:182). It seems strange to find values expressed in pounds so many years after the dollar had been adopted in 1787 as the official currency of the United States.

The Stamford Probate Court on 11 April 1822 authorized Jared Holly, executor of the estate of the late Abraham Holly, to sell at public auction sufficient land to satisfy claims against the estate, aggregating $569.87, plus expenses of sale (ibid., 12:210). Two weeks later Jared reported the sale of one acre of salt meadow to William Scofield, he being the highest bidder, for $35 (sic – the consideration was reported as $25 in Stamford Land Records, U:201); and the sale of 32 acres of land lying at Hunting Ridge to William Youngs, he being the highest bidder, for $576.88 (sic – the land was described ibid., U:117, as 32 1/2 acres on the west side of Bedford Road, and the consideration as $576.38).

Distribution of the remaining estate of the late Abraham Holly was ordered 4 May 1822 by the Stamford Probate Court as follows: to Abraham Holly, eldest son, two-eleventh parts; to Stephen Holly, second son, and to Jared Holly, third son, one-eleventh part each; to Mary Pardee (eldest daughter), Rebecca Hobby (second daughter), Lucy Smith (third daughter), and "Cloe" Ingersoll (fourth daughter), one-eleventh part each, and a one-eleventh part was to go jointly to Electa Simmons, Samuel Coley and Hannah Coley, they "being the only Children of Elizabeth Coley, Dec'd, a Daughter of the Testator." The distribution was approved by the Stamford Probate Court 15 June 1822 (Stamford Probate Records, 12:222-4).

Abraham (8) Holly and his wife, Mary Webb, had ten children, their births having been recorded in Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Abraham Holly Jr. born 23 November 1758 (1:129). The pension application (S-37110) dated 26 July 1820 of "Ab'm Holley Jun'r" of Stamford, "62" years old, stated he enlisted in December 1775 in a company commanded by Capt. (Joseph) Hoyt in Col. (Charles) Webb's regiment for a term of one year, served out his time and was honorably discharged. The application stated he was destitute and unable to work, and that his wife, aged 64 years, was "from Infirmity unable to Labour." A monthly pension of $8 was awarded to him, beginning 2 April 1818.

ii. Stephen Holly, born 15 October 1760 (1:138). An indenture of interest, dated 23 October 1829, was recorded in Stamford Land Records, W:454. Andrew, John, Abraham, William, James, Clarra and Chloe Holly, and Lydia Hitchcock, Lois Dutton and Mehetable Palmer, all "Heirs of the late Stephen Holly of Westerlo, County of albany and State of New York," for $100 conveyed to "Jarard Holly of Stamford," their paternal uncle, 10 acres of land in Stamford, "in his actual possession now being."

iii. Mary Holly, born 1 April 1763 (1:147). She was called Mary Pardee, eldest daughter, in the distribution of her father's estate.

The Pardee Genealogy: 173-4, edited by Donald Lines Jacobus, gives an account of Nathaniel Pardee, born 1759 in Salem, New York, who died 22 August 1824 at Salisbury, Herkimer County, New York, son of Nathan and Sarah (Mead) Pardee. The account states that Nathaniel's wife is unknown, but she is now identified, for she was surely the subject Mary Holly. Their children were Jared, William, Chauncey and Willis Pardee, and Mary, wife of Robert Sly of Boonville, New York. On 26 February 1827 all these children conveyed land in Stamford to Silas Holly of Fairfield (Stamford Land Records, W:440). He was either the Silas Holly who was their mother's first cousin born about 1757 to Stephen (7) Holly, or their second cousin, the Silas Holly born in 1781 to Stephen (10) Holly.

iv. Elnathan Holly, born 27 August 1765 (1:172). He joined The First Congregational Church, Stamford, 17 September 1786. Elnathan died before his father drew his will in 1815, leaving a bequest to "John Holly, son of my dec'd son Elnathan."

v. Rebecca Holly, born 31 May 1767 (1:172), was baptized 5 July 1767 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford. On 8 July 1823 Rebecca Hobby, wife of Seymour Hobby, was made a new member of the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich. She was an original member in 1827 of the North Greenwich Congregational Church. On 3 May 1835 "Rebecca (Holley), wife of Seymour Hobby," was dismissed to the church in Scipio, New York.

vi. Elizabeth Holly, born 25 January 1770 (1:172), was baptized 28 March 1770 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford. She was called Elizabeth Coley, a deceased daughter, in the 1815 will of her father.

vii. Lucy Ann Holly, was called "Lusian" in the record of her birth on 2 March 1773 (1:194). She was named as Lucy Smith in the 1822 distribution of her father's estate.

viii. Jared Holly, born 14 January 1775 (1:194). Jared Holly of Hunting Ridge, Stamford, died 24 June 1849, aged 74 years, according to the register of the Long Ridge Congregational Church, of which he was a founding member on 5 July 1842.

His date of death, as shown on a gravestone in the Hunting Ridge Cemetery, however, was read as 21 June 1849, aged 71, the digit 4 apparently having been misread as 1, a common occurrence in reading eroded inscriptions.

The register of the Stanwich Congregational Church records the marriage on 24 December 1802 of Jared Holly and Polly Waring. They became members of that church on 24 June 1804.

ix. Abigail Holly, called "Abby" in the record of her birth on 14 July 1778 (Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths of Stamford Families: 44, by the Rev. E.B. Huntington).

11. x. Chloe Holly, born about 1782.

9. ELIZABETH HOLLY, daughter of Charles (6) Holly and his wife, Elizabeth Bradley, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 20 November 1718 (Stamford Town Records, 1:146). On 14 February 1739/40 she was married to Ebenezer Ayres (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:44), q.v. for the record of their children. He was a son of Richard and Abigail (Buxton) Ayres.

Elizabeth was a legatee in the will of her aunt, Deborah Holly, q.v.

10. STEPHEN HOLLY, son of Stephen (7) Holly and his second wife, Lois Todd, was born at Stamford, Connecticut, 12 January 1763 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:146). He was baptized 13 February 1763 at The First Congregational Church, Stamford. Stephen died, doubtless at Stamford, 23 March 1833. On 5 January 1780 Stephen was married to Deborah Ferris (ibid., 2:33). According to its register the marriage took place at the Second Congregational Church, Greenwich, Connecticut. Deborah's parentage has not been determined. In a pension application deposition made 13 September 1837 she stated she had been 74 years old on the 19th (or 17th) of July 1837, indicating a birthdate of 19 (or 17) July 1763 (pension claim W-21354).

Charles M. Holly's Holly Family, op. cit., incorrectly states that Deborah Ferris married Abraham Holly, son of Abraham (8) Holly, but her marriage record and her pension claim clearly prove her husband to have been Stephen Holly. He is identified as the Stephen, son of Stephen (7) Holly, by the statement in Deborah's deposition that "her husband, the said Stephen Holly, in March 1779 entered the service as a substitute for his brother, Silas Holly."

During the period 1792 to 1829 Stephen Holly was the grantor in six deeds and grantee in a like number recorded in Stamford Land Records. In eight of these deeds the principals were relatives of Stephen. In 1792 Stephen Holly of Stamford purchased from his cousin, Elnathan Holly of the same place, for £120, 20 acres in Hunting Ridge (M:200); and three years later "Stephen Holly of Cooksockee, County of Albany, State of New York" (i.e., Coxsackie), sold the same property to Abraham Holly of Stamford, his cousin, for £80, losing £40 on the transaction (N:133). In 1819 Stephen Holly of Stamford, for $124.80, sold 7 acres, 1 rood and 16 rods of land in Stamford, bordered by lands of William Scofield and Hezron Scofield, to his son-in-law, Philander Smith (T:233). (A rood equals one-fourth of an acre; 40 square rods, usually called just "rods" when area is involved, equal 1 rood.) On 19 September 1820 Stephen made two purchases from his half-brother Silas: 8 acres in North Stamford abutting lands of William Young, William Scofield and Hezron Scofield, for $120 (T:498) and, for $100, "a certain house standing in. . .Hunting ridge in the Society of Stanwich" adjoining Stephen's own land (T:498). On the following day Stephen, for "the love and affection I bear to Sammy T. Holly and Sally M. Holly, son and daughter of my son Silas Holly, all of s'd Stamford," conveyed to them "one tract of land covered by a Dwelling House and including s'd House, s'd land containing 4 roods of ground, more or less, bounded North and East by my own land, South by Highway and West by Bedford Road" (U:356). Presumably this was the dwelling he had purchased the day before. Six months later Stephen, for $100, sold 1 acre in Hunting Ridge, with the buildings thereon and including the garden on the south side of the house, to his son-in-law, Levi Sherwood (U:16). The last instrument in which Stephen was a principal was a mortgage deed to 5 acres in Hunting Ridge by which Silas Holly of Stamford (perhaps Stephen's uncle but, more probably, his son), secured debts of $34 to Hezron Scofield, $25 to Stephen Holly, both of Stamford, and $16 to Reuben Finch of Greenwich, the grantees (V:416).

There was also a Stephen Holly of Greenwich who, between 1832 and 1842, was a grantor in 8 deeds and a grantee in 10, according to the indexes to Greenwich Land Records. The first deed, dated 27 March 1832 (ibid., 22:310), was a conveyance by "Stephen Holly & Emeline A. Holly, Husband & wife, of the Town of Greenwich," and the last one was executed nine years after the death of Stephen (10) Holly. This Stephen Holly of Greenwich was doubtless the son of that name referred to in the 1849 will of Isaac Holly of Greenwich (Stamford Probate Records, 19:12-3), brother of Stephen (10) Holly.

In the 1790 Federal census of Stamford, Stephen Holly headed a household of one male aged over 15 (himself), one male under 16 (Silas) and three females (wife Deborah and daughters Sally and Phoebe).

On 16 August 1832 Stephen Holly of Stamford, aged 69 years, declared before the Stamford Probate Court in an application for a pension based on his Revolutionary War service (No. 2039), that:

> . . .in the month of March 1779 he took the place of his Brother, Silas Holly, who was an enlisted Soldier in a Company of Artillery Commanded by Lieut. Hughs, employed as Coast Guard & stationed at Horseneck [a part of present-day Greenwich]. Col. John Mead had command of the Guards on the lines at the time – The Declarant served out the Term of his Brothers enlistment (which expired in the Month of Sept'r 1779) as his Substitite – That his said Brother agreed with him, at the time, that he should take the whole bennefit of his enlistment – This Lieut. Hughs under whom he served, afterwards deserted to the enemy under this enlistment – The Declararant went frequently in the Whale boats by order of his Officers – The Whale boats were under command of Jabez Fitch. On one occasion they Captured a Schooner in East Chester Creek & killed the Capt. of the Schooner in capturing her – the Declarant was on board of the Whale Boat at the time. . . .

The remainder of the declaration, which was signed by Stephen Holly with his signature, is omitted here as it duplicates information given more completely in the deposition of his widow, reproduced in its entirety below.

Apparently Stephen's application was not fully processed before he died, for the printed form at the end of his declaration bears this notation:

> We, Daniel Smith, a clergyman, residing in the town of Stamford, and S.H. Minor, residing in the same, hereby certify that we are well acquainted with Stephen Holly, who has subscribed and sworn to the above declaration; that we believe him to be sixty nine years of age ["at the time of his death," interlined]; that he is reputed and believed, in the neighborhood where he resided [the printed word "resides" has been altered to "resided"] to have been a Soldier of the Revolution; and that we concur in that opinion.
>
> Sworn and subscribed the 27th day of July 1833.
>
> Daniel Smith
> S.H. Minor

Isaac Holly of Greenwich also deposed 16 August 1832 before the court that his brother Stephen was taken prisoner by the Refugee Light Horse "in the latter part of the Revolutionary War – The Deponent does not remember the year, but knows it was early in the Summer as they had just planted a field of Corn." Amos Hobby of Greenwich also testified on the same date as to the service of Stephen Holly. The Refugee Light Horse was a Loyalist cavalry unit.

The Revolutionary War pension application No. 2699 of Deborah Holly, widow of Stephen, includes a declaration reproduced below:

> State of Connecticut
> County of Fairfield

On this 13th day of September A.D. 1837, before the Court of Probate within and for the District of Stamford in the said County and State, . . .personally appeared Deborah Holly, a resident of said Stamford, aged seventy four years the 19th [17th?] day of last July who, being first duly sworn, according to law, doth on her oath make the following declaration in order to obtain the benefit of the provision made by the act of Congress passed July 4th A.D. 1836.

That she is the widow of Stephen Holly, who was a private Soldier in the Army of The Revolution — That, to the best of her Knowledge & belief, (her Memory being greatly impaired by Sickness and old-age) her husband, the said Stephen Holly, in March 1779 entered the service as a substitute for his brother Silas Holly, who was an enlisted soldier in a company of Artillery commanded by Lieut. Hughes. This company, as declarant has been informed and verily believes, was employed to guard the Coast — was stationed most of the time at Horseneck and, with the other companies on the lines, was under the general command of Col. John Mead — That, her said husband continued in the service in the capacity of substitute for his brother Silas, as above stated, till the September next following — Declarant has been informed and she believes that a part of the above mentioned service was performed on board the Whale Boats.

She further declares that in the Fall of the same year her husband, the said Stephen, was draughted to keep Guard in the village of Stamford for two months, and served out that period under Capt. Reuben Scofield — That in January 1780, her said husband enlisted for two months in Captain Isaac How's company of Rangers and served during the period of his said enlistment.

Declarant says that during most of the year 1780 her said husband was employed in scouting parties, which were under the immediate command of Col. John Mead, till on the 7th of June 1781, as Declarant well recollects, her said husband was taken prisoner by the Refugee Light Horse and carried to New York and, as Declarant was told, confined there, as Prisoner of War, in the Sugar house — That, after having remained there as such prisoner, three months and one day, or three months wanting one day, he was exchanged and returned home to Stamford — Declarant saw her said husband when he was taken prisoner — saw the said Refugees strike at him with their cutlasses when he was endeavouring to effect his escape — saw him pinioned and bound to another man, by name, Briggs Reynolds, likewise pinioned, who was taken Prisoner at the same time, and saw them, thus pinioned and bound together, driven off before the Refugees on their way toward King's Bridge.

She further declares that on her said husband's return from his confinement in New York in Sept. 1781, he enlisted as a private in a company commanded by Capt. Charles Smith, of which company Jesse Hoyt was Lieut. and David Smith, Ensign — all of whom are dead. That she does not Know whether Gen. Waterbury or Mead had command of the Regiment to which said last mentioned company belonged, but thinks she has been informed that it was commanded by the latter — That the usual place of rendeyvous of this last mentioned company was at the fort in said Stamford called Fort Nonsense, and that her said husband continued to serve by enlistments under said Capt. Smith till the close of the Revolutionary War.

She further declares that she was married to the said Stephen Holly on the fifth day of January in the year seventeen hundred and eighty by Rev. Mr. Murdock — That her husband, the afore said Stephen Holly, died on the 23rd day of March 1833, and that she has remained his widow ever since that period as will more fully appear by reference to the proofs hereto annexed.

She also refers to the annexed declaration of her said husband and the proofs in support of the same as evidence of his revolutionary services. There is, as Declarant understands, a record of her said marriage in the Town records of Said Stamford.

Her
Deborah X Holly
mark

On 30 October 1837 Deborah Holly was issued pension W-21354, recorded in Book A, Vol. 2, page 6, of $23.33 per annum, starting as of 4 March 1831. The first payment, including arrears to 4 September 1837, amounted to $151.65.

"The widow of Stephen Holly, Dec'd, late of said Stamford, being incompetent to administer his estate, Silas Holly of said Stamford is appointed administrator" on 4 April 1833 by the Stamford Probate Court. One week later Selleck Scofield and Isaac Ayres presented the inventory of Stephen's estate to the court, which was approved and ordered recorded (Stamford Probate Records, 14:484-5). The inventory showed no total amount, but came to about $1,220, of which 57 acres of land were appraised at $1,140.

The accounts of the administrator were exhibited to the court on 14 January 1834, showing that claims against the estate exceeded its value. The court allowed "& sets out to the widow of the Dec'd, as her own property, the following articles, being property exempt from liability to be taken in execution, viz. . . ." A listing of furniture and household effects aggregating $39.51 in value followed (ibid., 15:39).

Apparently Silas was able to make other arrangements for the payment of his father's debts, for on 18 January 1834 "The administrator of the estate of Stephen Holly, Dec'd, late of said Stamford, having as he alledges made provision for the payment of all the debts & charges against said estate without selling real estate belonging thereto for that purpose, this Court" ordered named distributors "to assign & set out to the widow of said Stephen her Dower in said estate, viz.: one third part of all the real estate of which s'd Stephen died seized, & also to distribute said estate in equal shares among the heirs at law of said Stephen, viz.: Silas Holly, son of s'd Stephen, & the Daughters of said Stephen, viz.: Sally, the wife of William Scofield; Phebe, the wife of Hezron Scofield; Clarissa, the wife of Philander Smith; Huldah, the wife of Robert R. Barlow, & Sabrina, the wife of Levi Sherwood."

The distribution was made 6 March 1834 and approved by the Court 15 October 1834. The portion given to Sally, wife of William Scofield, was described as "two acres of land, bounded North by land set off to the widow, East by Ebenezer L. Dan's land in part and partly by the burying ground set off for the use of all the heirs at law of the said Dec'd, and South by said burying ground in part and partly by highway, and West by land set off to Phebe, the wife of Hezron Scofield and land set off to the widow" (ibid., 15:40-1).

This burying ground, located in what was later known as Sarle's Farm, Hunting Ridge, was used for several of Stephen's children and their spouses, including Sally and her husband.

In a series of six deeds remarkable for the fact that they were executed on successive days from 3 June 1839 to 8 June 1839, the heirs of Stephen (10) Holly divided his real estate among themselves. By the first deed, Silas Holly; Hezron Scofield and Phebe, his wife; Philander Smith and Clarissa, his wife; Robert R. Barlow and Huldah, his wife, and Levi Sherwood and Sabrina, his wife, all of Stamford, for $60, quit-claimed to Sally Scofield, wife of William Scofield of Stamford, their rights to three acres adjoining land owned by Sally (Stamford Land Records, Y:750-1). In like manner each of the other children of Stephen (10) Holly acquired, by payment of $60 to his or her five siblings, a full and undivided interest in a portion of the property (ibid., Y:752-6).

Stephen (10) Holly and his wife, Deborah Ferris, had six children, parenthetical references being to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths:

i. Silas Holly, born 16 November 1781 (2:33), died 4 March 1861, aged 79 years, and was buried in the family cemetery in Hunting Ridge. Rhoda, wife of Silas Holly, was baptized 7 September 1845 at the Long Ridge Congregational Church and made a new member on that day.

12. ii. Sarah (called Sally) Holly, was born 4 May 1784 (2:33).

iii. Phoebe Holly, born 5 January 1788 (2:33), died 8 May 1857. She married, as his second wife, Hezron Scofield, q.v., whose brother William married Phoebe's sister Sally. Hezron died 6 February 1866, aged 80. He, Phoebe and his first wife, Mary (who died 25 May 1816, aged 27 years), were all buried in the family cemetery.

iv. Clarissa Holly was born 27 October 1790, her birth record calling her "Clary" (2:33). She died 25 November 1858. Clarissa married Philander Smith, who died 13 September 1841, aged 52 years. He was born 4 December 1788 (2:2), son of Isaac and Abigail (Waring) Smith. Three children of Philander and Clarissa (Holly) Smith were baptized at the Stanwich Congregational Church in 1825, and one in 1831. Philander and

"Clarrissa" were buried in the family cemetery.

v. Huldah Holly, born about 1793, married Robert R. Barlow 14 December 1815 at the Stanwich Congregational Church.

vi. Sabrina Holly died 28 May 1857, aged 60 years, 9 months, 20 days, so was born about 8 August 1796. She was baptized 18 October 1796 at the Stanwich Congregational Church. Sabrina, wife of Levi Sherwood, was buried in the family cemetery in Hunting Ridge.

11. CHLOE HOLLY, daughter of Abraham (8) Holly and his wife, Mary Webb, was born in Stamford, Connecticut, about 1782. On 9 September 1804 she married at the Stanwich Congregational Church, Greenwich, Connecticut, John Ingersoll, q.v. for the record of their children. He was the son of Benjamin and Mercy (Webster) Ingersoll.

On 14 June 1805 Abraham Holly (Chloe's father), for $161.00, sold to "Cloe Ingersoll, wife of John Ingersol of said Stamford," 9 acres and 33 rods of land in Hunting Ridge (Stamford Land Records, R:526).

In the distribution of her father's estate, ordered 4 May 1822 (Stamford Probate Records, 12:222-4), "Cloa Ingersoll, fourth daughter," received one piece of land containing 10 acres, 3 roods and 25 rods.

12. SARAH (called Sally) HOLLY, daughter of Stephen (10) Holly and his wife, Deborah Ferris, was born 4 May 1784 at Stamford, Connecticut (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 2:33). She died 31 August 1854, aged 70 years (gravestone record). Sally was married 5 February 1804 (ibid., 2:91) to William Scofield, q.v. for the record of their children. He was a son of Billy and Elizabeth (Ayres) Scofield and brother of Hezron Scofield, who married Sally's sister Phoebe. The marriage of Sally and William was also recorded in the register of the Stanwich Congregational Church, Greenwich, Connecticut, but under the date of 6 February 1804.

William died 29 June 1842, aged 67. He and Sally were buried in the Holly family cemetery on Hunting Ridge, Stamford, later a part of Sarle's Farm.

An account of the search for the paternity of William Scofield is given in The American Genealogist, 46:209-11.

BISHOP

On 12 September 1693, the year before he died, the elderly Mr. Bishop made a substantial gift of land to his son Joseph (Stamford Land Records, B:210). Some years earlier he had made a like gift to his eldest son, Stephen (ibid., A:138). During the period 1650 to 1690 the Rev. Bishop was a grantee in 12 deeds and a grantor in six. On the important list of estates for the year 1687, upon which the rights to the Sequestered Land, or Southern Commons, were based, Mr. Bishop's assessed value of £ 107:10:00 was eighth highest of the 81 proprietors listed.

Rev. John Bishop died between 16 November 1694, the date of his will, and 31 December 1694, when the town voted to pay £35 to his estate for past services rendered. His tombstone in the burying ground at the rear of St. Andrew's Episcopal Chapel reads, "Rev. John Bishop came to Stamford from Massachusetts Bay: Erected 1694 by his sons Stephen and Joseph." The genealogist William A. Eardeley notes that the stone was moved there from the old cemetery in 1866 by Edwin Bishop, Esq.

The old minister could not refrain from converting his will into a sermon pointed at his children, so unusual an occurance that its preamble is quoted here in full.

> This 9th Month ye 16 day 94 [16 November 1694].
> For as much as all are mortall and ought to be All way redy for sudain deth if it So Come, as it doth to many, & lest I should have no Liberty of speech at death, as was ye case of my dear wife: I desire this may stand valid & In force as my Last will & testament. I now have use of my understanding, I Comende my Soule Into the hand of God who Gave it: and my body when ded to be decently buryed by those that survive me, & if it may be, to be Laide between ye two Graves of my dear wives, Rebecka and Joana, who are fallen a Sleep in Jesus & Gon to heaven before me.
> Concerning my dear Children, all of them, This is my Will & Solemn Charge, yt they Labour, all of them, to Get Interest in Christ & be pertakers of his Sancifieing and Saveing Grace in this their day of Grace, which may not Long Last; for I fear yt ye Gospell is Going from New England for the Neglect & Contempt it hath found hear. If then they draw nigh unto God in God's way, take hold of his Covenant, Ingageing themselves in open and visable subjection unto the Lord & his kingdom; & that they Indeavour to walke worthy of the Lord in his holy fear all there dayes, keeping allways under the meens of Grace if it may be had, whatsoever it Cost them; that they Carry with reverence & due respects to Christs faithfull minesters, being all that is duty for their uphoulding & due Incoragment [apparently a reflection of his difficulties with the local Quakers]; That they carry Inoffencively toward all and among themselves (by all means), in peac & Love, without any unbrotherly Strife & Contention, and with mutuall helpfullness, one to another, the Elder takeing care of the younger, and the younger submiting to the Elder, as is meet in the Lord; & that they seeke & observe the advice of their friends In matters Concerning there Estate, that there be no defference upon that account. I shall Endeavour to do things as well as I Can to prevent after trouble, but where the father falls short and cannot forsee what is most Expedient in all points, Let Children Labour to be Content with what is don by there father in his Love to them all.

Concerning the desposall of what the Lord hath Given me, I declare it to be my will that it should be after this maner; Imprimis, I Setle on my Son Steeven all that he hath receaved of mee and my Estate, as house & house hold Goods and Lands, and of which I Gave him Lately, viz: the Eight Acres beyond Benjemen Greens. I Give him all that may be due to me and my Estate till my death. I Give him all my Right of Land In ye horse pasture and my 200 Acres Granted by the Court & Recorded, he paying what was due to Mr. Brockit, who Layed it oute, as his Letter Shows.

It[em]. I Give to my Son Joseph [parcels of land]. . . . to my son Ebenezer, what was my Right and his Brother Josephs part in that which was Goodman potter's Lot [and other land]. . . . to my Son Benjemin, my house and homelot and Butteings thereon [and other tracts of land]. . . . to my daughter Whiteing, as ading to what She hath had (tho all to Litle, and Sory I can do no more), therty pounds, with my [clock?] and all belonging to it, and my Silver kan, with the Six yards of Black Stufe Sent from Yorke. To Strengthen my Executors to pay the s'd therty pounds to my daughter, I do Give them power to Sell my Land on Long neck.

I Constitute my two Sons, Steven and Joseph, to be Executors of this, my Last will, & desire brother Bell, Brother Ambler & Brother Weed to Assist them in what deficulty Soever may be in any matter, yt there may be no deference nor disagreement amoung my Children by any meens, as I have Charged them.

I Charg my Executors to Se all accounts Cleared and All Just debts paid; to whom I Give all the rest of my Estate not otherwise desposed off, and Invest them with power to Comand and receave whatsoever Shall be due to me. . . .

The will was signed by John Bishop in the presence of Jonathan Sellick, Sen'r, and John Davenport (Fairfield Probate Records, 4:118b-118c).

"This is A true Inventory of the Estate of the Reverend Mr. Bishop of Stanford, deceased, orderly taken & according to Law, as nigh as we Could Com at in ye pertickulars [taken by]. . .Daniell Scofield, Daniel Wescoat, David Watterbery, Townsmen." The listing required two and one-half folios; no total amount was shown. Included in the inventory were "The Homlot and buildings on it, £115:00:0. . .the Lot that was potter's, £25:00:0. . ."; 15 other tracts of land, valued at £176:05:0, a clock, £1:10:0; another clock, £7:00:0; silver spoons and a silver tanker, £8:03:0; "A Gold Ring, as mony, £1:16:00"; three guns, a sword, dagger and pen knife, £3:15:6; many items of clothing, various livestock, and considerable house furniture and furnishings (ibid., 4:118c-118f).

"Mr. Steven Bishop gave oath in Court this 12 of March 1694/5 that ye above Inventory is A true Inventory of his deceased fathers Estate. . . . Mr. Bishop's Liberary, Apprised by Mr. John Davenport, and amounts to ye sum of £35:00:--. . . .The Last Will and ye Inventory of the reverened Mr. John Bishop of Stanford, deceased, was Exhibited in Court and was Accepted & approved and ordered to be Recorded" (ibid., 4:118f.).

The six known children of the Rev. John (1) Bishop and his first wife, Rebecca Goodyear, were all born at Stamford (parenthetical references for events dated prior to 1723 are to Stamford Town Records, and subsequent to 1722, to Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths):

2. i. Stephen Bishop, born by 1648.
   ii. Joseph Bishop, born by 1650; died at Stamford 14 September 1733 (1:23); married there 3 November 1691 (1:54 and 101), Elizabeth Knowles of Fairfield, who died at Stamford 22 April 1754, aged 85 (1:105). Joseph was a Justice in 1704, 1711 and 1714-33; lieutenant 1709, and captain, 1710.
   iii. Mary Bishop, born by 1658; died at Stamford 25 July 1658 (1:20).
   iv. Rebecca Bishop, died at Southampton, New York, 26 April 1726, aged 63 years, 2 months, so born about February 1663. She married the Rev. Whiting.
   v. Ebenezer Bishop, born circa 1666, since he died at Stamford 12 March 1710, aged 44 (1:144). On 2 October 1700 he married Sarah Slawson (1:144), born 20 January 1667, daughter of John (1:134), died 17 January 1743/4 (1:58).
   vi Benjamin Bishop, born say, 1670, who died at Stamford 25 January 1727/8 (1:9). He married on 24 August 1696 (1:104), Susannah, daughter of the Rev. Abraham Pierson.
   vii-x. Four unidentified sons, born and died before 1678.

2. STEPHEN BISHOP, son of the Reverend John (1) Bishop and his first wife, Rebecca Goodyear, was presumably born by 1648. As noted above, on 21 February 1670 the town of Stamford granted ten acres of land to Stephen and a like amount to his brother Joseph. Assuming that each had by then attained his majority Stephen, the elder, must have been born by, say, 1648 and Joseph, by 1650.

Mercy, the otherwise unidentified wife of Stephen Bishop, died 5 April 1735 (Stamford Births, Marriages and Deaths, 1:29).

Stephen was one of the most active men of his day in Stamford's affairs. How long he served as schoolmaster is not revealed in the records, but on 11 January 1680/1, "P[er] vote, ye town release Steven Bishopp from keeping schoole." He was elected a fence viewer for the years 1682, 1690, 1695-6 and 1705; lister, 1682; made one of two "sirvaiers. . .for ye east field & eastward, & to make a highway over long swamp in to ye horse pasture. . ." at the 26 April 1683 town meeting, and again chosen as a surveyor of highways in 1691, 1699 and 1700; townsman (now called "selectman") in was taken on 2 November 1647 by Matthew Gilbert and Richard Miles, delivered to the court on 7 December 1647, and recorded in New Haven Probate Records, I:12. Real estate, consisting of dwelling house and home lot, the little house and barn, and meadow acreage, was appraised at £246:00:00; personal estate was valued at £225:19:06; and claims against others, including "an adventure in the Susan to Barbadoes," £18:07:00; leaving a gross estate of £490:06:06. Indebtedness to others, principally Stephen Goodyear, amounted to £126:03:02, reducing the estate to a net value of £364:03:04. Distribution was not made until 2 April 1716 (sic – a remarkable 70 years after his death), to daughter Phebe Russell and to the heirs of his only son Richard and of his daughters Anna Daniel, Susanna Crittenden, Rebecca Bowers and Sarah Whitehead (ibid., IV:397).

In the reassignment of the meeting house seats made 10 March 1646, "Mrs. Grigson" and three other ladies were placed in seat No. 2 of "the weomens seates. In the midle," just behind the empty seat reserved exclusively for the excommunicated wife of Governor Theophilus Eaton. Mrs. Gregson was also assigned to seat No. 2 in the 1656 and 1662 revisions of meeting house seating.

At a court sitting 6 February 1648 at New Haven, Mrs. Gregson, Christopher Todd and 16 others were each fined "12 d. for not bringing their waights & measures to be tryed upon the day appoynted."

Early colonial records contain many accounts of the difficulties the proprietors had with their servants, i.e., apprentices. Of interest here is a trial held 5 February 1649/50 (New Haven Town Records, I:3 ff.):

> Richard Fido, servant to Mr. Gibbard, and Nicolas Sloper, servant to M'ris Gregson, were called before the Court & told that they stand charged w'th sundrie miscariages, as theft, lying, disorderly night meetings, drinking sacke, strong watter, and having ther feasts in the night, w'th goods stollen from ther Governors or others; w'ch upon Examination they have confessed, and deserved to be kept in prison, but they were left to the dispose of ther Master and Mistris, w'ch might have bine an Ingagment upon them to have made them keep from such sinnfull courses; but notw'thstanding, they have since runn away, and that upon the Saboth, stolle sundrie things, and brought great disturbanc upon the Saboth, the Magistrats being necessitated to send men after them, the charge whereof they must beare, though the men tooke them not; but God sent Indians after them, who tooke them and brought them backe by force. they were now wished to speake and make a true, full and free confession of the severall miscariages of this nature, w'ch they know by themselves or others.

The account of the trial runs on for more than 10 printed pages, involving a number of others, including Captive, an Indian servant of Mr. Richard Malbon, Thomas Meekes and his wife, and their servant, James Clements. All were found guilty, the Meekes of receiving stolen goods and of fraternizing with other men's servants "in ye night when ther Governers were in bed, to drinke strong watter," etc.

Mrs. Gregson complained in 1653 that the bounds of her land at Solitary Cove were not defined in the town's original grant. The court on 27 February 1653/4 ordered "that the Townsmen shall goe and set out ye bounds of it, w'th due respect to M'ris Gregsons conveniency and also the Townes, both in refferrenc to high wayes and any other consideration."

According to a footnote in New Haven Town Records, I:8, Mrs. Jane Gregson lived on the southwest corner of Church and Chapel Streets.

The third division of commonage on the western side of New Haven was made in 1680. "Mrs. Greckson" received 116 acres. She was listed as heading a household of four persons and having a taxable estate assessed at £ 500. In the fifth division, made in 1711, "Mrs. grexons Lott" was 12 acres in size. Since she was not living then, the reference was to her estate. In the minutes of a town meeting held 20 September 1720 these 12 acres are referred to as belonging to "Mrs. Grizson and Danll." Anna, daughter of Jane Gregson and widow of Stephen Daniel, was intended. The second division of the Sequestered Land took place in 1713, "Mr. grixsons Lott" being four acres in size. In the minutes of a meeting held later that year the grant is referred to as "Mrs. Jane grixsons Lott." Both she and her husband had long been deceased, the lot being granted to their heirs.

Jane, widow of Mr. Gregson, died 4 June 1702. Her will, dated 5 February 1691/2 (sic), called her aged and weak. She requested "to be buried by her executrix and dear relatives." She left to her "daughter, Anna Daniel, my house and homelot and the remainder of my upland not yet disposed of at my farm on the east side of New Haven harbor, unless some of the children of my son Richard Gregson in England come over," in which event such children were to have the farm. Also to Anna, "my meadow at my said farm for life, then to her daughter. . . .also to my daughter, Anna Daniel, 6 or 7 A. of meadow near Westfield, for life, then to those of the children that need it most." Finally, daughter Daniel was to have all moveables in the house, and be executrix.

Mrs. Gregson left to her "daughter Mary in England, 30 A. of my Third Division near the Sperries farm." To "grandchild Ruth Frisbie of Branford, 14 A. of my East Side farm" (Ruth was the daughter of Rebecca Bowers and wife of John Frisbie); "also 15 A. of said farm to daughter Susanna Crittenden." To "daughter Phebe, 40 A. in the Third Division. . . .grandchild Elizabeth Winston, 8 A. of meadow and 10 A. of the Third Division" (she was a daughter of Anna Daniel and the wife of John Winston). To "grandchild Joanna Thompson, 9 A. of Third Division and 5 A. in the Quarter by the west lane, after my daughter Daniels decease." Joanna, daughter of Anna Daniel, was the wife of William Thompson. To "grandchild Rebecca Thompson, 6 A. meadow at Westfield (so called) now in her possession, and 10 A. of Third Division." She was a sister of Joanna (Daniel) Thompson and the wife of John Thompson. To "great-grandchild Elizabeth Glover that now lives with me, 9 A. on the Neck." Elizabeth was a daughter of John and Joanna (Daniel) Glover and granddaughter of Stephen and Anna (Gregson) Daniel. To "the four children of my daughter Whitehead, 6 A. of Third Division each." The witnesses to the will were William Peck and John Jones.

A verbal codicil was made a short time after the will was drawn, giving her daughter Anna Daniel a life interest in 3 acres of meadow at the South End and 3 acres at the west side, to go after Anna's death to her daughter Joanna and her children; and 3 acres of meadow at the South End were to go to Jane's daughter, Susanna Crittenden. The sole witness to the codicil was Hannah Falconer. The three witnesses were sworn in at the Probate Court 30 July 1702 (The Register, op. cit., 46:152).

An inventory of Jane Gregson's estate was taken 4 August 1702 by Thomas Tuttle and Nathaniel Boykin. Her house and homelot were appraised at £80; the meadow on the West Side Cove, £24; a meadow on the East Side, £30; land on the East Side not yet taken up, £15, and Third Divison Land, £27, the total estate, including personal property, being valued at £198. Distribution was ordered to Mrs. Ruth Frisby alias Hoadly, Joanna Thompson, Mrs. Susanna Crittenden and Mrs. Mary Wyke (ibid., 46:152).

Thomas (3) Gregson and his wife, Jane, had eight children whose records are, unless otherwise noted, taken from Families of Ancient New Haven, by Donald Lines Jacobus:

i. Richard Gregson, born in England about 1630. He appears to have been left behind in England, probably for the purpose of being educated, when his family sailed away to the New World. As shown below, he was living at Bristol, England, in 1640. By March 1656, however, Richard certainly resided in New Haven with his mother, for he was then assigned to seat No. 5 of the cross seats at the upper end of the meeting house (New Haven Town Records, I:271). He was living back in England when his mother drew her will in 1692.

   Confirmation of the identity of Thomas (3) Gregson of New Haven is provided by two documents, each involving his son Richard. The first is the will of the London draper, Richard Gregson, son of Thomas and Alice (Merry) Gregson, which was proved 31 August 1640 in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury (116 Coventry). He referred to "my cosen, Thomas Gregson in Newe England" (who was Thomas (3) Gregson, the testator's first cousin), and bequeathed "unto my cosen [i.e., first cousin, once removed], Richard Gregson of Bristol, one Judgement confessed by one Samuel Oldfeild unto Thomas Gregson, which the said Thomas assigned to me." As will now be shown, the Richard Gregson of Bristol was the subject Richard.

The second document is a deed dated 26 March 1736 and recorded in New Haven Land Records, X:520, as reported in Papers of the New Haven Colony Historical Society, I:76-7, by which "William Grigson of the City of London, Gent., son and heir of William Grigson, late of the same place, Gent., deceased, who was the only surviving son and heir of Richard Grigson, formerly of New Haven in New England but lately of the City of Bristol, deceased, which said Richard Grigson was the only son and heir of Thomas Grigson, late of New Haven aforesaid, deceased, . . .out of his picty towards God and out of his zeal for the protestant religion and the Church of England" conveyed property in New Haven to be used for the erection of a church edifice and parsonage. This same land had earlier been distributed, in the settlement of the estate of Thomas (3) Gregson, to the "heirs of Richard, the oldest and only son of the deceased" (New Haven Probate Records, IV:397-8, as reported ibid., I:51).

4. ii. Anna Gregson, born circa 1632.

iii. Rebecca Gregson, born say, in 1635, who died before January 1685. She married the Rev. John Bowers, born about 1629, who died at Derby, Connecticut, 14 June 1687, son of George and Barbara Bowers. John married second, Bridget Thompson, daughter of Anthony Thompson. She died 19 May 1720 at Derby (The Frisbee-Frisbie Genealogy: 27, by Edward S. Frisbee).

Ruth, daughter of John and Rebecca (Gregson) Bowers and the widow of John Frisbie, married second, William Hoadley. She was the "Mrs. Ruth Frisby alias Hoadly" named in the record of distribution of the estate of her maternal grandmother.

iv. Susanna Gregson, born about 1637, died 8 September 1712 at Guilford, Connecticut. On 13 May 1661 she married at New Haven, Abraham Crittenden Jr., who died 25 September 1694, son of Abraham and Mary Crittenden of Guilford.

v. Mary Gregson was baptized 26 January 1639/40 at the First Congregational Society, New Haven. In the probate record of her mother's estate she was called Mary Wyke, living in England.

vi. Phebe Gregson was baptized at the First Congregational Society on 15 October 1643. She was twice married, and died 19 September 1730. In 1673 she married at New Haven the Rev. John Whiting, born about 1635, died 8 September 1689 at Hartford, aged 54 years, son of William and Susanna Whiting, and widower of Sybil Collins, who had died 3 June 1672, daughter of Edward and Martha Collins.

In 1692 Phebe married second the Rev. John Russell, son of John Russell of Cambridge, Massachusetts; Wethersfield, Connecticut, and Hadley, Massachusetts. The Rev. John Russell was widower first of Mary Talcott, who died between 1655 and 1660, daughter of "The Worshipful Mr. John Talcott" and his wife, Dorothy Mott of Hartford; and widower second of Rebecca Newberry, who died at Hadley 21 November 1688, aged 57 years, daughter of Thomas and Jane Newberry of Windsor, Connecticut. The Rev. John Russell died 10 December 1692 at Hadley, aged 66 years (Talcott Pedigree in England and America: 30-1, by S.V. Talcott, and Newberry Genealogy: 46, by J. Gardner Bartlett).

vii. Abigail Gregson, baptized 23 February 1644/5 at the First Congregational Society. She died young.

viii. Sarah Gregson, born, say, in 1646; died in 1697. On 12 December 1667 she married at New Haven John Gilbert, baptized in April 1644 at the First Congregational Society, who died at New Haven 26 November 1673, son of Matthew and Jane (Baker) Gilbert. Sarah married second, 9 May 1676 at New Haven, the widower, Capt. Samuel Whitehead, who died there in September 1690.

4. ANNA GREGSON, daughter of Thomas (3) Gregson and his wife, Jane, was born about 1632 in England and died 3 May 1709 at New Haven. Called by the then equivalent name "Hannah" in the New Haven records, Anna in 1651 married Stephen Daniel, q.v. for the record of their children.

"Hannah" and her sister Rebecca testified in a suit brought 3 July 1649 by Lancelot Fuller against Francis Newman and his wife for slandering Fuller's wife.

Dear Mr. Witheridge:

First, I apologize for the tardiness of my reply to your request!

Enclosed are copies of entries in the registers of St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, New York, and a copy of a brief history which mentions your relatives. It appears that Peter Selleck was on the very first vestry and continued on that vestry from 1797 - 1801.

The records do not mention your father Joseph by name, but I believe he was one of the seven children of Peter Selleck baptized on November 14, 1797. This is really the only information in our possession.

Faithfully,

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, PARIS HILL

St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, the first Episcopal Church in the State west of Johnstown, had its beginning in the autumn of 1796, 149 years ago.

In days gone by it was known as the "ox cart church" because: "Peter Selleck, Uri Doolittle and others, on training day that year (probably October, 1796), accidently meeting on Paris Green, retired to an ox cart and there held their first consultation in relation to the Church and agreed to organize a Church if possible and forthwith took measures to comply with the law in such case provided."

The first Episcopal service "on the Hill" was in the home of Gideon Seymour, who was the first Junior Warden. This service was held on December 18, 1796.

An attempt was made to organize in 1796, but because of legal "red tape" it was abandoned. On February 13, 1797, the parish was formally organized.

Since there was no church building, "an humble edifice of the dimensions of a schoolhouse" was purchased for $250, in which regular services were held on Sundays. The congregation, made up of pioneers who had moved from Connecticut in 1789 to settle in the heart of Coxe's Patent, was "full of joy and gladness, having the opportunity to worship God after the manner of their forefathers in the wilderness according to the form and order prescribed by the Protestant Episcopal Church."

Lay Readers conducted the services until the Rev. Robert Wetmore, an itinerant missionary for the propagation of the Gospel in the State of New York, came to Paris Hill. In the fall of 1797, while at Bridgewater, he heard of the new parish at Paris Hill, and visited the congregation. According to the Parish Register, the Rev. Mr. Wetmore baptized William Doolittle (son of Uri Doolittle), and the seven children of Peter Selleck on November 14, 1797. (You'll find the names of Uri Doolittle and Peter Selleck on the stone plaque in the vestibule).

"The first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations - from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants."

"In 1817, under the energetic leadership of the Rev. Nathaniel Huse, the vestry voted to 'build an Episcopal Church 50 feet long by 36 wide in 1818'. The original contract, with the specifications, is preserved in the parish records. The contractors agreed to erect the building according to the specifications, provide all the material, including masonry, plaster the inside and paint all woodwork 2 coats, ---all for $2,700." Bishop Hobart consecrated the church and confirmed 79 persons on September 20, 1819. This church is the one which we use today.

Many of the people came to church with ox teams, through deep and drifting snow, biting winds, and from miles away, and then sat through the long service without a fire. When the present church was erected in 1818, no provision whatever was made for heating, and it was not until 1822 that the congregation began to realize their inability to endure the cold as formerly. On January 1, 1822

When the present church was erected in 1818, no provision whatever was made for heating, and it was not until 1822 that the congregation began to realize their inability to endure the cold as formerly. On January 1, 1822 the vestry authorized the purchase of a stove - "not to exceed thirty three dollars!" During the 25 years previous the congregation had worshiped throughout the long, cold winters without any fire in the church, and it "required a great effort to overcome the prevailing prejudice against the use of stoves."

It is easy to see that the people were interested in their church. Their church meant something to them! "One man walked seven miles every Sunday, and one woman went without a new calico dress that she might add to her part in the building of the new church."

700 Attend Consecration Luncheon

Following the consecration service, more than 700 people attended the luncheon at the Hotel Onondaga, Syracuse, at which Bishop Coley was toastmaster and the Presiding Bishop made an address.

Mr. W. Dexter Wilson welcomed the Bishop Coadjutor on behalf of the laity and the Rev. Harold E. Sawyer spoke on behalf of the clergy. Bishop Oldham welcomed the new Bishop into the ranks of the Episcopacy, and Bishop Peabody closed with an address and his benediction.

Change in Membership of the Standing Committee

The Hon. Kennard Underwood, County Judge of Cayuga County, elected successively for several years past by the Convention as lay member of the Standing Committee of the Diocese, presented his resignation at the September meeting of that body, and Mr. David S. H. Howard of Utica was elected to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Howard was a member of the Board of Directors of the Diocesan Fiscal Corporation from its inception, in 1922, and declined re-election at the annual meeting last January under a plan, recently constituted, whereby the directors limit their terms of service.

Recent Gifts and Improvements

The rector of St. Peter's Church, Bainbridge, reports that during the summer the Altar Guild purchased and presented to the church a new green brocaded silk chasuble and appareled amice to match. A new furnace, complete with thermostat, airstat and blower, has been installed in the basement of the Guild House.

At St. Ann's Church, Afton, also under his charge, new lights have been installed in the nave of the church.

Church Mission of Help Annual Meeting

The Rev. Otis R. Rice, assistant at St. Thomas' Church, New York City, will be the speaker at the luncheon at the annual meeting of the Church Mission of Help, to be held at Calvary Church, Utica, on Thursday, October 27.

The day will begin with a celebration of the Holy Communion in Calvary Church, followed by a meditation.

After lunch, which will be at 12:45, a short Board meeting will be held.

Historic Marker Placed at Oldest Parish

Commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the formation of the original Diocese of Western New York, a diocesan pilgrimage was made to St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, on October 12, at which a bronze tablet was dedicated by Bishop Coley. Given by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese, the tablet, set in a native boulder recently moved to a site near the church entrance, is inscribed as follows:

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH
PARIS HILL, N. Y.
ORGANIZED FEBRUARY 13, 1797
THE OLDEST PARISH IN THE DIOCESE OF WESTERN NEW YORK WHEN ORGANIZED NOVEMBER 1, 1838
THIS TABLET COMMEMORATES THE CENTENNIAL OF THIS DIOCESE FROM WHICH THE DIOCESE OF CENTRAL NEW YORK WAS FORMED IN 1868.
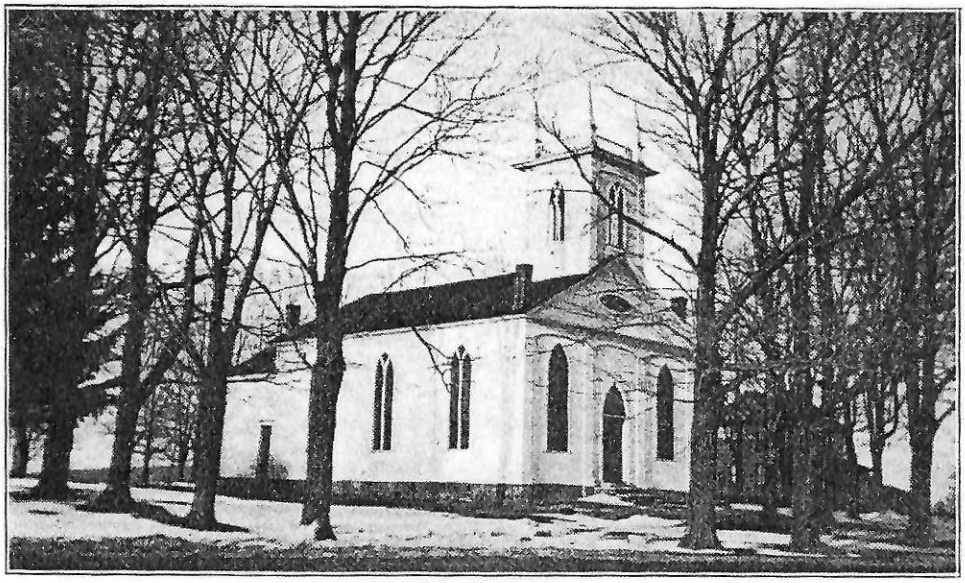
THIS TABLET WAS PLACED OCT. 12, 1938

The pilgrimage opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion, at which Bishop Coley was the celebrant, assisted by Bishop Peabody, the Rev. D. C. White and the Rev. E. L. Harvey. Following the service both Bishops made brief addresses and the Rev. Dr. H. G. Coddington, chairman of the diocesan Committee on Historic Celebrations, spoke on the history of the Mohawk valley and the pioneer faith that laid the foundations for the Church. A paper on the history of St. Paul's Church was read by the Rev. William J. Vincent, secretary of the Diocese.

An original poem, "A Pioneer Church," was read by Miss Margaret Root Garvin, after which those present formed groups on the church grounds for a box luncheon.

St. Paul's Church is in a splendid state of preservation. The exterior of the building was painted a few years ago and the interior thoroughly renovated last spring, the cost of which is being met by contributions from individuals and parishes.



ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, PARIS HILL, N. Y.

St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill

With the placing of an historical marker, on the occasion of the Diocesan Pilgrimage to Paris Hill, on October 12, the primacy of St. Paul's Church as the oldest existing parish in the geographical area that comprised the original Diocese of Western New York, when formed in 1838, was accentuated.

Known as the "ox cart church" because: "Peter Selleck, Uri Doolittle and others, on training day that year (1796) probably October, accidentally meeting on Paris Green, retired to an ox cart and there held their first consultation in relation to the Church and agreed to organize a Church if possible and forthwith took measures to comply with the law in such case provided."

St. Paul's Church and parish is a continued witness to the devotion and loyalty of its pioneer founders who moved from Connecticut in 1789 to settle in the heart of Coxe's Patent.

The first service of the Church was in the home of Gideon Seymour, on December 18, 1796. Two months later, on February 13, 1797, the parish was formally organized, a small house "about the size of a schoolhouse" was bought for $250, in which regular Sunday services were held, the congregation being "full of joy and gladness, having the opportunity to worship God after the manner of their forefathers in the wilderness according to the form and order prescribed by the Protestant Episcopal Church."

The Rev. Philander Chase (afterwards Bishop of the West), the founder of Trinity Church, Utica, who visited Paris in 1798, says he found the congregation "well kept together by regular Sunday Services led by lay readers from their own number."

An itinerant missionary, the Rev. Robert G. Wetmore, while at Bridgewater in the fall of 1797, heard of the new parish at Paris Hill, and visited the congregation. The first record of Baptism—that of the seven children of Peter Selleck—is entered in the parish minutes in his own handwriting, as also are baptisms by the Rev. Philander Chase, Father Nash of Otsego county, and by that indefatigable missionary to whom the Church in Western New York is deeply indebted—the Rev. Davenport Phelps.

The first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations—from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants.

In 1817, under the energetic leadership of the Rev. Nathaniel Huse, the vestry voted to "build an Episcopal Church fifty feet long by thirty-six wide in eighteen hundred and eighteen." The original contract, with all specifications, is preserved in the parish record. The contractors agreed to erect the building according to specifications, provide all the material, including masonry, plaster the inside and paint all woodwork two coats, for $2,700.

To ensure payment the vestry bound themselves for $6,000. Subscriptions to the total of $2,978 were received in pledges and all but $55 paid.

On September 20, 1819, Bishop Hobart consecrated the church, and confirmed 79 persons.

BISHOP HOBART

A house and "glebe for our clergyman" was purchased in 1824. The church was first heated in the winter of 1821—three years after its construction—when the vestry authorized the purchase of a stove "not to exceed thirty-three dollars." This same year subscriptions were taken to "employ a teacher of Sacred Music for this Society." An organ was purchased by subscription in 1830, and a committee was appointed to "case said organ." This organ still stands in the west gallery.

In 1868, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its construction, the church was "modernized." The east wall was cut through and the present recessed chancel built, the original chancel being an enclosure extending eight feet into the nave of the church. The "horse box" pews, with high backs and swinging doors, were made over into the present pews and the surplus lumber used for paneling the present chancel. The "three decker" pulpit, standing back of the original altar, was torn down and the wood used in making the present altar; the original altar, drawn from Connecticut in an ox cart, becoming the sacristy table. At this time, also, two stained glass windows were installed, and a chandelier, with oil lamps, hung in the nave.

Five days after the Diocese of Central New York was formed (on November 10, 1868) Bishop Coxe of Western New York, and acting Bishop of the new Diocese, consecrated the additions and renovations to St. Paul's and, at the same service ordained John Bartlett Wicks to the diaconate, who was immediately called to charge of the parish.

The Rev. Mr. Wicks was born in Paris, baptized, confirmed, married, ordained to the diaconate and priesthood in St. Paul's Church; he served the parish for 33 years as rector, in two periods, from 1868 to 1883, and from 1895 to 1912; died as rector emeritus in 1915, and was buried from the church.

Apart from the several missionaries who ministered occasionally to the parish in its formative days, thirty-three clergymen have served, successively, as rectors during the one hundred forty-two years of parochial existence.

Since 1917, because of the removal from the community of many of the descendants of the old church families and the influx of new settlers of other nationalities and religious affiliations, St. Paul's Church has been served as a mission by the clergyman in charge of St. George's Church, Chadwicks.

For technical reasons, in 1934 the Convention of the Diocese declared the parish extinct, and possession of the property was taken by the Trustees of the Parochial Fund of the Diocese.

Oldest Episcopal Church In District Gets Marker

Placed in Front of St. Paul's Edifice at Paris Hill

St. Paul's Church on Paris Hill, oldest Episcopal church in New York State west of Johnstown, has been given a roadside marker calling attention to its distinction.

Situated in front of the church at the sharpest turn in the highway from Utica to Waterville, the marker is sure to attract the attention of motorists.

Private contributions and the aid of the Rt. Rev. Edward Huntington Coley, D.D., bishop of the diocese, made the erection of the marker possible. It was made by Thomas & Hughes, Utica contractors, who used redwood for the panel and cypress for the supports.

The committee in charge of the erection consisted of Mrs. W. B. Crouse, chairman; Mrs. Earl Putnam of Waterville and the Very Rev. D. Charles White, Utica, dean of the second district.

The marker calls attention to the founding of the church, Feb. 13, 1797; the erection of the first church in 1800, which was burned in 1818; and the erection of the present white frame structure in 1818. Inside the church is a marble memorial tablet containing the names of the founders of the church.

Another interesting relic is an organ, believed to be the first one in this country. It is no longer used for church purposes but is was erected yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Crouse played "Onward, Christian Soldiers" on the ancient instrument while the Rev. Mr. White did the pumping.

The key for the church may be obtained by visitors from the former rectory, adjoining the church, where Mrs. Julia Stinehour resides. The lower floor of the rectory building is used for church socials. For many years the Rev. J. B. Wicks of Paris Hill was rector, but now the church is supplied by the Rev. Ernest L. Harvey of Chad-

Dear Joan,

I was delighted to get the photocopies you sent, and I am very grateful for your work. Although we haven't yet found Joseph Selleck, I am continuing my search, and I am confident he will turn up in the records some day. Meanwhile, we do have the references to Selleck family members in the articles and church records you sent.

My next line of attack is to write to the Rev. John LaVoe at All Saints Episcopal Church in Utica. The record states that "The first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations--from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants."

I believe either you or Carol Greis in the diocesan office told me that Trinity Church was later combined with All Saints Church, Utica, and that All Saints Church still has its early records. I'm hoping that the early records of St. Paul's Church that seem to be missing may be among the early records of Trinity Church and therefore now at All Saints Church.

You did not say how much I owe you for your help, but I am enclosing a check for $23.00 to cover $20.00 for your time and $3.00 for photocopies and postage. If I owe you more, please let me know.

Yours sincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Dear Father LaVoe:

I am helping my daughter-in-law track down her Selleck ancestry, and we know that her great-great-grandfather, Joseph Whiting Selleck, was born Dec. 14, 1799, near Utica, N.Y. Family records also state that there was a ancester by the name of Peter Selleck, who was a Revolutionary War soldier. Peter Selleck's pension records from the govern-men ment archives show that he lived in Paris, Oneida County, New York, and died in 1840.

From a history of the town of Paris published in 1881 I learned that Peter Selleck was one of the first vestrymen of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, which was organized in 1797. A visiting clergyman baptized a number of children, including seven children of Peter Selleck, whose names are given, on Nov. 14, 1797. Of course, that was too early to include Joseph, who was born a year later.

The office of the Episcopal Diocese of Central New York looked up the early records of St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, but found there were several gaps in those early years, and Joseph Selleck's baptism did not appear. Neither do there appear to be confirmation records for that early period. They did send me published information that "the first clergyman called to the parish was the Rev. Jonathan Judd, in 1804, who combined the cure of St. Paul's with that of Trinity Church, Utica. This dual charge continued until 1813, during which time the parish received two Episcopal Visitations--from Bishop Moore in 1810, and Bishop Hobart in 1812, when there were 77 communicants."

Carol Greis of the diocesan office told me that Trinity Church was later combined with All Saints Church, Utica, and that All Saints Church still has its early records. I'm hoping that the early records of St. Paul's Church that seem to be missing may be among the early records of Trinity Church and therefore now at All Saints Church.

Would you be kind enough to look through the early records of Trinity Church to see if the records of St. Paul's Church, Paris Hill, during the time when they had the same minister, are there? If so, I'd be very grateful to have you or someone in your congregation go through them and copy any references to the Selleck family. Enclosed is a check for $20.00 to reimburse you for the time and expense involved. If the cost is greater, please let me know. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yoursesincerely,

David E. Witheridge

Any woman may be eligible for membership who is of the age of eighteen years, and who is descended from a man or woman who, with unfailing loyalty, rendered material aid to the cause of Independence; from a recognized patriot, a soldier or sailor or a civil officer in one of the several Colonies or States, or of the United Colonies or States; Provided that the applicant be acceptable to the Society.

Official proof of service must be furnished with the application; also references to authorities quoted, to show line of descent. Where reference is made to unpublished or inaccessible records, the applicant must file duplicate certified copies of same. Statements based upon tradition alone cannot be considered.

ANCESTOR'S SERVICES

My ancestor's services in assisting in the establishment of American Independence during the War of the Revolution were as follows:

Peter Selleck volunteered at Stamford, Conn. Dec. 23, 1775 for one year, with Capt. Elie Leavenworth. Joined his regiment at Prospect Hill, Commanded by Col. Chas. Webb. for a siege of Boston, and was soon detached to fortify Dorchester Point - which was followed March 17, 1776 by the evacuation of the city, and was ordered to New York City. On the march he was left sick at Providence R.I. and did not join his regiment until it was stationed at Long Island in the command of Lord Stearling. Was not in Battle Aug 27 1776 - when Lord Stearling and some other officers were taken prisoners. He retreated with the army to N.Y. City and from there being sick, he was sent to King Bridge, whether Selleck was with his regiment in the battle of White Plains is not distinctly stated

Gen. Chas. Lee was taken prisoner, and Gen. Sullivan took the command - Gen. Washington was pursued by the enemy until he crossed the Delaware River amid floating ice and facing a driving snow storm. During the night, Washington's army crossed the Delaware and surprised the British occupying Trenton, early in the morning of Dec. 26, 1776 and captured over 900 Hessions. Selleck participated in this Historic expidition and was discharged Jan. 1, 1781. He served 8 mo. from April 17, 1779 in Lieut. Davis company of artillary as Sea Coast guard on the shores of Long Island, and had a severe engagment with the British vessel, from which a foregoing party attempted to land and plunder the inhabitants. He served from April 1781 another 8 mo. under Capt. Todenwood.

He applied for a pension and was granted one Sept. 1832.

On motion, Mr. Warner, Mr. Skinner and Mr. Beardsley, were appointed a committee to prepare and report resolutions to the convention.

Mr. H. G. Warner from such committee, reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

RESOLUTIONS:

Resolved, That our confidence in the President of the United States is undiminished and firm.—We look upon him as not inferior to any proud champion of democracy and equal rights in the days of our patriotic fathers, and feel honored that he is a citizen of our own great State.

Resolved, That in the Independent Treasury Law we see a declaration of principle by the Congress of the United States, that augers well for the permanency of our democratic institutions. We hail it as the harbinger of good to our country—as an effectual check to fraud and corruption in banking—as well calculated to foster and render permanent a healthy commerce—as a salutary preventive of extravagant and ruinous speculation—as the great remedy for the deceased financial system of the government—destined to purge the life blood of the body politic, and restore to just rights and equal privileges all classes of our fellow citizens—in short, to render more democratic the federal Union, and bring it near to the spirit of that noble form of rule conceived by the patriots of eighty-seven, and which for half a century the Democrats of the nation have been struggling to establish.—The name of Martin Van Buren will be loved by the American people as long as prosperity shall continue them free and independent.

Resolved, That in the manifest intention of the whig party, to fasten upon the nation the responsibilities of the individual States as proposed by their leading prints in 1839, we behold another insidious attempt, not only to enrich a horde of British and American bankers at the expense of our enterprise and industry, but to subject the finances of our general government to the power of English money changers and their mushroom aristocratic associates in our own country. Let infamy rest upon the head of the first American who countenanced the project, for he is an enemy to the country that gave him birth.

Resolved, That we solemnly protest against the policy of our state government involving the finances of the commonwealth to such a degree that its obligations are selling in the money market, urged upon stockjobbers and brokers at a discount. Shame! that the great State of New York, with her "abundant resources," should be compelled to pay usury to shavers, when by its statutes the taking of usury is a misdemeanor.

Resolved, That it needs no argument to prove that the "credit system," as understood and practiced by the whig party at the present day, is but a plausible device to cover the frauds and speculations of the unprincipled and designing. It brings ruin and disgrace upon individuals and states, and is as unlike the credit always at the command of integrity and responsibility, founded upon property, as the principles of aristocratic sway in government, to the just and equal rule of democracy.

Resolved, That we cordially respond to the nominations made by the State Convention at Syracuse, on the 2d inst. In the nominees for Governor and Lieut. Governor, we recognize high-minded democrats, always supporting the principles we profess—let democracy prove her triumph in their elections.

Resolved, That upon the Presidential Electoral Ticket we see many names that are dear to our country, and all the friends of liberty; we rejoice to see them stand forth once more in the holy cause, and doubt not that the country will be gratified with their triumphant election.

MARRIED:

In this city on Tuesday evening 22d inst. by Rev. P. A. Proal, Mr. Wm. B. Hubbard [printer] to Miss M. C. Lundegreen.

At New Hartford, on the 24th inst. by the Rev. M. C. Searle, Mr. O. G. Kellogg of Utica, to Miss Fanny D. Shepard of the former place.

In this city on Thursday, Sept. 20th, by Eld. Thomas Kill, Mr. William B. Foot to Mrs. Elizabeth Pearce both of this city.

In Marcy, on the evening of the 21th, by the Rev. Mr. Snyder of Yorkville, E. Farwell jr., merchant of Orleans Co. to Laura M. daughter of P. C. Baldwin Esq. of the former place.

In Vernon, on the 22d inst. by the Rev. J. P. Simmons, Geo. W. Cushman Esq. of Lairdsville, to Miss Electa, daughter of Alvan Dodge Esq. of the former place.

DIED;

At Marshall, Michigan, on the 20th inst, George Langford, Jr. Esq., recently of this city, aged 23 years.

The death of Mr. Langford has awakened in this place a sensibility which such an event rarely produces. Here, where he was best known and most ly and justly honored, the shock produced by his sudden death has been deep and universal. But a few weeks since he left his friends here, and filled with flowing hope and manly resolution, started to earn out for himself a fortune amid the flowing destinies of the West. His noble talents, his spotless character, his lofty ambition, indeed every thing about him in mind, manners and morals, gave strong assurance that success would crown his efforts, and those here from whom he separated himself, waited in the confident belief that in his career all their expectations would be fully realized.

How sadly have our hopes been disappointed. One step only in his course was taken, and by it he has sunk in the grave. The warm heart beats no longer, the bright intellect delights us no more. We can only mingle our sympathies with those relatives whose just hopes centered in him, have been blighted by death: we can but cherish the memory and emulate the virtues of our friend who is gone—and wonder at the mysterious Providence by which a life so full of promised excellence and usefulness, has been cut short in its very opening. S.

At his residence, in the town of Paris on the 16th inst. Mr. Peter Silleck, in the 84th year of his age.

Mr. Silleck removed from Connecticut to Paris at an early stage of its settlement, and was present and included in the earliest organization of the Episcopal society in the Parish of St. Paul's Church. And more than forty-three years sustained the character of a worthy communicant. In all the different relations of life, which in the order of Providence he was called to sustain, his uniform character and conduct was marked with integrity and uprightness. As a husband and parent he was affectionate and kind. In his more public social relations he was esteemed for his virtues which seemed to flow from a heart naturally kind and benevolent. As a soldier of the Revolution, he held a rank among those who successfully withstood the torrent, and sustained the cause of civil and religious freedom, against the powerful odds of might and oppression, while the fearful tide of war rolled its desolating waves over our distracted and suffering country, then bleeding at every pore. He lived for many years to participate in common with the remains of the patriot band who survived the war of the revolution, the blessings of civil liberty, and to share the bounty justly due from a nation's gratitude. In a word he was an honest and upright man, and a worthy member of the communion to which he belonged. G

Editor's Note

This folder contains miscellaneous unnumbered documents.

They start with a letter to me from Mom, which was accompanied by several pictures by Dad of a place called "Sellack" that they visited during their trip to England in 1976. (They knew I had recently begun my relationship with Virginia Selleck.) I presume this is the Sellack in Herefordshire mentioned in the index, but Mom doesn't specify.

In those days, of course, there was no Internet — no digital anything. Rolls of film were physically removed from a camera, developed by a machine at a photo shop, then sent from Great Britain to the United States by barnacle and snail mail.

Dear Don,

Please forgive the rather girlish notepaper! I wouldn't normally choose this for a note to our son but when away from home one uses what comes to hand and this came to hand via Mabel. Before we left she sent a box of this for me to take along and write to her on so she'd have more than just postcards all summer. So I promptly tucked it in the depths of one of your flight bags. Since it came to light finally several weeks ago I've used it to write to lots of people, and Mabel has only had one note so far — postcards all summer!

Well anyhow, the reason I chose this for you instead of plain paper is that the envelope is a good size for the enclosed pictures for Virginia. They turned up today having been lost at the photo shop when your father brought home the other ones. Some hurried clerk had written "Nitheridge" on the envelope instead of our name. Aren't you glad it isn't so?

Please tell Virginia that there are two other very good ones that we want an extra copy of for ourselves, so we're waiting to send hers until we get the prints some time after we get home. You know your dad he will never let the original out of his clutches until he gets extra prints. His philosophy is "a print in the hand is worth two in somebody else!" Hope she enjoys having them.

When we got home from our 2 days we learned we missed a message to call Jim, which we promptly did, catching him just as he was about to leave for work. He's fine & happy fine - he just wanted to hear our voices, I guess. It won't be long now. All our love, M. & D.

Bishop Keeler Dies in Germany

Episcopal Bishop of Minnesota, 69, Was at Army Camp

The Rt. Rev. Stephen E. Keeler, 69, Episcopal bishop of Minnesota, died Tuesday at a United States army camp near Heilbronn, Germany.

News of the death came to members of the Keeler family from the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, New York, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church. Bishop Sherrill, contacted by the Minneapolis Tribune, said he had no information about the manner of death.

TWO WEEKS AGO Bishop Keeler left Minneapolis to administer his duties as Episcopal bishop in charge of American churches in Europe. The assignment took Bishop Keeler overseas twice a year.

On such trips, he always made it a practice to meet with military chaplains and officiate at services for GIs stationed overseas. He expected to return late in October.

In 1955 while traveling in Europe on a similar assignment, Bishop Keeler was stricken with a heart ailment. After a long convalescence in Italy, the bishop returned home and plunged into local church activities with his usual vigor.

Bishop Keeler's successor will be the Rt. Rev. Hamilton H. Kellogg, who has served as bishop coadjutor under Bishop Keeler.

ONLY LAST June, the diocese joined with Bishop Keeler in celebrating the 25th anniversary of his consecration as bishop.

At that time, Bishop Keeler said: "I can truthfully say I know one animal very well—and that's the clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal church."

And they, in turn, knew Bishop Keeler as a man wholeheartedly "for" the ministerial profession.

"I'd recommend it to any young man who is truly fond of people," Bishop Keeler said.

THROUGHOUT his life, Bishop Keeler was a man of many achievements.

He was so gifted a speaker that a Yale classmate, the late Sen. Robert Taft, told Bishop Keeler while in college he should study law.

Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale urged the bishop to consider writing for a life's work. Phelps once said that Sinclair Lewis, Stephen Vincent Benet and Stephen Keeler were the three most promising young writers he encountered.

(PICTURES—page 18.)

But Stephen Edwards Keeler grew up with the clergy as his ambition. For a short time after graduating from Yale in 1910, Bishop Keeler bowed to the wishes of his father and took a position in a bank.

The elder Keeler always wanted his son to become a banker.

BUT YOUNG Keeler saved his salary for one year. Then he enrolled at General Theological seminary in New York. In 1913, he graduated a Bachelor of Divinity.

Of the many achievements that came after, Bishop Keeler took the most pride in the World Anglican Congress.

He was instrumental in bringing the meeting of world clergy and laymen to Minneapolis in 1954—the first time the congress was held outside England.

Acting as host to them was a happy duty for Bishop

Editor's note:

This clipping is from page 1 of the Minneapolis Tribune, Sept. 26, 1956. For the back story, see the index entry for the Rev. Charles M. Selleck, including especially the editor's note at that entry. See also pp. 75-76, folder 1.59a. DEW wrote (on p. 76) that the Rev. Mr. Charles M. Selleck was "Rector of the Prot. Episc. Church of New Haven, Conn., in 1887 and baptized [the Rt. Rev.] Stephen E. Keeler, later Episc. Bishop of Minn. [meaning Minnesota, not Minneapolis, which was always abbreviated "Mpls." by DEW]." When Stephen was seven, wrote DEW (here quoting the Tribune article verbatim): "Dr. Selleck used to let the boy accompany him to services of some of the smaller mission churches in the area. It wasn't long before young Stephen began to take an active part in Dr. Selleck's services. The clergyman allowed the boy to read the Bible Lesson to the assembled congregation."

BISHOP Arrived in Minnesota in 1931

Keeler. And the Congress' most popular feature—the tea tent on the lawn of Cathedral Church of St. Mark—also was the idea of Bishop Keeler.

"YOU CAN'T properly entertain the English without tea," he had said.

Within the big diocese of Minnesota, Bishop Keeler traveled 30,000 miles annually.

To him goes full credit for:

Re-opening many small churches in the state and placing young men in charge.

Organizing the Cathedral School of Bishop's men in 1941 through which laymen have been trained for work throughout rural areas where there is no resident clergy.

Uniting old Seabury Divinity school at Faribault, Minn., with Western Theological seminary, Evanston, Ill., into Seabury-Western, at a time when both schools were operating "in the red." The union was a profitable one.

Moving the cathedral of the diocese from Faribault to Minneapolis and reuniting the two dioceses of Duluth and Minnesota into one that now has a communicant membership of 26,538.

Initiating missionary work among the sick, under-privileged and unfortunate in the Twin Cities and among the Indians of Minnesota in an effort to better their living conditions materially and spiritually.

Bishop Keeler was born April 16, 1887 and reared on a historical plot of ground in New Canaan, Conn., that was his father's farm.

The Rev. Charles M. Selleck baptized the young bishop-to-be. And when young Stephen was 7, Dr. Selleck used to let the boy accompany him to services at some of the smaller mission churches in the area.

It wasn't long before young Stephen began to take an active part in Dr. Selleck's services. The clergyman allowed the boy to read the Bible lesson to the assembled congregation.

Bishop Keeler often recalled that he'd grown up knowing stories about Noah and the Ark long before he became acquainted with nursery rhymes.

His early school years were spent at Hoosac school, an Episcopal school at Hoosick, N. Y. At Yale, he scored on the inter-collegiate debate squad.

Sen. Taft was a teammate, but it was Bishop Keeler who won the two top awards for oratory—the Ten Eyck prize his junior year and the DeForest medal his senior year.

Bishop Keeler was the first Yale student in more than 80 years to win both awards. And the victory always seemed sweeter because he did it while competing against his good friend Taft.

After graduation from seminary in 1913, Bishop Keeler was ordained a deacon. In 1914, he was ordained a priest.

IN 1915, he married Eunice Daskam Stevens of Norwalk, Conn., after a courtship of several years.

Their son, Stephen, Jr., was born in 1916. A teacher in Turkey, the younger Keeler has been living in the Bishop's house, 920 Mount Curve avenue, while home on leave.

Bishop Keeler served churches in Massachusetts, Ohio and Illinois. At St. Paul's in Akron, Ohio, he was known as the "rubber rector" because so many rubber firm executives were church members.

He was serving as rector of St. Chrysostom's, Chicago, on April 15, 1931 — the day before his 44th birthday—when he was elected bishop-coadjutor of Minnesota. He was consecrated a bishop June 24.

HE BECAME Minnesota's fourth Episcopal bishop Jan. 1, 1944, upon the retirement of Bishop Frank A. McElwain.

Bishop McElwain was unable to come to Minneapolis for the 25th anniversary celebration last June.

But a special surprise guest who did come in time for the diocesan dinner at Nicollet hotel was Bishop Sherrill.

Friends for 49 years, Bishop Sherrill startled Bishop Keeler by approaching him from behind and bestowing a bear hug.

"My first reaction," Bishop Keeler told the audience, "was that it was one of my layman friends—and he had stopped in somewhere along the way."

THE DIOCESE presented the bishop at that time with an $85,000 trust fund to be used by him after retirement. After his death, the fund was to be used to continue missionary work within the diocese.

Bishop Keeler had hopes of retiring some day and doing some serious writing. He wanted to do a history of the diocese.

A collection of Bishop Keeler's beloved "diaries" also may have become a book.

The bishop also expected to catch up on his reading. The books he recommended in the "diary" usually would be about English history or biography or perhaps an Agatha Christie mystery.

"FOR REAL satisfaction," Bishop Keeler recommended reading the novels of Sir Walter Scott.

Among the many awards bestowed on him through the years were five honorary degrees. The most recent, an honorary doctor of laws (his first) was given last May by Carleton college, Northfield, Minn.

He served the national Episcopal church in many capacities. In addition to diocesan work, Bishop Keeler served as president and board chairman of the Minnesota Council of Churches and had been active since 1931 in the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches.

OF ALL the honors, however, he was most pleased at the number of Indian children that had been named Stephen after him.

Bishop Keeler's pleasant, clipped speech was familiar to people of many faiths in Minnesota. He was a skillful and sought after speaker.

But when asked about his "accent," Bishop Keeler would reply:

"If I have an accent, I don't know why.

"Some English friends once asked me what part of England was my home," he recalled.

"I told them I came from NEW."

Survivors include Mrs. Keeler, his son, and a brother, Warner V., Northfield Falls, Vermont.

Funeral services have not yet been arranged.

Editor's note

This page and the next contain a "to do" list made by DEW for his work on Whitings, Keelers, and Sellecks. It's unclear how much of it he was able to get to.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA)
COUNTY OF ALLEGHENY) SS:

Personally before me, the undersigned authority, appeared MARY R. SELLECK, who being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she resides at 737 Third Street, Borough of Oakmont, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, and is the widow of Charles J. Selleck, alias Jefferson P. Selleck, Pension Certificate No. 32458, he having enlisted as a Landsman in the United States Navy, having been honorably discharged August 17th, 1865, under the name of Jeff P. Selleck, as shown by Discharge No. 10628. That the said deponent's name, prior to her marriage with the said Charles J. Selleck, was Mary Rebecca Sheade, also known as Mary Rebecca Shade. That the said Charles J. Selleck and Mary Rebecca Sheade, also known as Mary Rebecca Shade, were married on the 3rd day of May, 1868, in what was then the Borough of Lawrenceville, now the City of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, by Richard Lea, Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a true and correct and photostatic copy of the marriage certificate being hereto attached and made part hereof.

That immediately after said marriage, this deponent and the said Charles J. Selleck procured a home and cohabited and lived together at Coleman Station, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, where they lived together for six years and upwards, when they left and went to Oil City, Venango County, Pennsylvania, where they lived for four years or thereabouts, from whence they moved to Tarentum, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, and lived together for four or five years, and from thence they moved to Harmarville, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, where they lived together and cohabited for a period of four or five years, from whence they moved to what is now the Borough of Oakmont, then the Second Ward of the Borough of Verona, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, in which Borough they lived and cohabited together until the time of the death of the said Charles J. Selleck, on the 19th day of October, 1925. That this deponent and the said Charles J. Selleck lived together continuously from the time of their marriage, viz, May 3, 1868 to the time of the death of said Charles J. Selleck, October 19th, 1925, and are the parents of eight children, all of whom are living. That this deponent and the said Charles J. Selleck lived together and cohabited in what is now the Borough of Oakmont, formerly part of the Borough of Verona, for forty years and upwards, and were husband and wife and never divorced.

Deponent further says, in answer to an inquiry from the Department of the Interior, relative to this application for pension, that the said Charles J. Selleck never was married to any one prior to the time of his marriage with this deponent; that he never was married to Mary Freeman about the year 1866, or at any other time. That the said Charles J. Selleck told this deponent that he had been in trouble with the said Mary Freeman prior to their marriage, but that he had paid her bounty money, $300.00, received by reason of service in the Civil War, the said Charles J. Selleck having been home on sick leave and had settled up the whole affair, as he stated to this deponent and returned to the War. Deponent further says that the said Mary Freeman lived in the City of Erie, County of Erie and State of Pennsylvania. That after diligent inquiry deponent has been unable to learn of any record of marriage to the said Charles J. Selleck, and is informed and verily believes that they never were married. That she has learned Selleck for support for herself or child or otherwise, and that the question of former marriage was never raised or brought to her attention until raised by the Government after the said Charles J. Selleck had become old and practically out of his mind by reason of old age and made irresponsible statements.

This deponent, Mary R. Selleck is now of the age of seventy-seven (77) years having been born on the 30th day of January, 1850.

This affidavit being made to induce the Department of the Interior of the United States to issue a Pension to the said widow of said decedent, the present deponent.

Sir:

In your above-cited claim for pension under the act of Feb. 6, 1907, you alleged in application filed Feb. 16, 1907, that you were born Jany. 1, 1838, while at enlistment Aug. 25, 1862, you gave your age as twenty-two, which would indicate that you were born Jany. 1, 1840, and at enlistment Sept. 6, 1864, you gave your age as twenty-three which would indicate that you were born Jany. 1, 1841.

In view of these discrepancies in your statements as to your age, there should be furnished a verified copy of the public records of your birth, or of the church record of your baptism. If you are unable to furnish such record evidence you should state the fact and reasons under oath, and comply with the requirements of the attached circular letter.

Very respectfully,

Commissioner.

ACT OF MAY 1, 1920

Under the provisions of the Act of May 1, 1920, the widow of any person who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps during the Civil War for ninety days or more, and was honorably discharged, or regardless of the length of service was discharged for or died in service of a disability incurred in the service in line of duty, may be entitled to pension, without regard to her financial condition, provided she was married to him prior to June 27, 1905. The rate of pension is $30 per month, and $6 additional for each of his children under the age of 16 years. Pension commences from the date of filing a valid declaration in the bureau.

"That no claim agent or attorney or other person shall be recognized in the adjustment of claims under this Act, except in claims for original pension, and in such cases no more than the sum of $10 shall be allowed for services in preparing, presenting, or prosecuting any such claim, which sum shall be payable only on the order of the Commissioner of Pensions; and any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section, or shall wrongfully withhold from the pensioner or claimant the whole or any part of a pension allowed or due to such pensioner or claimant under this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall, for each and every offense, be fined not exceeding $500 or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court."

INSTRUCTIONS—READ CAREFULLY

Declaration and testimony must be executed before some officer authorized to administer oaths for general purposes. If such officer is not required by law to have and use a seal, his official character, signature, and term of office must be certified by the proper State, county, or city officer under his official seal, unless such certificate has been filed in the Bureau of Pensions for general reference.

Under the law, a person may not receive pension from the Bureau of Pensions and compensation or vocational training pay through the United States Veterans' Bureau, covering the same period of time, except that the receipt of compensation by a widow or parent on account of the death of any person will not bar the payment of pension on account of the death of any other person.

That part of the declaration referring to service between April 6, 1917, and July 2, 1921, should show whether the claimant or any member of her family rendered any service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States during said period, and if so, the full name under which each served should be stated, together with the designation of the organization in (or the vessel on) which such service was rendered with dates of enlistment and discharge.

The term "family" includes: Child, legally adopted child, stepchild, father, mother, stepfather, stepmother, father and mother through adoption, and person who has stood in place of parent for a period of not less than one year prior to induction into service.

M a d a m :

In reply to letter of the 18 ultimo, I have to advise you that your above entitled claim for pension is awaiting the evidence indicated in the attached circular letter.

The evidence was called for in letter of Nov. 13, 1925.

Referring to paragraph 7 of the circular I would add that the ~~soldier~~ sailor stated that he was previously married to Mary Freeman in 1864 and was divorced from her in 1866. If you are unable to furnish evidence indicated in paragraph 7 or to comply with any other of the requirements indicated you should state the facts and reasons under oath.

Respectfully,

Madam:

Referring to your affidavit filed on the eighth instant by Hon. Clyde Kelly, I have to advise you that when the sailor was fifty-four years old, he stated in a paper filed February 23, 1893, that he married Mary Freeman in 1864 and was divorced from her in 1866. As they lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, during that period, you should correspond with the clerk of the court in that city and obtain a certified copy of the alleged divorce decree or the statement of the clerk that no record of such divorce proceedings can be found, and file the same with your claim.

The claim also awaits a verified copy of the public record of the sailor's death, or of the cemetery record of his burial, and the sworn statement of two witnesses who knew you and the sailor from 1897, showing whether you were ever divorced, and whether you and he lived together as husband and wife from that time to the date of his death.

Persons testifying should state their ages, postoffice addresses, and means of knowledge of the facts to which they testify.

Do not fail to inscribe on each paper furnished, the name and service of the sailor, and the number of the claim to which it relates.

Respectfully,

Dear sir

Your circular of December 21st 1912 recieved & contents noted stating that my entitled claim under Act of May 11 1912 That part based upon disability is rejected

In filing my application under this Act I based it upon time of service - not on Disability - although I am badly disabled and realy unfit for any manuel labor

My first service was 1862 on the Gunboat Tornesteja at Cairo Illinois this was about Sept 6th 1862 - I was discharged at Cairo Illinois from disability - Chronic diarhea this discharge I have lost and therefore I cannot give dates - My Second enlistment Sept 6th 1864 at Erie pa 1 year was put on the Gunboat Silver Lake at Evansville Indiana & discharged Aug 14 1865 from the Mississippi Squadron - My first enlistment 1862 I was at Vicksburg Mississippi under flag of flag of truce exchanging of prisoners

Do for I basing my applications on Service rendered My discharge being lost or destroyed first-Enlistment

State of Pennsylvania well known to me to be reputable and entitled to credit, and who, being duly sworn, declare in relation to aforesaid case as follow:

In reply to the questions on enclosed circulars I would say that Charles Jefferson Selleck is my full and correct name. In my boyhood I was called Jeff as a rule, and when I entered the Navy I again use my name as Jeff Selleck in some way the letter C was omitted and I was borne on the rolls and discharged as Jeff D Selleck.
I first enlisted August 28th 1862 on Gun Boat Conestoga and was discharged for chronic Diarrhea at Cairo Ills in Dec 1862 & January 1863. I again enlisted Sept 6th 1864 for one year and served on Silver Lake until Aug 17th 1865 when I was discharged from U.S.S. Mat Western. The above is the only claim for pension I ever filed.
I contracted the neuralgia in the year 1868 it is not due to my vicious habits and is to the best of my knowledge and belief of a permanent character.
I was not born in the military or naval service since August 17th 1865.

In re: Application Mary R. Selleck Widow for Pension.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA)
COUNTY OF ALLEGHENY) SS:

Personally before me, the undersigned authority, appeared HARRY H. ROWAND, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, to me personally known, who being first duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is a resident of the Borough of Oakmont, County of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, and has been a resident of that Borough, and the adjoining Borough of Verona, for a period of thirty-five (35) years and upwards; that he is and has been acquainted with Mrs. Mary R. Selleck, widow of Charles J. Selleck, also known as Jefferson P. Selleck, and was acquainted with the said Charles J.Selleck, who died in the said Borough of Oakmont, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, on the 19th day of October, 1925, and whose widow, Mary R.Selleck, is applying for a pension, claiming by reason of the death of her said husband, Charles J.Selleck; that to deponent's knowledge, the said Charles J.Selleck and Mary R.Selleck lived and cohabited together in the Borough of Oakmont, formerly the Second Ward of the Borough of Verona, for thirty-five (35) years and upwards; that deponent was well acquainted with both the said Mary R.Selleck and the said Charles J.Selleck; that they maintained their home as husband and wife during all of said period up until the date of the death of the said Charles J.Selleck, viz, the 19th day of October, 1925, and they were known in the vicinity as husband and wife, and during all that time, deponent never heard any one question the validity of their marriage, nor did deponent at any time hear of one, known as Mary Freeman, alleged to have been the former wife of said Charles J. Selleck, until after the present application for pension was made by the said Mary R.Selleck. Deponent further says he is not related to either Mr. or Mrs.Selleck either by blood or marriage, but makes this affidavit merely in the hope of assisting Mrs. Selleck in her efforts to secure a pension. Deponent further says that he is of the age of 56 years and his post office address is; Residence, Oakmont, Pa.; Office, City-County Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sworn to and subscribed before me

Dear Sir:-

Would you kindly forward certificate for use of Pension Claim showing record of divorce proceedings, if any, as follows:-

Mary Freeman Selleck vs. Charles J.Selleck
Mary Freeman Selleck vs. Jefferson P.Selleck
Jefferson P.Selleck vs. Mary Freeman Selleck
Charles J. Selleck vs. Mary Freeman Selleck

From 1860 to date of death of said Charles J.Selleck, also known as Jefferson P. Selleck, October 19th, 1925.

From 1860 to date of death of said Charles J.Selleck, also known as Jefferson P. Selleck, October 19th, 1925.

On October 22, 1927, you sent a certificate to Mr. Charles F. Selleck, son of the decedent, for Pension Certificate, stating that you find no divorce of record, Mary Freeman Selleck vs. Charles J.Selleck from 1864 to 1867. The latter certificate is not sufficient for the purposes required by the Pension Department. Consequently, we are asking for a certificate covering the above possible caption. If any charge is made, kindly forward statement, and we will forward payment immediately upon receipt thereof.

Very truly yours,

THE LORD'S PRAYER

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. A-men.

Editor's note:

On the following pages are a few of the many letters and cards from Jean and Jack Selleck to Elizabeth and David Witheridge over the years.

Dear Elizabeth and David:

Thank you for the excellent pictures and also your lovely letter. We are more than happy to welcome Tom as a member of the family. He is such a fine young man and we have hoped since becoming acquainted that he would be "the one". All of our relatives are pleased as well. They met Tom when he and Virginia attended our reunion in Pennsylvania.

We expect them down when our friends from New Jersey visit later this month. Our home and families will be here also, and we always have lots of fun when they converge.

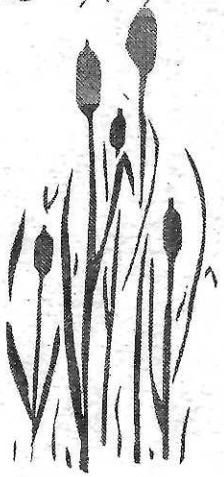
Your invitation is much appreciated and we want you to know you are welcome in our home, and hope you will favor us with a visit to Mattoon. Do you still travel so much? Perhaps you could stop over here sometime.

No frost here yet so Jack still has a few vegetables in his garden.

Cordially,
Jean and Jack.

P.S. Those snapshots are the best pictures we have of Virginia and Tom. Thanks again.

April 17, 1982 Dear Elizabeth:



We had a very enjoyable and busy time with all our family here over the Easter weekend. The twins were one year old in January and, as you can imagine, are walking (and even running) now, each in a different direction when not confined to their playpens.

Virginia and Tom brought me up to date on their plans and it looks as though they have all arrangements well in hand.

Thus far, I have not found a dress to wear at their wedding. Have in mind something pastel and am not particular about the color. They are showing lots of white but, of course, I don't want to wear white or black. If all else fails, I will buy fabric and make one.

If you are able to find something you like, or to have one made, please go ahead and don't wait for me to decide. I'm sure we won't both select the same thing and, even if we did, it wouldn't bother me.

As I told Virginia, if you are willing to entrust the quilt to me I will attempt to repair it, and do not think it would be any trouble to transfer it from your car to our trunk at the Hyatt House, which is where I presume we are all to be housed. This could be arranged when we first arrive on June 5 around noon. We plan to start out early that morning.

However, we do hope you will stop in Mattoon and visit us. Perhaps on your return from the East (depending upon how long you are gone, and whether I'm able to do the repair) you could pick up the quilt then.

Your "family album" will sounds like a wonderful idea and you are fortunate to have pictures of so many generations. I'd love to see it some day.

I think Virginia feels honored to be part of the arrangement. You did send us a print of that picture and it is excellent.

We look forward to seeing you and David in Chicago. We may go up prior to the wedding but am not certain.

Cordially, Jean

Dear Elizabeth:

Our holiday weekend with Rob and family and Virginia and Tom was most enjoyable, and this weekend we expect Terry and John to be with us. Her sister and a girlfriend have scheduled a baby shower for Sunday, so we will have another good weekend.

Our plans for the trip northwest have been abandoned for the present. My brother Jim has not been well and has returned to the hospital, and we are quite worried about him. Marge and Bill agreed that we should postpone our trip, so we intend to go to Allison Park sometime next week for a visit there.

Because the work on the guilt was as complete as I thought advisable (to retain the antique quality), Virginia and Tom took it when they left here, and you can get it when in Chicago.

We still hope to see you in Mattoon. Virginia will always know

Dear Elizabeth & David:

I trust this finds your both well and ready for an joyous holiday. We are busily preparing for our family's arrival the weekend before Christmas, and are looking forward to a lovely time together.

Today it is 65° here with bright sunshine — almost afraid to enjoy it because it may preclude severe weather which would upset our plans.

Love,
J

Jack & Jean

Dear Elizabeth & David:

April 2, 1984

We pleased to receive the picture taken on Christmas Eve of your family. Your table looks so pretty and it is a good likeness of all.

Virginia tells me you will be in Chicago at Easter and they look forward to seeing you. By that time the weather will surely be settled.

John is changing jobs and will move to a town near Oakland, so we may be called into service there.

Thank you for your prayers.

1985

Hope that this finds you ALL WELL AND HAPPY. WE ARE Looking FORWARD TO OUR VISIT WITH THE KIDS ON THE POST XMAS Week END. WE CANT HARDLY WAIT FOR THE NEW GRANDCHILD. ISNT IT GREAT? GIVE OUR REGARDS TO

JIM.

Monday AM

Dear Elizabeth:

While speaking with Virginia yesterday, we learned you were having a special birthday. Just wanted to send our best wishes to you both, and hope you will have many more happy birthdays to come.

Beginning to look like fall is on the way although our weather continues to be mild and Jack is still getting a few tomatoes.

Love, Jean

Dear Elizabeth and David:

The family and I appreciate your kindness and generosity. The flowers are red roses and white carnations and here with us.

The picture of Rebecca and Rob is precious. She is such a joy to us all and we are happy she and Virginia can stay until Wed. After that reality will set in.

Love, Jean

Your kind expression of sympathy is deeply appreciated and gratefully acknowledged by the family of

Editor's Note

The next two documents were created by my daughter, Rebecca Elizabeth Witheridge (b. 1988), when she was in 10th grade at Eastview High School in Apple Valley, MN, a south suburb of Minneapolis. I'm including them for three reasons:

1. I'm her proud papa, and I see no reason to miss any opportunity to show her off.
2. She is, and always will be, David and Elizabeth Witheridge's only granddaughter, whom they passionately adored.
3. She used her school assignment on "oral history" to add something that would otherwise be almost totally lacking in this collection of dry factoids about the Ash and Meyers families: Color. (The preceding item about Will's harp is another welcome bit.)

Rebecca interviewed the two female elders of the Ash/Meyers clan, her maternal grandmother, Jean Selleck (Eleanor [Jean] Virginia Meyers [b. 1915]), and her great aunt, Marge Brod (Mary Margaret Meyers [b. 1919]), tape recording and transcribing their memories of the most significant worldwide calamity of their childhood: The Great Depression. (The 1918 influenza pandemic is probably a distant second or third for that "honor," and besides, the sisters had no firsthand memories of it. Jean was too young to notice it, and Marge was even younger, having been born between the third and fourth waves. The same can be said for World War I.) So Rebecca was right in her choice of topic.

Then she turned the transcript into a paper on the Depression, interleaving segments of her oral history interview with brief descriptions of the major public effects and events. Her technique foreshadowed her honors thesis in cultural anthropology at Oberlin College six years later (on a completely different topic, the attitudes of her fellow students on gender and sexuality).

Enjoy!

Interview with my Grandma and Great Aunt
Topic: The Great Depression

Q: Approximately what ages were you when the stock market crashed?

Grandma Jean Selleck (Gma): I would say 14 or 13 for me.
Great Aunt Marge Brod (GAm): So I was about 9.

Q: Did you notice a change when it actually happened? Was it more gradual or sudden?

Gma: People were shocked about it, and of course we had a father working and 2 brothers working, and 2 out of the 3 were laid off. Business went down so we only had one wage earner after that.

Q: Did you, as children, notice it? Did your parents sit you down to talk about it, or was it more of a... 'Hear it through the grapevine' thing?

Gma: We talked about it at home... and when people are laid off and you don't have much income it makes a difference in your living.

Q: Were your clothes made at home? Was the material recycled?

Gma: Yes, Mother made them, but she didn't do that-GAm: She could alter things to make things into something else. She could use things that were, well, like a nice piece of fabric; she could alter so it would fit someone smaller.

Q: What about food? Did the Depression change your eating habits?

Gma: No, I don't think we changed our eating habits. Mother baked bread, and we had our own chickens and eggs and that helped, I'm sure. We didn't have to buy every bite of meat we were going to have.
GAm: We had an Aunt who had a cow, and we could get a bottle of milk for a nickel, and that sort of thing. Dad always had a garden and mother made preserves. But I'm sure it wasn't easy.
Gma: We didn't starve.
GAm: No, we didn't. Oatmeal was our basic cereal. All the cereals on the market today were not available.
Gma: Shredded Wheat and Corn Flakes were about the only things you ever heard of in those days.

GAm: We had our own garden and apple trees. Daddy would gather all the apples and put them in barrels in the cold cellar. We'd use 'em for apple pies and applesauce and we could go down there and get a bowl of apples any time-
Gma: Yeah, we were in good shape really, for that sort of thing. Because we had so many things right there. And mother was very good at managing the money. She made sure we never spent money foolishly.

Q: What did you do for Entertainment?

Gma: (laughing) We made our own entertainment!
GAm: Well there was a radio in the house and we'd listen programs like (?) Fibber McGee and Molly,
Gma: ...And Amos and Andy,
GAm: Yes...
Gma: We had a record player and we had records that we played. We made our own games really. Betty and Gertrude were in the neighborhood and we played games. I was the oldest one and sometimes Aunt Eleanor would be busy doing something and she'd ask me to come up and I'd play with the girls while she churned butter. Her husband had tuberculosis and she had to make sure everything was scrubbed clean so that no one else in the family would catch it.
GAm: We used to play cards. We played little games like Highest Card Wins and eventually worked our ways up to 500.
Gma: We had this wonderful Grimm's Fairytale book and we'd read it to one another. We used to go to the theater. We'd go in to Pittsburgh and watch the full stage show and watch the cartoons and someone playing the organ and everybody would sing along to the bouncing ball on the screen... and then you had the theater presentation from Hollywood. This cost a quarter... the whole deal. It was... the whole ball of wax, I can tell you it was a wonderful stage show to be seen! But you had to go in before noon to get in for a quarter.

Q: What kind of town did you live on? Did you live on a farm or...?

GAm: Rural, rural. It was not actually a farm. There were about 7 acres involved. The garden took up about... about ½ an acre.
Gma: Just a kitchen garden. Enough for us but not sold to other people. Just for the family.
GAm: Daddy had a Scythe, you know, with a wooden handle and curved blade. He used to cut the fields with that and the hay was used in the chicken houses. He also, in the fall, he would butcher a pig. He'd buy it, and make sausage and smoke it and hang it from the rafters in the cold cellar and such.

Q: What kind of house did you live in?

Gma and GAm: The one we live in now.
Gma: 3 bedrooms.
GAm: 6 rooms.

Q: You were in school when this happened? Where was it? Did you have to buy school supplies or did they supply it?

GAm: Yeah we were.
Gma: It was at where the church is. You've been there. We walked there every day. It was like a mile and a half everyday. And you carried the lunch; there was no cafeteria. You maybe had to buy a notebook or pencil maybe, but most of it was ah...
GAm: I don't even think the pencils were 10 cents then. Things were much cheaper than they are today, because I know for a while a month's tuition was a quarter-
Gma: 50 cents. You'd bring your report card home, and then you'd bring it back with 50 cents. Now, we could do that, but I know some people might not have been able to afford it. It was a parochial school and connected with the church.

Q: How would you compare the money today with the money then?

Gma: You could buy a WHOLE lot more with a dollar. A loaf of bread was 10 cents. And I remember mother would give me 50 cents to go down to the butcher to buy steak and there were 6 people in the family. And that's a fact.

Q: Did you have any pets other than the chickens?

Gma: Yeah, we had dogs. Fox Terriers! We'd give away their puppies. We fed them table scraps. And I never knew ANYBODY to buy dog food. Everybody gave their dogs their table scraps, and they ate bones! Now these people don't give them a bone! The dogs don't get bones anymore! I think that's wrong! (laughing) They're fake bones aren't they-GAm: Well, they get the bones caught in their throats now. I don't know, the dogs swallow different now then they used to, I guess...(Laughter) They're not attuned to it...

Q: How many siblings did you have...?

Gma: 2 brothers. John was born in 1908. And Jim was born in 1911.

Q: What kind of jobs did they have?

Gma: John had lost his job, like my father. Jim had been driving some sort of delivery truck for the dairy and he was kept on. My father also worked at the dairy. But he had no education beyond, like, the 8th grade.

Q: Did you have any specific chores?

Gma: We never had any specific chores really. We'd do dishes.
GAm: We'd dust the floors. In the fall we'd make apple butter by peeling apples and then heating them and putting them into a huge kettle and keep adding apples and cider and stirring all day. We'd take our turns stirring when we got home from school.

Q: What happened when you guys got sick?

Gma: Well, I really don't know...
GAm: Well the only time when I can really remember anyone being sick was when John had the rheumatic fever. And mom took care of him. I'm sure a doctor had to come to diagnose it.

Q: Were there things during the Depression years that you guys couldn't afford that you could before hand?

Gma: (laughing) We couldn't afford very much! I went into school to learn typing and such right after 8th grade and when I got out it was 1930 and I went to get a job. I tried to get a job, but it was very difficult. Mother took me by the hand and took me to Etna high school and I got the 4-year course and got my diploma in 1933. When I graduated, of course, I wanted to get a class ring, and... I guess I talked about it because mom gave me the money and I thought afterwards that 'I don't need that'. I had had another class ring I'd gotten when I graduated in the 1930's! So I brought the money back home... because it was needed for other things and I was old enough to know that.

Q: Did you have to learn more habits when it came to saving things during the Depression years? Did you have to become thriftier?

Gma: Oh yes. We were ALWAYS taught to be thrifty. Even with water. We had a bad well, and whenever we didn't have enough rain we had to be very careful with the water. And so when it came to washing dishes, if we had had a pot of corn on the cob, we'd use that to wash the dishes- and then we'd rinse them of course. But our father then, that was one thing that happened during the Depression, when he was out of work; he decided we needed a cistern. We had to have this water that came on the roof go into a cistern. It was all brick and then the water would filter through and go into the toilets and washing machines. The well water was what we drank.
GAm: And we shared bathwater too.

Gma: Yes but that was when we were younger...but not later, no.
GAm: No, but I can remember doing that.
Gma: That's true. In Etna we shared bathwater.
GAm: Well I don't remember much about Etna.
Gma: Well that's where we shared bath water!
GAm: Well I think we shared bath water on Elfinwild road too, before the cistern. It seemed to me that you and I used the same bath water...
Gma: Iiii don't remember that, I would have never-! (laughter) I don't remember that at all! (More Laughter)

Q: is there anything else that stood out to you during the Depression? Andy huge changes in life in general?

Gma: Well, at one point a big thing was that we stopped buying butter. Rather than normal butter we started getting margarine, and it was white. And you had to dye it yellow... nobody wanted it white, it looked like lard or something! And our Uncle Richard, a carpenter, was out of work, and he and his wife had to go on Welfare. They couldn't get any jobs and had no money! And they were furnished with butter! We thought that strange, we had money to buy stuff but we couldn't afford butter! And they had butter! But that was for a short period, I don't think he was ever off very long. In the winter, you know, I don't think people built much in the cold. In the spring maybe he got a job, I don't know.
GAm: Well, when you think about what houses were built for too in those days. Take the house we live in now. It was under $6,000 dollars to have that built.
Gma: And that was another change, when there was not enough money coming in and they had built this house and of course they had a mortgage and had borrowed from the bank. Well, I guess it was Roosevelt who put through the FHA, Federal Housing Administration. It was created in order for people to be able to be helped by the government, and instead of the bank coming and telling you to get out, you could fall back on the government until you got it paid off. And that's what happened, it was a very big break because I think our parents were very afraid they were going to lose the house and they didn't know what they would do. I think that's one of the reasons they liked FDR.

Q: Do you think that living in the country as you did with the animals and garden and such made a difference on how you coped with the Depression?

Gma: I think so.

Q: Did you know anyone in the city or read papers about people on whom it had a greater impact?

Gma: I can't say that I know anybody like that, but I can just imagine that if you didn't have the apples or even the pears and plums we'd sometimes get and stuff, you know, we had a great advantage over the people who didn't have the money to go buy those things. Mother was a master at stretching things and creating them. She always baked bread; we never bought bread.
GAm: And she had sewn for people. Mother had been like a seamstress.
Gma: She was good at it... and we learned to sew! Before we went to high school! We learned to make stuff!

Q: Did you notice when it got better?

Gma: Well I can't say that I actually remember when Dad went back to work and when john went back to work.
GAm: (looking at Gma proudly) Well when you went to work for a while, you made 5 dollars a week, going into Pittsburgh everyday, figuring out your own transportation too! And you worked 6 days a week for 5 dollars
Gma: 6 dollars (laughing)
GAm: ok then, 6 dollars.
Gma: Well that was later, that wasn't the Depression years.
GAm: Well that Depression didn't just solve itself real quick, I know when Bill and I got married in 1940, for 2 weeks pay he got 65 dollars.
Gma: Well I know it lasted...
GAm: Things were not easy then! It just seemed as if there was never enough money to go around!
Q: When you guys were in school did you hear about the problems of other families?

GAm: You would notice some people... their shoes... their clothing... it was pretty bad. And you would feel bad... you'd know that they were pretty poor.
Gma: I don't think our story was very bad compared to other peoples. I mean, if we hadn't lived where we had and had access to all of the home grown food we had, things would have been a lot worse!

Q: Do you remember any other specific government programs that were instated besides the government-housing program?

GAm: Well the CCC boys (civil conservation corp.). They'd build forts and roads and state parks, etc.
Gma: A lot of them were people who couldn't get a job, who were out of high school and they'd join and they got a trade out of it.

Oral History Paper: The Great Depression

"We had dogs. […] We fed them table scraps and I never knew anybody to buy dog food. Everybody gave their dogs their table scraps, and they ate bones! Now these people don't give them a bone! The dogs don't get bones anymore! I think that's wrong! (laughing) They're fake bones, aren't they-"

~Jean Selleck

"Well, they get the bones caught in their throats now. I don't know, the dogs swallow different now than they used to, I guess…(laughter) they're not attuned to it…"

~Marge Brod

Jean Selleck and Marge Brod laughed fondly about memories of a time period that most people would consider to be one of the hardest in American history. Most Americans have grown up hearing about it as early as elementary school. Because it is the only event of its kind that is usually given a lot of attention, it can be a shock for students to discover that there ever was more than one. The Great Depression seems to have been the working definition of 'hardship' for America because of the obvious meaning of an economic depression -- unemployment, low wages, and homelessness. While the Great Depression has been considered such by historians because of the figures and statistical evidence of the time, its true impact on the country can only be understood by looking at its economic and domestic effects on the citizen's everyday life.

On October 24, 1929, the stock market began what would be its most devastating downward spiral. By 'Black Tuesday', October 29th, more than 29 million shares of stock had been sold. Before long, it became exceedingly clear that the recession occurring was not normal and that it could not be easily remedied. Within the four years between 1929 and 1932, 44% of the country's banks had failed, and approximately two billion dollars in deposits had vanished (Thorkelson 345). Unemployment rose at an alarming rate, from 1.5 million to a staggering 16 million -- roughly 1/3 of the labor force ("Great Depression" 1132). Between 1929 and 1932, the total value of the stocks on the New York Stock Exchange plummeted from $89.7 billion to $15.6 billion (Burg 65), and the "prices for agricultural products dropped to their lowest level since the Civil War" ("Great Depression" Britannica 1). The stock market's dropping value showed how unconfident the public was in the business world, and it illustrated the reason for many of the bankruptcies that occurred during the Depression.

With America facing statistics such as those, experts of the time faced the challenge of unveiling the cause of the Great Depression. At the time it was believed that the stock market crash itself had caused the chain of events, while nowadays historians believe it was a multitude of other factors; the stock market's crashing simply exposed the weaknesses in America's economy (Thorkelson 344). Once the complicated whole is broken down, the true causes of the disaster can be picked out and examined more closely. According to the Britannica Intermediate Encyclopedia's article entitled "Great Depression", the main causes of the Depression included such things as "an extremely unequal distribution of incomes", the prosperity of Wall Street consisting of paper money that wasn't actually backed up by specie, banks acting foolishly in making loans before the Great Depression happened, and a lack of ability to predict the outcomes of actions that had been taken in the past. Such factors combined to produce a snowball type effect. In an article by Axel Leijonhufvud entitled "Reflections on the Great Depression", the analogy of a man slipping on a banana peel was used: a physicist would explain that the speed with which he was walking versus his weight was the cause, a doctor would bring up the osteoporosis in his bones, and a psychologist would argue that a disagreement he'd had earlier in the day had caused him to not pay attention. In the absence of each of those things, the accident would never have happened -- they all contributed. Such was the case with the Great Depression.

Economically, the Great Depression ravaged the country and its financial resources. With hundreds of banks failing and deposits vanishing, the market economy began to lose value rapidly. As shares of stock were practically given away, bankruptcy loomed in the mind's eye of many a business owner. The rising unemployment rates were also crucial because once families had fewer wage earners less money could be spent. Businesses were unable to thrive because so many people were out of jobs and unable to buy as many products as they had previously been able to buy. The United States was forced to give up on the previous gold standard by increasing the value of gold per ounce from $20.67 to $35, thus devaluing the dollar by 70% (Thorkelson 345). This was meant to encourage spending, but the price rebound hoped for did not occur. For those who did have money it was enormously helpful, considering that prices were so low: One could buy a new men's suit for $10, a shirt for 75 cents, or a loaf of bread for a nickel. While today those kinds of prices seem more like a scam than a deal, during the Depression those nickels and dimes were hard to come by.

"Mother would give me 50 cents to go down to the butcher and buy steak, and there were six people in the family. And that's a fact," Selleck stated with a stone face, "You could buy a whole lot more with a dollar". With a single person supporting their family, sisters Selleck and Brod had little money to spend on trivial things. Although the worth of a dollar was more, in retrospect they were paying the same 'amount' of money as Americans do today. Their entertainment consisted of running around outdoors, playing cards, reading, and listening to the radio. Occasionally they would be able to afford a trip to the theater to see the newest Hollywood picture. "[It] cost a quarter," Jean said, "...the whole deal, [...] it was a wonderful stage show to be seen!" The hard times taught the girls to be thrifty, and when Selleck graduated from high school she gave up the chance of getting a class ring:

> I guess I talked about it because my mom gave me the money and I thought afterwards that 'I don't need that.' So I brought the money back home... because it was needed for other things, and I was old enough to know that.

Brod and Selleck's family was nowhere near as bad off as many others had been. They had lived in a rural area where fruit grew wild and their garden supported them. With their mother baking them bread and their aunt selling them milk for a quarter, Brod and Selleck's family was well fed, compared to families living in crowded cities:

> You would notice some people... their shoes... their clothing... it was pretty bad. And you would feel bad... you'd know they were pretty poor (Brod).

> I don't think our story was very bad compared to other people. [...] If we hadn't lived where we had and had access to all of the home grown food we had, things would have been a lot worse (Selleck)!

The Great Depression did not only affect the monetary aspects of America, but the domestic and social aspects as well. While the low wages and unemployment rates did impact the social aspects, money itself was not necessarily the only issue. Hoovervilles, named after President Herbert Hoover who was in office at the time of the stock market crash, appeared all over the county. They were shantytowns where the poor and homeless could go to find shelter. The homeless also slept under aptly and unfortunately named "Hoover Blankets" – old newspapers ("Great Depression" Britannica 1). People would stand on street corners and sell anything they had, even apples or pencils (Brown 1). Desperation caused families to beg for food. A large percentage of the population immediately withdrew all of their money and tried to keep it safe themselves, hiding it in walls and under their mattresses. As clichéd as it may sound, the Great Depression really did demonstrate the phrase 'desperate times call for desperate measures.'

"We were always taught to be thrifty. Even with water," Jean Selleck said matter-of-factly, "We had a bad well." Selleck and Brod's family learned to be awfully careful with their resources. Because of their bad well, their father eventually decided that they needed to have a cistern. Their cistern was a system of getting rainwater gathered outside of their house into their house and to the places it was needed, such as toilets and sinks. They also used every drop of water as efficiently as possible; "When it came to washing dishes," Selleck said, "if we had a pot of corn on the cob, we'd use that to wash the dishes – and then we'd rinse them of course". Their mother also made their clothes from patterns and taught them how to do it as well. They were lucky enough to have a garden and other sources of food, so that was never an especially large concern. The domestic problems caused by the Great Depression didn't really affect Selleck and Brod's lives as it did the majority of the population.

Prior to the Great Depression, the Federal Reserve System had been established in 1914, and was used in an "effort to eliminate periodic financial panics" (Thorkelson 345). It was meant to be a source of cash from which banks experiencing difficulties could borrow, but during the Great Depression the need was not for money, but for an increase of consumer confidence in the market economy (Thorkelson 345). "Banking Holidays" were also used in effort to reduce the risk of panic induced by banks' inability to pay off all of the public's deposits (Thorkelson 345). When Roosevelt became President, he created the "New Deal", a collection of legislation, acts, and committees, all for the purpose of getting America back on track. It encompassed 2 phases: "the first attempted to provide service and recovery through programs of agricultural and business regulation, inflation, price stabilization, and public works", and "the second phase... while continuing with relief and recovery measures, provided for social and economic legislation to benefit the mass of working people" ("New Deal"1919). A few of the programs that were involved with "The New Deal" included the Social Security System, the National Youth Administration and Work Projects Association, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, and various acts including the Trade Agreements Act, and the National Housing Act. Selleck and Brod's family was extremely grateful to Roosevelt and his plan because they happened to have had worries about losing the house at one time. Selleck described the situation:

> The FHA, Federal Housing Administration was created in order for people to be helped by the government, and instead of the bank coming and telling you to get out, you could fall back on the government until you got it paid off. And that's what happened, it was a very big break because I think our parents were very afraid they were going to lose the house and they didn't know what they would do. I think that's one of the reasons they liked FDR."

The "New Deal" was incredibly helpful in easing the pain of the Great Depression, but it never really ended until World War II began and created more job opportunities (Thorkelson 346).

The Great Depression finally ended, to the gratitude and relief of all American citizens. Today we have the luxury of examining files of facts and statistics on the amount of money lost, and the rate of unemployment, but in reality, the only way it can truly be examined is by looking at it through the eyes of the everyday person. While some people were lucky enough to escape the major blows it dealt, the Great Depression was probably the worst hammer that had ever fallen on America's economy. It makes sense that elementary school teachers would only concentrate on the Great Depression, considering its severity and importance. By examining the effects the Great Depression had on the common citizen, one can evaluate the true impact that it had on America.

Dear David and Elizabeth,

Lest I forget, David, the mention of Elizabeth's Gilbert ancestors yesterday rang a bell!

May 1981 I received a letter from Nick Hornyak 3123 Northwest 40th Street, Des Moines, Iowa. 50310. His ancestry from his ~~Aun~~ Mary Anne Curry's death certificate:

Jane Sill m. Andrew Curry
dau. ~~Mary~~ Anne[2] b. 1827 Pa. d. 29 Feb. 1888 Brown Co, Ind.
m. Johnson Gilbert
ch. William Andrew Gilbert (1850-)
~~Ma~~
Margeret Gilbert m. John S. Barnes (1859-)

Nancy J. Gilbert (1859-1879)

After collecting and photocopying much Sill data for you I really don't have time to write a letter.

I would appreciate receiving your lineage on your Sill family, Elizabeth. I might be able to identify a surname. Or any other pertinent data might be useful.

Sincerely,
Mary Ellen (Sill) Lucas

Dear Mary Ellen,

Thank you for your note of June 27 with all the enclosures on your Gill ancestors and also for the information about the Gilberts of Brown County, Indiana.

We are in the midst of preparations for a long trip East, so I won't be able to go through all this material and incorporate it into my records until after we return home.

We did hear from David Riker of Mechanicsburg, Pa., as I think I told you on the phone. I have since written to him and have sent him the first twelve pages of Jane Penny Martin's family history.

Briefly, in answer to your request, Elizabeth's descent from William Gill is as follows:

William Gill (b. 1741) m. Patty Brady
Jane Gill (b. 1788) m. James Penny (b. 1784)
William Penny (b. 1811) m. Elizabeth Gilbert (b. 1819)
Josephine Penny (b. 1855) m. Frank Plumb (b. 1852)
Helen Irene Plumb (b. 1877) m. Clark Edward Kendall (b. 1870)
Elizabeth Helen Kendall (b. 1907) m. David Edward Hitchcock (b. 1904)

This is all I have time for now, but we hope to be in touch with you again later this summer.

Yours sincerely,
Dorothy Elizabeth Hitchcock

From N.J. State Library at Trenton: John Sills, Gloucester Co. N.J. Militia 1776 and 1777, first a private, later a lieutenant. Was this John the father of the 1770 John Sill? Most probably because of the SAR marker on the 1770 John Sill's grave site.

Note the given name, Israel Taylor: The 1637 Cambridge Sills intermarried with the Lords, who intermarried with the Taylors. "Lord and Taylor, fine woolens – Phila. + N.Y.C." Many Lord families are found to be neighbors of the Gloucester Co. Sills.

The 1637 Cambridge, Mass. John Sill had a descendant, Edward Oswell Sill, grandson of sea captain, Richard Sill, who sailed from Boston to Barbadoes and other foreign ports.

Another descendant of this 1637 John Sill, Moses Sill, lived in Bucks Co. Pa for some [early 1800's] years before returning to N.Y. state.

Virkus' Compendium of American Gen. Vol I, p. 550 gives this Phila. Sill ancestry as colonial back to Edward b. 1667 and m. 1690 to Margaret Atkinson [Did Joseph Sill b. 1725 and wife, Mary Barnes, return to Eng. (Cumberland) as loyalists preceding Am. Rev.?]

James Sill II, ~~oldest~~? son of James (ca 1700–1774) and Ann (Baker) Sill (1703–1796) married Sarah Sill, dau. of a Richard Sill. [Could this be the Richard Sill (1691–1729) married to Maria Jefferson?]

Thelma Pusey ~~Hay~~, Elkins Park, Pa. descendant of James Sill II, has in her possession her grandfather's diary telling of his attendance at the funeral of Joseph Todhunter Sill, 2-20-1868, aged 41 yrs. This Joseph T. Sill was oldest son, born 1826 to Joseph b. England, 1801, who married Jane Todhunter, 1825, in Philadelphia.

[Were the Chester/Delaware Co., Pa. Sills cousins of the Phila. Sills who supposedly didn't arrive in Pa. until 1825?] Were the Phila. Sills early Pa colonists who, as loyalists, returned to England (Cumberland) in the pre-Revolutionary era? The 1801 Joseph arrived in Phila. about 1824 ~~or~~ 1825 from London, but Sylvester had lived in Cumberland, in the north of England [That is also near to where the Mass/Conn Sills were from. (Newcastle on the Tyne)]

The main reason I am writing is because I did check out your Sill name at the Maryland Historical Society. They have a Norris Harris Church Register card file. It is not the end of of church records, but I did find one Sill listed as follows:

Sill, Joseph m Elizabeth
SON - Joseph b. 19 Mar. 1711
St. Paul's Parish, Kent Co., Md.
Vol. 11, p. 324

This is probably a relative, but there doesn't seem to any direct connection from your chart. I will see what else I can find when I go back to the Hall of Records. I have to look through some of their church records for some of my Pribbles, so will check the Sills too! as well as the wills which you have listed. ie # 116 p. 42 "Carolina Cradle" by Ramsey

Could the above Joseph and Elizabeth be parents of my James Sill, ca 1708 - 1774 whose son, Joseph, m. Martha Elliot 1744 at Christ Church, Phila? Could not they also be ancestors to the 1774 Joseph Sill who m. Elizabeth Ford in the Eng. Episc. Church, Chester, Pa. [Later called St. Paul's Episc] See below

Jan. 19, 1982

I also got a chance to check those Sill listings you mentioned in the Maryland Calendar of Wills. There were three listed and all three listed were simply testators:

Carter, William	Kent Co.	22 Mar 1736	Vol 7
Ann Sill, Test.		22 May 1736 Prob.	p. 176
Wetherell, George	Kent Co.	25 Apr 1743 Prob.	Vol 8
Joseph Sill, Test.		21 Mar 1743	p. 228
Davis, George	Kent Co.	21 Jan 1729	Vol 6
Joseph Sill, Test.		11 Jul 1729 Prob.	p. 124

At least it shows that there were Sills in Kent Co. in the early 1700's and it agrees with the birth record for Joseph b. 1711, and shows they were there until at least 1743. There are no Sill Wills listed at the Hall of Records however.

to a corner hickory thence east 320 poles to a corner white oak thence north 320 poles to a corner hickory thence west 320 poles to the beginning . . ."[113] It was common practice on the frontier for important creeks to bear the name of the first man to settle upon them. As has already been noted, Thomas Gillespie, "the first settler west of the Yadkin River," resided on a stream known as Sill's Creek. Moreover, a certain Bullock[114] lived nearby before the summer of 1751. Yet, the creek bore the name of neither Gillespie nor Bullock, indicating the presence of a man named Sill at a very early date, probably 1748. Rowan County court records show that John Sill was living there in 1753 and 1755,[115] and it was unquestionably he for whom the creek was named. Much the same logic may reasonably be applied in the case of James Marlin.

The Sill family was in Kent County, Maryland, as early as 1711 and in Chester County, Pennsylvania, by 1723.[116] John Sill appears to have left Edgmont township, Chester County, in 1747 and to have proceeded directly to North Carolina.[117]

Marlin, like Sill, probably moved west from Chester County, where Alexander and John Marlin obtained land warrants in 1736 and 1738.[118] A James Marlin was in St. Marys County, Maryland, in 1707,[119] and the family may have originated there.

written in 1745, mentions his daughter Catherine, the wife of Thomas Bell, and daughter Jennet, the wife of John Holmes.[120] The Bells originated before 1720 in Cecil or Talbot County, Maryland,[121] whence many of them removed to Philadelphia County sometime before 1739.[122] Accompanied by many of his kin, Thomas Bell removed to the Shenandoah Valley in 1741 or 1742,[123] and thence to Carolina.

The family of John Holmes, Bell's brother-in-law, was evidently in Lower Dublin township, Philadelphia County, between 1734 and 1741.[124] Holmes himself moved on to Prince Georges County in 1742[125] and proceeded from there to the Shenandoah Valley.[126] Holmes was a man of considerable prominence, for he served as constable of Augusta County in 1747 and was appointed justice of the peace for Anson County in September of the following year.[127]

Bell settled on Marlin's Creek two miles south of James Cathey.[128] Holmes' land was four miles to the northwest adjoining Thomas Gillespie on Sill's Creek.[129]

Felix and John Kennedy (or Canaday), probably from Kent County, Maryland,[130] entered the Shenandoah Valley prior to 1744.[131] Eleven years later, both were living in the Waxhaw settlement on the border between North and South Carolina,

Dear Mary Ellen,

I'm sorry to be so late in responding to your telephone conversation of several weeks ago. As I told you over the phone, at that time I was deeply involved in going over material about the Pine family of Devonshire in England, from which I am descended. I had to coordinate considerable information from a book about the Pines with information from one of my correspondents in England before I could write to him. Then, of course, Christmas preparations intervened.

In the meantime I have Xeroxed the sheets of Hill and Penney information that David Riker sent us last summer. I know you want to see this, so I am sending it on now, even though I have not had an opportunity to copy some of Jesse Penney Martin's typewritten history of the John Penney Family. Later I will do that and send it to you.

Elizabeth and I hope that you had a very good Christmas season and that you will have a prosperous 1983.

Yours sincerely,

David Wilbridge

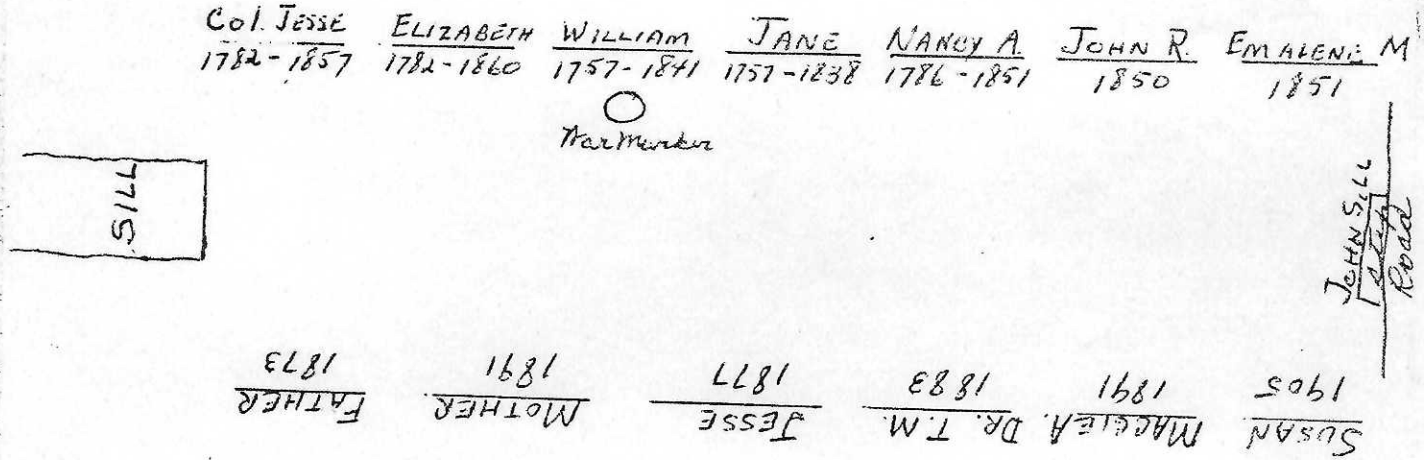
Dear Mr. Riker,

Last year you wrote to me in answer to an ad I had placed in the Genealogical Helper concerning my Stewart and Sill relatives. Since that time I have been able to trace the Stewart line to my immigrant ancestor but have made little progress concerning Susannah Sill.

However, on a recent trip to Pittsburgh, my husband and I visited the McKeesport Cemetery and found the graves of William and Jane Sill, some of their children and grandchildren. Perhaps you have already visited this particular lot, but in the event that you haven't, I thought that you might be interested in knowing what we found. The lot is in the name of John Sill and has a tall marker at the back of the lot with 7 smaller markers on one side and 6 on the other as shown below.



Do you know whether William Sill (1757-1841) had any brothers? It is possible that my Susannah could be related in this way since I did find that she married Samuel Stewart in Butler County, Penna., before moving to Pittsburgh. I can't figure out any other way to relate her unless William and Jane had lots more children than you show. My father ~~xxxx~~ claimed that these Sills were relatives but he wasn't able to tell me anything more than that. Hope the above was of interest to you.

Sincerely,

Rosemary Thomas

Dear Sirs:

We visited your cemetery last summer and found a large Hill family lot in the about 18 markers, William Hill (1757-1841) is Mrs. Witheridge's great-great-great grandfather.

We should like to have a copy of all the information on each of the Hill record cards in your file, whether in this lot or buried elsewhere in the cemetery.

Enclosed is a $5.00 check to pay for copying this information and a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Thank you very much for your kindness.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Dear Friends:

A number of my wife's ancestors, notably Hills and Ramseys, were members of the First Presbyterian Church of McKeesport in the 18th and 19th centuries. We are hoping that this is the church that sometimes that early one.

If there is a history of the First Presbyterian Church that is still available, we should like to purchase one. If there is one that is out of print we should like to have the title and author, so we could try to borrow it on inter-library loan.

Enclosed is a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. Thank you very much for your assistance.

Yours sincerely,

Date of Death: Jan. 26, 1943
Place of Death: Pittsburgh
Cause of Death: Coronary Occlusion
Plate of Inter: Lot #31, Sec. E
Age: 81 years

As you can see, the old records are sometimes incomplete. Those marked "Re-interred" were moved from the old Ninth Avenue Cemetery on the date stated.

I hope I have answered all your questions. If I can be of further service to you in this matter, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Wendy Dulaney

Dear Sir or Madame:

A distant relative of my wife, Col. Jesse Hill, died in McKeesport on Nov. 30, 1857. Do you have a file of early McKeesport newspapers? If so, we should greatly appreciate receiving a copy of an obituary of Col. Hill.

We should also be grateful for any other biographical material you might have regarding Col. Hill.

Enclosed is a check for $2.00 to cover the cost of copying any information you can find. Also a stamped, self-addressed reply envelope. Thank you for your kind assistance.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Mrs. Mary Balaskey
McKeesport - Versailles Cemetery
1006 Fifth Avenue
McKeesport, Pa. 15132

Dear Mrs. Balaskey:

Thank you very much for your letter of Jan. 17 listing the information on the Hill record cards in your file. This has given us considerable new information, & we appreciate your careful work.

Now we should like some further information on the Col Hill Suzanna Cemetery from which some of the bodies were re-interred.

1. Were all the graves removed from that cemetery, and if so, at what date?

2. Where should we go to try to find any old records of that cemetery that may be in existence?

Any leads on information about that cemetery would be greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,
David E. Witheridge

Sorry, we do not keep our newspapers more than three years so we cannot help with the obituary you requested.

We searched the early history of McKeesport and found only one paragraph which mentioned Jesse Sill -

McKeesport and the township of Versailles furnished a showing for the war of 1812. Among those taking part in the conflict were Col. William Laughead, Fauntley Muse, Major William Caven and Jesse Sill.

The above information was taken from:

"The First One Hundred Years of McKeesport" compiled and prepared by Walter S. Abbott and William E. Harrison published by the Press of McKeesport Times, McKeesport, Pa. in 1894.

Dear Rev. Witheridge:

As far as I know all the records of the interments from the old Ninth Avenue Cemetery went with the burials to the new location. The only suggestion I have would be to write to the City of McKeesport and see if they have any further information.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

THE THOMPSON FAMILY.

SINCE Saratoga's early days, long before it became a county, the Thompson family has been identified with its history. From sturdy Scotch ancestry, courageous, intelligent and upright, they had inherited qualities valuable alike to pioneers and the land of their adoption. Never seeking office, believing always that "the office should seek the man," four generations have held responsible offices in the county. Never forgetting that "a public office is a public trust," they conscientiously performed the duties of their positions, regardless of any sacrifice of popular favor or private interest. Their ancestors were among those Scotch families who early in the seventeenth century left Argyleshire and settled in Ireland in the Province of Ulster.

King James I who held the millions acres of land, confiscated after a rising of his rebellious Irish subjects, offered tempting inducements to these Scotch Presbyterians to migrate, hoping to promote peace and order by introducing a law-abiding element. A company from London had rebuilt the ancient city of Derry, destroyed by war, and called it Londonderry, to which Londonderry, New Hampshire, owes its name.

The migration from Scotland began in 1612, and later the colony had an accession of those determined Scotch Covenanters who, during the reign of James II, suffered brutal persecution from Claverhouse.

Unhappily the peace and religious liberty they hoped for was not to be found in Ulster. They were undaunted by the frequent attacks of their turbulent Irish neighbors and fought heroically in defense of Londonderry during the famous siege of 1689, but when, after several generations, they still found themselves not in accord with the neighboring Catholics, and deprived of their civil and religious rights by the arbitrary laws and exactions in favor of the Established Church of England, they resolved to seek in America a refuge from oppression.

A memorial dated March 26, 1718, and signed by the leading men of this Scotch colony, was sent to Governor Shute of New Hampshire by "our trusty and well beloved Friend, the Reverend William Boyd," whom "we doe commissionate and appoint" to express "our hearty inclination to transport ourselves to that very excellent and renowned Plantation upon our obtaining from his Excellency suitable encouragement." Among the signers were James, Robert, William and John Thompson. Nine subscribers were "ministers of the Gospel." Three others were "graduates of the University in Scotland." This document is still preserved. Naturally, Governor Shute sent every encouragement to such very desirable immigrants, who as soon as possible converted their property into money and set sail.

On August 4th of the same year five ships arrived in Boston Harbor bringing a band of pilgrims to whose indomitable spirit, intelligent and high principle America owes more of her prosperity and fine traits of national character than can ever be estimated. They were of a race quite distinct from the English Puritans.

From Boston, parties (always under the leadership of their beloved ministers) sought homes in various places. The Thompsons helped to found the new Londonderry, and afterwards, with others, removed to Litchfield where another settlement was formed.

In 1763 peace between England and France was declared. The Colony of New York, relieved of the danger from the cruel Indian allies of the French, offered advantages.

General Schuyler used his influence to attract desirable neighbors. Stillwater was between his two homes. In that year, to Stillwater in the Saratoga Patent came several families who became prominent in that locality and whose descendants still live there. New homes were made, and a house of worship, the "Yellow Meeting House," built as soon as possible. The Thompson family was one of the first to arrive. One of its members—a boy of fourteen—was destined to take an active part in the development of the new country, then not far from a wilderness. John Thompson's father, after establishing his family in a comfortable home, and securing to his son the best educational advantages within reach, died before the guns of an invading army disturbed the the peace of Stillwater. His son John, trained to a strong sense of duty as a citizen, bore his part manfully in the stirring events which followed. At an early age he married Fanny MacFarland, also of Scotch descent, whose ancestors came with his own to America. He took her to the Stillwater house, where they reared a family of seven children, teaching them "to fear God, love their country and help their neighbors." On this pleasant home farm they acquired the love of nature and agriculture which not one of them ever lost.

But the exigencies of the times took the young husband and father often away from his family. He was too ardent a patriot to remain inactive during the Revolutionary war, and was made captain of the company in which he and some of the neighbors enlisted. Fortunately he was spared to serve his country in times of peace. In 1788 when Stillwater township was organized, he was appointed one of its first justices. In that year and in 1789 he was a member of the State Assembly.

In 1791, when Saratoga took its place as a county, Governor Clinton appointed John Thompson "First Judge," which office he held for eighteen years until 1809 when he reached the age of sixty, the limit fixed by law. All contemporary testimony and records prove that he was an upright, fearless and impartial judge. Although the study of law had not been included in his education, he was so well informed, his intelligence so keen and quick and his judgment so sound that no fault could be found with his rulings. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1801, called to review the laws of the State, and was elected as a representative to the Sixth, Tenth and Eleventh Congresses. His letters to his son James during these sessions furnish most interesting reading now, though yellow with nearly a century's age. They throw light on the inner working of parties not only in Philadelphia and Washington but also in Saratoga county. While the father took pains to keep the son well informed on all subjects of national interest, he received from his son constant reports of affairs at home.

In December, 1799, he reaches Philadelphia "at 10 o'clock at night after a tiresome journey from New York by stage." While in New York he had "conversed with Colonel Burr and other influential men," and incidentally brought some important business to the young lawyer in Milton.

This man of direct methods chafes at schemes, delays and wasted time. "Little else is done but meeting and adjourning."

In February, 1800, he sends a paper containing General Washington's will "which is thought to be a masterly production. When you have perused it to your satisfaction, I wish you to hand it to Child, as it may help to fill his paper which may be an object to him." No telegrams and daily papers in those days! In April, he writes, "I am very sorry to hear from Judge Palmer that a division is likely to take place which may injure the Republican interest in our county. There ought to be some arrangement made to consolidate the interests of Washington and Saratoga counties. I had rather retire in favor of Colonel Thomas than to have the Republican[1] interest broken," but he leaves all to the judgment of his son who is "on the spot." Communication was very slow then. He adds, "I expect to go to Seneca Lake soon after my return and shall need a good, able saddle horse. As we have none fit for that purpose, I wish you to call on Michael Dunning. If he can furnish one, I will allow him a reasonable sum on his note, but do not engage one until I see it." He could trust the judgment of this son of twenty-four in regard to such minor matters as his business and political career, but horse flesh is another affair, especially a man's own saddle horse! In November, 1800, the seat of government had been changed to Washington and it is found "difficult to procure suitable lodgings as the city is but thinly settled."

One letter, February 17, 1801, is jubilant! "This day at one o'clock the speaker declared that Thomas Jefferson was duly elected President of the United States." Judge Thompson had greatly feared the success of Colonel Burr's machinations.

In October, 1807, he reaches Washington "after a tedious journey by land and water." In 1812 he returned to Stillwater and private life. His last years were shadowed by illness, but cheered by the devoted care of his family. He died in 1823 in his seventy-fifth year.

He had the great satisfaction of seeing his children established in prosperity, leading useful and honored lives. His son James filled the father's former office as first judge of the county. Dr. Nathan Thompson was a much respected physician in Galway, William a prominent lawyer of Ovid, N. Y., and Charles in active business at Seneca Falls. One daughter had married Dr. Aaron Gregory of Milton and the other Dr. Sears of Stillwater. Both physicians were eminent not only for skill, but high character. Those "times that tried men's souls" severely tested women's courage. When Mrs. Schuyler was applying the torch to her Saratoga wheat-fields—to keep the grain from the British troops (a hard alternative for such a thrifty housewife) Mrs. Thompson at Stillwater was trying to shield her little family from the coming storm of war—almost at her door, her husband exposed to its fury.

[1] The Republicans of that time were Jeffersonian Democrats.

When the battle of Bemis Heights began to rage, she was placed in an ox cart with her babe of three days, and a son not two years old, and taken from home for safety. A heavy rain impeded their progress, and these fugitives spent the night under the cart for lack of better shelter. By a strange coincidence, at that very time another young mother had left in alarm the future home of that little boy in the cart. On the Middle Line farm in Milton known later as "the Judge Thompson place," then lived Josiah Tallmadge, grandfather of Nathaniel Mann. His wife was terrified by reports of Hessian cruelties and it was found best for her to go to her mother in Dutchess county. The husband must stay to protect the property, so this "woman of '76" set out on a faithful horse carrying with her a child of two years. Alone, she made her way through that thinly settled country to her old home in Dutchess county, a journey of at least several days.

When the British and Hessians had been routed, her husband sent her assurance that Saratoga was now free from "war's alarms." Again she mounted her trusty steed which brought his mistress safely back—this time with two children—one a young babe.

Born and bred amid these stirring scenes, James Thompson naturally took a deep interest in the events which were making the history of his native county. Under his father's influence and training he could but feel a deep sense of responsibility for its welfare, and his duty as one of its citizens. He finished the course of study at the Scenectady Academy the year before it developed into Union College. Several of his classmates were from his own county, one—Joseph Sweetman of Charlton—was Union's first graduate.

Local interests were very strong when people lived, studied, labored, formed friendships and died near the place of their birth.

After graduating at Schenectady James Thompson began the study of law. Judge Emott was then the shining legal light of the county. He had married a daughter of Judge Palmer, and lived at the Palmer home on the Middle Line road where it forks to Burnt Hills and Ballston lake. The stately mansion now standing there was built—after a destructive fire—by Rev. Dr. Davis, Judge Emott's son-in-law. The judge's office was near by. There James Thompson, Samuel Young, Samuel Cook, Daniel L. Van Antwerp and Levi H. Palmer pursued their studies together. All were afterwards prominent in county affairs, the first two became first judges.

James Thompson was admitted to the bar soon after attaining his majority. When his father (who had spared no pains or expense in his son's education) presented him with a good horse, saddle and saddlebags, a gold watch and a hundred dollars, the son felt himself generously supplied for the battle of life. So he was—in view of the resources and needs of the time and place. He set out to explore and decide upon a good location for the practice of his profession. Dr. Gregory induced him to open an office next his own, midway between Milton Hill and Milton Centre.

His professional success was remarkable. Clients came to him at once. Within two years this young man—not yet twenty-five—had established a high reputation and a lucrative practice. The Middle Line road was then the chief avenue for the business of the county, and a highroad between Albany and Canada. Upon it were the finest residences of the vicinity. Travelers found well kept "taverns" at every few miles.

At Milton Hill were two churches, an academy, a good "tavern," several shops, etc. A much busier place than "Ballstown Springs," which was then only an embryo watering place.

The court house was at "Court House Hill." Lawyers had homes and offices for several miles up and down the road. A farm was then essential to a comfortable living. These conditions were all changed when Ballston Spa became the county seat in 1819.

In 1802 James Thompson married a daughter of Abel Whalen, one of the early and influential residents of Milton. She was the mother of his three elder children. He bought the farm on the Middle Line road formerly called "the Judge Thompson place," in later years "Rose Hill farm." He built first his office, and then from its earnings (never a dollar of debt) the house in which he lived and died and which is still the home of one of his children. There are no such records as old letters! Fortunately Judge Thompson kept many. They now remain to show what his life and reputation were. Clients from all parts of the county asked his counsel. Strangers at a distance confided important business to him when he was still quite young. Grateful appreciation is constantly expressed for his fidelity to the interests of his clients. Poor debtors, in prison, seek and get help from him. Widows and orphans thank and bless him for saving their homes. His sympathy and help were counted upon by all sorts and conditions of men in all affairs of life. Business began to take him to Troy, Albany, New York and other large cities. Social by nature, as his circle of friends enlarged, his home became a gathering place for many eminent and interesting people. His hospitality was unbounded, especially to the unfortunate. The greater the need, the warmer the welcome. His advice was much sought in public affairs. His interest in politics did not prevent his refusing several nominations. He was appointed first judge of Common Pleas in 1818, which office he held for fifteen years.

He respected his office and scrupulously maintained its dignity for which his own character and bearing eminently fitted him. Few men had such personal influence. His intellectual power, energy and firm principles gave him weight in the community. His tastes and habits were scholarly. When he was to charge a jury, young lawyers came for a lesson in clear and forcible diction. He has been called "the father of the Saratoga county bar." No better wish can be made for it than that it may prove worthy of such parentage. When his judicial career closed in 1833, he allowed himself comparative rest, but his active interest in public affairs and the welfare of all about him never ceased, especially his fatherly interest in the careers and fortunes of younger men. He had married in 1831 a daughter of Daniel Stansbury of New York city, a woman whose many fine qualities, cultivated mind and tastes made his home very attractive. She shared his interests, and together they were a blessing to their neighborhood. Judge Thompson's sudden death in 1845 was a shock and grief to the community. Although he had reached the age of seventy, his vigor of mind and body was unimpaired. Every possible tribute of respect was paid to his memory by his legal associates and the public, and the sorrow of friends and neighbors was strikingly shown. He left a widow with three young children, beside his elder sons and daughter. His eldest son, George had entered into business at Ballston Spa where he died in 1871. He, too, shunned rather than sought office but was county treasurer from 1831 to 1844.

Judge Thompson's second son, John Whalen Thompson, born December 19, 1808, inherited the mental power of his father and grandfather. His education was carefully supervised by his father. Milton Hill Academy afforded good training for young students, and later he was sent to the Charlton Academy and the famous Lansingburg Academy to complete his preparation for college. He graduated with honor at Union College in 1827. His roommate in college was the Hon. Preston King of St. Lawrence county, and there existed between the two men an intimate and lifelong friendship. Law being the family profession, he began his studies in his uncle William Thompson's office at Ovid, N. Y., and finished in the office of Judge Stevens at Seneca Falls. In 1831 he was admitted an attorney of the Supreme Court and began practice in Ballston Spa, forming soon afterward a partnership with Hon. Anson Brown. In May, 1834, Governor Marcy appointed John W. Thompson—though very young for the office—surrogate of Saratoga county, and that position he held until 1846, when the new constitution took effect. The recorded testimony of that time shows that every duty of this responsible office was performed with scrupulous fidelity, intelligent judgment, and to the general satisfaction. Mr. Thompson's unusual ability in financial affairs led him early to take a deep interest in the organization of the Ballston Spa Bank, of which he was one of the original incorporators in 1858. There was then no other bank within convenient distance, and it was a great advantage to the village. His reputation for uncompromising integrity and conservative management were of great advantage to the bank. In 1856 Mr. Thompson was made president of the bank, and thereafter devoted himself to its care and management until his death. He rendered it a very successful and sound institution. He was fully recognized by all the old bank presidents of this section as an able financier, his knowledge of finance embracing both its minutiæ and its more abstruse and broader principles. In several instances, through correspondence with senators, his ideas were adopted and utilized by Congress in the financial legislation following the Civil war.

When the building of the Saratoga and Whitehall Railroad was considered a hazardous enterprise, Mr. Thompson regarded it differently, and by loaning his money and using his efforts did much to accomplish its success.

Reserved and retiring by nature, John W. Thompson avoided rather than courted prominence in public affairs. Deeply interested in politics, he preferred to quietly exercise his influence rather than actively enter the field. Only once, when the town needed him for supervisor, did he consent to taking a nomination. He served one term. With all his love of retirement and aversion to seeking precedence, he had too great mental activity and interest in the welfare of his native county to avoid taking an important place in its affairs. No citizen was more relied upon for sound advice in all public and private enterprises, and many a luckless struggler in a sea of financial difficulties was brought into safe harbor by his wise counsel and practical assistance. His dislike of ostentation and display was great. The accumulation of wealth never tempted him to alter his simple mode of life.

He married, early in life, a daughter of Joel Lee, who, after a life of devotion to her family and her church, died in 1871. John W. Thompson lived to the age of eighty-four and died on June 28, 1892, leaving three sons and one daughter. His eldest son, George Lee Thompson, succeeded his father as president of the Ballston Spa Bank, and like him took great interest in politics while refusing to hold office, except that of supervisor, which he filled for several terms. Ill health compelled him to withdraw from active life for some time before his death, which occurred on December 29, 1895, in his sixty-first year. Of a very generous nature, and having inherited ample means, he found his chief happiness in giving pleasure to all about him. The grateful affection of his fellow townsmen solaced his last years of illness, and was strongly manifested at his death. He left a widow and three children.

When his sister, Alice Thompson, died in Europe in 1898, a noble life ended. She had "done good by stealth" in such large measure that only her death revealed its extent. Her care for her native village and its needs was shown by her bequests.

John W. Thompson's two younger sons, Samuel and Frank, both live at the old homestead. Samuel Thompson served one term as supervisor.

REUBEN HYDE WALWORTH.

In the history and development of the judiciary of the State of New York, Chancellor Walworth[1] stands pre-eminent as an authority in equity law; and by his wisdom and fairness, his profound knowledge, and his force of character, he marks an epoch in the legal history of the State, and is entitled to that distinction which common usage has attached to this term. To praise him, we call him the last of the chancellors, as if, as Plutarch said of another, this Empire State has produced no other great equity jurist since that time. We may affirm this as true, and say, also, that possibly the dignity of the judiciary has suffered some loss in consequence of the absorption of the equity practice into the the courts formerly limited to common and statute law.

The history of the Walworth family is full of interest, on both the paternal and maternal sides. The chancellor's great-grandfather, William Walworth, came from England with Governor Winthrop of Connecticut, at his request, about 1680, to make a model farm and show the colonists English methods. Walworth settled on Fisher's Island, near New London, where he succeeded with the model farm, and had a handsome residence; and, as stated in his will, he had much table silver and other valuables. In the latter part of his life the pirates, then infesting the eastern shore of Long Island, caused so many alarms at Fisher's Island, that Walworth bought farms at Groton and other places in that vicinity, and moved his family to the mainland. He was suits, and she had similar dealings with Newnham Priory[1]—all with reference to the advowsons of churches. At another time there were difficulties with St. Alban's Abbey.[2] Matthew Paris[3] relates the story of the abbess of Elstow and the sword: how, at the time of the pulling down of St. Paul's church by Fawkes de Bréauté, she took the sword out of the hand of the image of St. Paul in her own church, and declared that she would not restore it until he avenged himself upon the common enemy. At the beginning of the fourteenth century, in the year 1306, a rather interesting suit was begun between the abbess at that time, Clemence de Balliol, and the brethren of St. Leonard's Hospital.[4] The latter had been erecting new buildings on either side of the pathway which led from Elstow to Bedford, and obtained permission in consequence to close it, and make another which should pass round instead of through the hospital. This the abbess objected to, on the ground that the old way was more direct and convenient for her people. The two paths were carefully measured, and it was decided, against the abbess, that the new way was not appreciably longer than the old. But she was still dissatisfied, and the brethren seem to have been hindered from carrying out their plans for another two years, when they obtained letters patent from the king for the closing of the path.

In 1337 Elizabeth Morteyn, who was then abbess, claimed the 'third penny' from the town of Bedford, in virtue of an alleged grant from Malcolm (IV.), King of Scotland; the case was carried before Parliament, and the burgesses were successful in proving that Malcolm never had any lordship in the town.[5] Six years earlier a previous abbess was summoned to show by what title she claimed view of frankpledge and 'judicialia' in Elstow, Wilshampstead, Maulden, and Kempston: she was obliged to confess that her administration had been lax, and could only secure her rights by the payment of a fine.[6] It was only a short time after this that the parish church of Elstow, as well as the tithes of both rectories, were finally appropriated by the monastery, under the sanction of Bishop Bek; and 'to avoid the inconvenience caused by the chanting of psalms in the nave of the monastery,' the chapel of St. Helen, which stood in the churchyard, was to serve in future as a parish church.[7] From this time forward little is known of the external history of the house, except that it was much patronised by seculars, whom the bishops never could succeed in keeping out for any length of time. Not long before the dissolution an attendant of Elizabeth of York, wife of Henry VII., was professed there.[8]

This house was constantly visited by the Bishops of Lincoln; and the records of their injunctions from time to time show us something of its internal history. The first notice of this kind is in a letter, dated 24 June 1270, from Bishop Gravesend to Walter Giffard, Archbishop of York.[9] A sister of the latter, Agatha Giffard, was prioress of Elstow at the time, and had been at fault (as had the abbess also) 'through connivance or remissness' in some scandal that had lately occurred. What it was the bishop does not say; only he remarks 'from that house more frequently than from any other false reports of disgraceful acts are brought to us'; and he is evidently putting the case as mildly as he can, so as not to offend the archbishop.

In 1300 the nuns of Elstow, as well as many others, were enjoined to observe the statute De Claustura Monialium of Boniface VIII.[10] This statute was aimed no doubt at Whatever the scandal was, it cost the prioress no serious loss of credit, for in 1280–1 she was very nearly elected abbess (Wigram, Chronicles of the Abbey of Elstow, 79, where the letter of Bishop Oliver Sutton reporting on the election is given in full).

a real abuse; but it imposed upon the nuns a degree of enclosure to which they were not bound by the Benedictine rule, and consequently was difficult to enforce. At Elstow it was probably not obeyed at all; for in 1359 Bishop Gynwell[1] at his visitation reported that there had been 'too much wandering of the nuns out of the monastery.' He had other complaints to make, which show for the first time what was then and afterwards the great snare into which this house fell. The story of Abbess Mabel and the sword of St. Paul shows a right and wholesome interest in the affairs of the church and the world, such as any good religious might take under the common interpretation of the rule of St. Benedict; but as time went on this interest became excessive, and was attended by an inevitable laxity of discipline. From the time of St. Hugh there had been a school in the monastery for children of both sexes;[2] most of the nuns were well born and had friends about the Court who sought various pretexts for visiting and lodging in the monastery. Even if the nuns had wished to prevent these visits, it would not always have been easy; the Papal Letters of the fourteenth century show that noble ladies, even queens, often asked licences from the pope to spend a few nights in a nunnery. And the depreciation of the value of property after the great pestilence made the poorer houses sometimes thankful to accept boarders, like many French convents at the present day. But at Elstow it is to be feared that the nuns were really at fault in this matter; that the spiritual life of the convent was marred by worldliness from first to last.

Bishop Gynwell enjoined that no secular women, except necessary maidservants, should dwell in the convent without special licence;[3] all were to depart within fifteen days on pain of excommunication, because 'by the living together of secular women and nuns, the contemplation of religion is withdrawn, and scandal engendered.' Only quite young children were to be allowed to remain;[4] and there was to be no more laxity or favour shown in the correction of breaches of rule.

[3] In 1350 he had himself granted such a licence to the widow of Sir John Pateshull, to dwell in the monastery with her daughter and maids. One of the brasses still in Elstow church is probably that of a lady who had spent her widowhood as a boarder in the monastery.

Bishop Buckingham issued three different sets of injunctions. In 1379[5] he wrote to the Abbess Anstis to order the removal of all secular persons, men and women, from the precincts of the monastery, as 'dangerous to the purity and spiritual devotion of the religious.' In 1387 he held a regular visitation, and his injunctions, though they do not point to any serious irregularities, are of an interesting character; their aim seems rather to set forth to the nuns their duties in general, and to exhort them to greater fervour, than to correct abuses. There are the usual orders about the singing of the divine office, the administration of the revenues of the convent, the repair of the buildings, the due care of the sick; the nuns are cautioned to avoid scandal by refraining from conversation with all men, both secular and religious, especially the mendicant friars, and their near neighbours, the canons of Caldwell; not to go out without permission, and to return home before sunset; to be careful that they wear the religious habit of their order and the veil, and not to seek such ornaments as fur, or girdles ornamented with silver; to be humble, obedient, charitable, loving one another in the bond of peace; so that at last 'adorned with the fruit of good works, their lamps burning in their hands, they may be worthy to enter into the marriage chamber of the Heavenly Bridegroom unto whose service they have dedicated themselves.'[6] In 1388[7] the bishop only sent a personal admonition to the abbess to be sure and provide a 'fit and secure place' where offenders against the rule might be detained.[8]

Bishop Repingdon visited the monastery at the beginning of the fourteenth century. His injunctions show that no lasting reform had been effected by his predecessors. No secu-

[6] Ibid. 343. In addition to what is given above, the Bishop ordered that the nuns were to speak French among themselves. They were not to talk to the canons of Caldwell 'about the public highways and fields adjoining' under pain of excommunication: which shows that they were in no sense enclosed within the monastery. The last words quoted at the end of the injunctions are a reminder to them of the Office for the Profession of a nun with which they would all be familiar, and would constitute a strong appeal for renewed fervour.

lars male or female above the age of twelve were to be admitted; the nuns were not to go into Bedford or Elstow; only suitable persons were to be professed.[1]

Bishop Grey[2] admonished the nuns to increase their numbers, that the divine office might not be neglected; but none was to be admitted unless she could read and sing, and then only with the consent of the 'greater and wiser' part of the convent. No seculars except young children were to be allowed in the monastery; an apostate nun was to be brought back. This was the last visitation before the well known injunctions of Bishop Longland in 1530.[3] The tone of these makes it impossible to avoid the conclusion that the house had become thoroughly secularised. The ladies had for the most part given up the most distinctive features of their common life; they had forsaken the use of the refectory, and lived more like pensioners in a boarding-house, having their little private 'households,' where they received and ate with their friends. They were accustomed to wear scarlet stomachers, 'voyded shoes' and low-necked dresses like those of secular women, and 'cornered crests' instead of veils. The lady abbess when she walked in procession was followed by a train of servants, and leant upon the arm of one of them. The 'chapelayne,' Dame Katherine Wingate, had been wont to absent herself from matins, and to take her meals in the abbess's buttery with the steward. Nevertheless the bishop evidently thought the case was not past remedy, and it is noteworthy that after all nothing worse than secularity is implied in these injunctions. He reminds them that 'the more secret religious persons be kept from the sight and visage of the world and strangers, the more close and entire their mind and devotion shall be to God'; and so orders a door at least 5 feet high to be erected at the lower end of the choir, so that the nuns might neither see nor be seen by strangers at office time; and the cloister door between the monastery and the church, as well as the outer door towards the court, were to be kept shut as far as possible. There were to be no more 'households' kept except the abbess's, and a 'misericorde' where four or five of the sisters with 'one sad lady of the elder sort,' nominated by the abbess, might take their meals in turn and meet their friends. The rest were to go to the 'fratry.'[4]

How far these injunctions produced any effect it is impossible to say. The house was not mentioned by Layton in the letter[5] in which he records his visit to Bedfordshire. It did not fall under the Act of 1536, and was not surrendered until 26 August 1539.[6] The deed of surrender is still extant; it contains the ordinary formula, the same as that of Wardon and Chicksand, and has no signatures, but only the seal. The pension lists of 1539–40[7] assign £50 to the abbess, Elizabeth Boyvill, and smaller sums to twenty-three nuns besides. If there were so many at this time, we may conclude that the house held perhaps twice as many in the thirteenth century, but there is no record of the original number. The usual officials are named from time to time: the prioress, the sacristan, afterwards called the 'chapelayne,' the chantress. It appears that in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries there were a few lay brothers attached to the house, but it is not clear what was their exact status.[8]

The original endowment of the abbey included the vills of Elstow and Wilshampstead with 5 hides and 1½ virgates in Maulden, and the church of Hitchin in Hertfordshire.[9] Small portions of land in Buckinghamshire, Leicestershire, Gloucestershire and Northampton-

[1] Linc. Epis. Reg., Memo. Repingdon, 231. Rules of diet were also given at this visitation. No money was to be exacted from those seeking admission to the community. Two older nuns were to be responsible for all the money of the convent; the collector of rents was to give an account upon oath twice a year. A sacristan and a precentor were to be chosen from the nuns of good reputation: none convicted of immorality was to be admitted to any office. The sick nuns in the infirmary were to be duly visited, and the rest to sleep in the dormitory.

[4] It should be noted that there is no suggestion of actual immorality at this time, or at any other, except in Bishop Repingdon's injunctions (see above). But on the other hand the recurrence of the same corrections makes it clear that the standard of life in the house had never been high since the thirteenth century, and though there were doubtless always some of the 'sadder sort,' as at the end, yet they were in the minority.

reputation, and his death, 9 May 1641, was regarded by both parties as a calamity. Clarendon describes him as one who 'rather desired to bind up those wounds which were made than to make them wider by entertaining new jealousies between king and people,'[246] as 'a wise man, and of too great and plentiful a portion to wish a subversion of the government,'[247] and 'the greatest person of interest in the popular party.'[248] On the outbreak of hostilities, his son William, who had sat in the Long Parliament and had succeeded to his father's seat in the Lords as fifth earl, took service for the Parliament, and, commanding the reserve of horse at Edgehill, helped to turn a defeat into a drawn battle.[249] In 1643 he went with the Earl of Holland to Oxford, where he was graciously received and pardoned by the king, but got cold welcome from the Royalists.[250] He fought on the king's side at the first battle of Newbury,[251] but returned to London by the end of the year,[252] and after that took no active part in the conflict. His property was sequestered, but the sequestration was taken off in 1644.[253] A more active supporter of the king was the Earl of Cleveland, to whom the success of Cropredy Bridge in 1644 was mainly due;[254] but he was taken prisoner at the second battle of Newbury in the same year,[255] and passed most of his time in prison, with intervals of parole, till the end of 1648.[256] His son, Lord Wentworth, also fought gallantly as a Royalist.[257] Henry, Earl of Peterborough, after some hesitation took the same side, raised a troop, and was wounded at the first battle of Newbury,[258] and he and his brother John took part in the Earl of Holland's rising in 1648.[259] Finally, Lord Capel of Warden Abbey, who had sat in the Long Parliament as member for Hertfordshire, but had been made a peer in August 1641,[260] raised a troop of horse at his own cost. Of his fate something will be said later.

Besides these noblemen, a considerable number of the gentry of Bedfordshire supported the king. William Gery of Bushmead raised a troop of horse, and his brother George was captured at Naseby.[261] The former was one of the delinquents whose estates were decimated in 1655,[262] and in July 1660 his son William petitioned for a commissionership of excise, one claim being that his 'father lost his whole estate by adhering to the late king.'[263] Others who fought for the king or actively supported him were Sir Lewis Dyve,[264] William and Richard Taylor of Clapham, who were both taken prisoners, Spencer Potts of Chalgrave, Thomas Joyce, vicar of Haynes, Sir Francis Crawley of Luton, one of the judges who had decided against Hampden on ship-money; Edward and John Russell, brothers of the Earl of Bedford, Sir William Palmer of Hill (in Warden), the widow and son of John Wingate of Harlington, Sir Peter Osborn of Chicksands, Richard Conquest of Houghton, Robert Spencer of Eaton Socon, young Robert Audley of Northill, and Michael Grigg of Dunstable; while among those who did not take up arms, but declared their sympathies, were Sir George Bynnion of Eaton Socon, Sir Edward Ashton of Wymington, Sir Thomas and they were executed with the Duke of Hamilton 9 March 1648–9. Each met his death bravely, Lord Capel with the words, 'God Almighty, staunch, staunch this issue of blood: this will not do the business, God Almighty, find out another way to do it.'[362]

The earlier years of the Commonwealth appear to have passed quietly in Bedfordshire. Sir Samuel Luke, who was so conspicuous while the actual fighting was going on, disappeared from the leadership at its close. He was a staunch Presbyterian, and on the occasion of the king's stay at Woburn he was seized by a party of soldiers on suspicion that he was raising forces in the county to help the London Presbyterians against the army, 1 August 1647, but was speedily released by Fairfax. He was again under arrest for a time when Colonel Pride so effectively 'purged' Parliament in December 1648. From that time nothing more is heard of him till he reappears in the Convention Parliament in April 1660.[363] The county had two representatives in the assembly known as 'Barebone's Parliament,'[364] and under the 'Instrument of Government' five members were allotted to the county and one to the town of Bedford.[365]

When Cromwell in 1655 divided the country into districts under the rule of 'Major-generals,' Bedfordshire, with Northamptonshire, Rutland, and Huntingdonshire, was allotted to Major Butler,[366] who reported to Thurloe on 19 November that he did not find 'many delinquents in this county whose estates arise so high as to fall under our decimation.'[367] He asked for a decision about the Earl of Bedford and Sir Robert Napier, the latter having been 'sequestered three years together,' and having sat in the Long Parliament 'when he saw which way success was like to go.' Another difficulty concerned Richard Conquest, who had woods to the value of £8,000 or £10,000, 'and yet little or no yearly profit is made of them.'[368] The list of decimations includes sixteen names,[369] and the sums range from Sir Thomas Leigh, of Leighton Buzzard, £135, and Richard Conquest, of Houghton Conquest, esq., £120, to Mr. Audley of Biggleswade, £2 4*s*. 9*d*., and John Russell, of Woburn, esq. (brother of the earl) £1,[370] the total amounting to £686 6*s*. 11*d*. Butler also undertook with the help of his commissioners to discover 'the prophane and idle gentry and others, whose lives are a shame to Christian commonwealth,' such as Goddard Pemberton, 'that was formerly in arms against the Parliament, a very desperate person, having no estate, and living at the rate of four or five hundred a year,' being supported by a Royalist lady of the county. 'I do not think his Highness can be

Holewelle (xi cent.).

The parish of Holwell has an area of 892½ acres, almost the whole of which is arable land.[1] The soil is stiff clay, the subsoil, clay; the principal crops are oats, barley, beans, and peas. The land slopes from a height of 235 ft. above the ordnance datum in the south-west to 170 ft. in the north-east. It has been transferred, since the survey of 1831, from Bedfordshire to Hertfordshire.

The country is open and level, traversed from north to south by the main road from Shefford to Hitchin, and the few houses which form the village stand, together with the church and vicarage, at a little distance to the west of the road. In the south-east corner of the parish is a small group of houses, known as Cadwell, and on the northern boundary is Holwellbury, the only considerable building in the parish, with Old Ramerick Farm at a little distance to the west. This last is apparently but a fragment of a larger building, formerly of some importance.

Two small streams, tributaries of the Hiz, run across the parish from west to east, and the main line of the Great Northern Railway cuts through the eastern side, beyond the line of the main road, the nearest station being at Henlow.

The house at Old Ramerick has an eighteenth-century red brick front, but at the back, and also in one of the barns, there are remains of old stonework.

MANOR

The manor of HOLWELL originated in a charter of King Edgar, bearing date 968, and granting land in Holwell to the abbey of St. Peter of Westminster, which was confirmed in 1066 by Edward the Confessor when the land is described as 6½ hides.[2] At the Domesday Survey in 1086 the abbot of Westminster held a manor of the above extent in Holwell.[3] In the thirteenth century this manor was assessed for scutage at 9 marks yearly,[4] and included 6 hides,[5] and in 1490 Thomas Peyton held it of the abbey by service of £6 yearly,[6] but no further trace has been found of the overlordship, and it is not mentioned in the Valor Ecclesiasticus as belonging to Westminster Abbey.

The earliest lords of Holwell Manor, the Malories, are found settled in Holwell from the twelfth century holding their lands from the abbey of Westminster. A charter of John's reign contains the grant of half a virgate in Holwell from Simon Malory to his nephew Simon son of Robert.[7] Alice Malory, possibly the wife of the younger Simon, made good her claim to half a virgate here in 1228.[8] In 1241 Robert Malory held Holwell, described for the first time as a manor,[9] and a few years later was succeeded by his son John,[10] who justified his claim to Holwell by descent from one Bertram Malory.[11] John Malory held Holwell Manor in 1316,[12] and the family evidently retained the lordship, for in 1357 Simon Francis was holding land in Holwell of John Malory by service of suit of court.[13] Eleanor the daughter of a late John Malory married Sir John

Bernard of Islesham,[14] who in 1464 placed this manor in the hands of trustees,[15] preliminary to settlement on his daughter Margaret who married Thomas Peyton.[16] Thomas Peyton, son of the above Thomas, died in possession of the manor in 1490 and left a brother Robert as his heir.[17] Though there is little documentary evidence, this family appears to have continued to hold Holwell manor, for in 1561 it was in the possession of Thomas Peyton,[18] who in 1564 finally alienated it to Robert Ivory.[19] John Ivory, probably son of Robert, held the manor in 1600[20] and was followed by William Ivory who in 1656 alienated the manor to Thomas Stoneylove.[21] He transferred it in 1673 to George Nodes,[22] by whose son George it was alienated in 1704 to Ralph Wingate and Robert Raworth.[23] This manor subsequently passed to the Foresters, though no record of the transfer has been found, and in 1765 Baldwyn Leighton, nephew of Diana Forester, sold it to John Radcliffe.[24]

He died without issue in 1783, and was succeeded by Mr. Delmé who had married his niece Anne Clarke.[25] The manor then passed to Henry Delmé Radcliffe, their son,[26] who died childless in 1830, and was succeeded by his brother Frederick Peter, whose son Francis Delmé Radcliffe is at the present day lord of the manor.[27]

In the fourteenth century the family of Spigurnel held land in Holwell, of which the first mention is found in 1309 when Henry Spigurnel received a charter of free warren here.[28] In 1386 William son

BENEDICT

1. WILLIAM BENDICT (probably Guillaume Benoit or Benoist), is said to have gone from France through Holland to Nottinghamshire, Eng., about 1550. It is possible that this emigration may have occurred as late as the St. Bartholomew Massacre, 1572. He was born about 1500.

2. WILLIAM BENEDICT, only son, lived in Nottinghamshire.

3. WILLIAM BENEDICT, only son, born 1585; married Ann Hunlocke, died 1618, daughter of Henry and Margaret or Edith Hunlocke of Darbyshire. (Henry Hunlocke of Darbyshire, next to Notts., in his will of 1610 mentions his wife, whose name was either Margaret or Edith, probably one succeeded the other, and his son-in-law William Benedict, Gentleman, and daughter Ann.) This William Benedict later married a widow Bridgum (Bridgeham) with a daughter. He must have died somewhere between the birth of his son, 1617, and the emigration, 1638.

4. LIEUTENANT THOMAS BENEDICT, born about 1617; died in Norwalk early in 1690; married, 1640 Mary Bridgum, daughter of his stepmother. He came to America when he was 21 years old, and was an only son. He lost his mother early and his father married a second time, a widow, Mrs. Bridgum, who had a daughter, Mary Bridgum. When Thomas was of age (1638) he and Mary came to New England in the same vessel and settled in "The Mass. Bay"; shortly after, in 1640, he married Mary Bridgum and moved to Southold, L. I., where his children were born. He then went to Huntington, L. I., lived there June 1656, then moved to Jamaica, L. I. where Thomas, eldest son, married Mary Messenger. He later moved to New Jersey (now Elizabeth), then 1665 to Norwalk, Conn., where he was a deacon of the church.

He was a magistrate at Jamaica, 1663; Lieutenant, December 1663; Commissioner for Jamaica, 1664; was a member of Colonial Convention at Hempstead 1665 by order of Colonial Governor of New York, by authority of the English King; Lieutenant in Captain Byron Newton's Foot Company, April 1665; Deputy for Norwalk to Connecticut Legislature, May 1670, May 1675; on 19 Feb. 1666 was chosen town clerk and selectman (17 times) in Norwalk; in 1669 and 1672 again town clerk; one of committee
